Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 2; Agra and Calcutta, September 28; Madras, September 27.

The old proverb about ill news flying fast was for once belied in the case of the Carnatic. That steamer was wrecked on the 13th September. On the 16th the news was generally known in Egypt; but it was ten days more before the first telegram on the subject reached Bombay. Calcutta indeed had been more fortunate, for a private telegram had been received by the Englishman on the 21st; but as none other followed immediately, it was generally thought to be a mistake, until the telegram of the 26th set all doubt at rest. The sensation caused by the news was very great. On the arrival of the Sumatra with the people saved from the wreck, full particulars of the disaster found their way into the papers. In these accounts there is little if anything that we have not heard before. The Bombay Gazette gives interesting letters from Major Champain, Captain Cole, and other of the passengers; but they merely confirm the stories already published here. Fifteen Europeans and as many natives perished in the wreck. The remainder of the crew and passengers, with very few exceptions, went on to Bombay in the Sumatra. No satisfactory attempt has yet been made to account for the accident or the delay in taking to the boats. After all the time spent in preparations, it seems that the boats left the reef but scantily supplied with food and water. What water they had proved to be quite brackish. One of the drowned, a Mr. Warren, of the Public Works Department, seems to have had a strangely prophetic dream at Alexandria, to the effect that the steamer would be wrecked on a coral reef in the Red Sea. It is curious too that the French steamer Tigre, which left Suez about the same time as the Carnatic, narrowly escaped her companion's fate. She ran upon the Perim reef, and stuck there for several hours. Had she been racing with the Carnatic?

A BILL for introducing into India the new system of weights sanctioned by the Indian Minister is already in course of framing. We are inclined to regret the adoption of the kilogramme instead of the English pound or the Indian seer as the new unit of weight. There is no philosophic reason for preferring one measurement to the other, and there are many practical reasons for retaining a scale of weights familiar alike to Englishmen and natives.

To talk of distress in Rajpootana is but repeating an oft-told tale. Instead of abating it seems to be still increasing, especially throughout Marwar. The locusts are eating up the last hopes of the Marwarrie husbandmen, who are once more emigrating as fast as they can go. Great flights of locusts have also been troubling Sindh. In the North-West the harvest prospects grow more and more favourable.

On his retirement from Indian office Mr. Maine leaves behind him one useful legacy—the European Vagrancy Act, which passed the Viceroy's Council on the 17th September, and the whole of which will become law on next New Year's Day. We have already given a rough sketch of its main features. A few sections, concerning preliminary treatment of existing vagrants, come into force at once. Any "person of European extraction" who seems to be a vagrant may from next January be examined before a police magistrate as to his real position. If the vagrant be an old offender, or if no chance of early employment seems open to him, he shall be forwarded to the work-house, and there detained in strict subjection to workhouse rules. If "after the lapse of a reasonable time" no employment can be found for him, he shall either be at once deported, or let go with certain cautions touching his future conduct and liabilities. If he be offered work and refuse or neglect to take it, he may be brought up and imprisoned for a month. A vagrant seeking for employment may be sent under care of the police to the place where he hopes to find it. If his search prove fruitless after fifteen days, he too must be sent into the workhouse. For every person who, having entered India or left the Indian Army on engagement with any employer or company, becomes a registered vagrant within a year from the date of entering on his new employment, his employer or employers will have to pay Government the cost of his deportation with all attendant charges. A vagrant may bind himself by formal agreement to remove himself quietly from India at the public cost from a specified port, in some specified vessel, within a certain period; further promising not to return to India within five years after his departure. But any wilful breach of these conditions will render him liable to rigorous imprisonment for not more than six months, except in the event of his returning before the five years, for which offence he may be imprisoned as long as two years. Europeans found begging without due cause, or begging with threats, or continuing to beg after due warning, may be imprisoned for one, two, or three months. A shipmaster landing in India a convicted felon shall be liable to a fine ranging from one to three hundred rupees. There is nothing in these provisions very dangerous to the traditional liberty of the subject. Much will depend on the way in which magistrates and other officials work the Act. It is worth remembering, by the way, that European vagrancy is no new grievance in India. The recent outcry against it could hardly outdo in loudness the bitter complaints uttered by Lord Clive himself against the lawless white vagrants, chiefly sailors, who infested the Calcutta of his day.

THE Indo-European Telegraph has for some time ceased to work regularly on account of Arab risings in Mesopotamia. Both the Turkish and Persian sections of the line have been more or less disabled. The Arabs have cut the wires, burnt down stations, beaten off working parties, and fired into steamers going down the Tigris. The disturbances are ascribed to the monstrous exactions of the Pasha of Bagdad.

THE report on the Bengal Stud Establishments has not yet come out; but a Calcutta correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette, who seems to write with authority, expresses the general belief that it will prove "very damaging to the stud department." The Commissioners are understood to have confirmed the statement made last year by the Controller-general of Military Expenditure, that each horse passed into the service during the last three years has cost on the average more than 200 guineas, while for many years no horse ridden by a gunner or driver has cost less than £150. Australian horses even at the present rate of £60 each would be dirt cheap in comparison with these outrageous figures. With due encouragement Central Asia might also be made to furnish good hardy horses at a moderate price, and plenty of Gulf Arabs can surely still be obtained for five or six hundred rupees apiece. Lord Mayo however may be trusted to set these matters right. It is said that meanwhile strict economy will at once be carried out in the stud department, tending to confine its duties chiefly to the improvement of the breed of Indian horses; an end towards which, after so many years of apparent effort, it has made so little way.

By telegram we learn that a cyclone occurred near Saugor on the night of the 7th current—the very day of the high tides. It also appears that the Indian Government has cut down the public works charges for this year by £800,000. Savings in civil and military estimates are also contemplated. Mr. Seton-Karr left on the 9th of this month for England. The death of Azim Khan, ex-Ameer of Kabul, on the road from Meshed to Teheran on the 6th has also been telegraphed.

THE treatment of witches in Khondistan furnishes one more instance of the common language in which human nature expresses itself all over the world. The Khonds not only believe in witchcraft like the peasantry of enlightened Essex and Somersetshire; but they have the same knack of persecuting the poor wretches, and are wont to test their guilt or innocence by the same ordeals. A suspected witch, for instance, among the Khonds of Bustar is accounted innocent if she can plunge her hand into boiling oil and bring a rupee up from the bottom unscathed. There is also the delightful certainty of the water-ordeal. The supposed witch is thrown into a deep pool. If she sinks there is an end of her; and if she comes up to the top again, she is guilty of course, and must suffer her fate, which usually means some form of brutal outrage ending perhaps in death. Such things now and then happen even under British rule. In the Madras province of Jeypore a poor woman escaped further tortures and indignities by throwing herself into the river, whence it is not certain that she has ever reappeared. No one, at any rate, seems to know what has become of her for the last year or so, beyond a vague rumour of her having fled for refuge to Bustar.

THE banquet of last Wednesday at the Albion Tavern commemorated the dawn of a new success in the field of submarine telegraphy. On that evening Sir Daniel Gooch was able to inform a large circle of sympathising hearers, that the Great Eastern would leave Sheerness on Saturday with the cable ordered by the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company, for connecting Suez with Bombay. By February next he trusted that the whole of the cable will have been laid down between those ports. In May or June next the last gap in the electric chain between England and India will most probably be filled up by the laying of a deep-sea cable from Falmouth to Malta. Thus far the new undertaking starts well. We are glad to see that its supporters, undaunted by the failure of their appeals to the Indian and English Governments, have had the courage to begin proceedings on their own account. The cable once laid and its working power duly tested, they will have small difficulty in surpassing the ordinary feats of the Indo-Turkish line. We shall then, as Mr. Crawford observed, be enabled to "send a message from the office in England to the office in Bombay without any of those vexatious delays with which people have so long been familiar." Due care, we trust, will be taken not to mar the company's prospects of a successful rivalry by too high a scale of charges. If the managers will only treat the public a little more kindly than English railway directors are apt to do, we are bold to predict that they will lose nothing in the long run, nor even have to wait many months for their dividends.

ANOTHER and yet another length will soon be added to the same electric girdle. Mr. Massey, at the same banquet, announced the completion of arrangements for laying a cable from Ceylon to Singapore, as the first instalment of a telegraph line between India and China. Australia of course will not long forbear from linking herself on to the common chain. The Government of Victoria has already begun to treat with the Submarine Company, and in another year or two we may expect to see England and her greatest colony bound together by the closest telegraphic ties.

THE Kirghiz revolt has not prevented Russia from enforcing her claims against the King of Bokhara. According to the Invalide Russe that monarch tried to shirk payment of his monthly tribute to the Russian Government; but the fates turned against him; his son Katti Tura, aided by promises of help from Khiva and Kabul, waged successful war on the Ameer; and at last the latter was only too glad to sue for Russian aid. His arrears of tribute were sent off to Tashkend, and an embassy headed by his fourth son, a boy of twelve, was marched away to St. Petersburg in June last. According to the Russian journal the Ameer desires to secure the White Tzar's support against his enemies, who are also the enemies of Russia, and his kind offices in behalf of the Ameer's youngest son, henceforth to be considered as his destined heir. Among the enemies in question he includes the Indian Government, which is intriguing with Shere Ali against Russia and her friends in Central Asia. The embassy had got no further than Orenburg a few weeks ago.

THE last of Mr. Grant Duff's yearly addresses to his constituents was mainly devoted to those Indian topics which have lately occupied the most of his attention. He said nothing particularly new, except that a live Yarkander had lately been brought over to England by an Anglo-Indian official, and that Lieutenant Hayward, one of the two Englishmen lately returned from Yarkand, has just received £300 from the Geographical Society to aid him in exploring the romantic highlands of Pamir, the mountain cradle of the Oxus. But his exposition of India's progress in material wealth was clear and comprehensive, including even a passing glance at the attempts now making to naturalise the ipecacuanha, as useful a specific against dysentery as the cinchona is against fever. His reference to the "foolish persons" who from time to time have demanded the annexation of Burmah, will doubtless gratify everyone except those same persons who are always for annexing every country where our traders are not received with open arms.

MR. W. P. ANDREW, chairman of the Sindh Railway, has appealed to the India Office in a letter, which we publish elsewhere, against the rejection of his company's very strong claim to undertake the building of the Indus Valley Railway. We have only to repeat what we said before, that the company seems to have a natural right to the management of a line which would form the middle to their two ends, the proper link between the Sindh and the Punjab lines. If no explicit agreement was made in their favour by the Indian Government, its implied assent to the arrangement now apparently set aside by the Secretary of State is to our thinking clearly made out.

LORD DERBY's long struggle with fate closed on the morning of Saturday last. This is not the place to dwell on the public career of a statesman whose connection with India was limited to the part he played, as Premier, in framing and carrying the India Act of 1858, and in defeating the efforts of the Whig Opposition to make his ministry answerable for Lord Ellenborough's scornful attack on Lord Canning in the matter of Oudh.

PROVING GUNPOWDER.

It appears that the best method of proving gunpowder is a problem still to solve, unless the conclusions of a committee lately sitting on the subject are to be accepted as final. The old mode of testing cannon-powder was by means of a proof mortar, fired with two ounces of powder carefully weighed, at an angle of exactly 45 degrees, from a bed placed on a horizontal platform. Besides the powder a sixty-eight pound shot, "carefully cleaned," was dropped into the mortar with the greatest nicety by means of a pair of lifting tongs. The mean range of three successive shots thus fired from the mortar determined the strength of the powder used.

The misleading character of such a proof has long been generally acknowledged. Small charges of two or three ounces are very poor guides in comparison with charges of five to ten pounds. Powders that have shown a difference of a hundred feet in the initial velocity, when the charge was raised to a pound and a-half, have betrayed no difference at all when only two ounces were used. Nor is the mortar to be trusted as an index to the composition and texture of different powders. For some years past experiments bearing on these points have been carried on by the Ordnance Committee, with about fifty different samples of gunpowder. A comparison of results was made between powder fired from an eight-inch mortar, and the same powder fired from a service twelve-pounder breechloading gun, with a charge of a pound and a-half, and a twelve pound elongated shot. In every instance the same result appeared. The mortar was found to be utterly untrustworthy, while the twelve-pounder rifled gun showed every variation in the strength and quality of the powder with a nicety perfectly unvarying. Large variations were found to occur with the contract powders—a fact telling strongly in favour of the Government factory at Waltham. The same sort of powder varied greatly according to the date of manufacture, thus showing want of care in the pressing processes. The weather also was found to affect the velocity, which would be slightly less on a wet or frosty day than on a fine warm one. As it is likely that the home system of proof will be introduced into India, as a sequel to the establishment of new factories at Ishapore, it is just as well that the best system possible should in the first place be secured for home use.

INDIAN FINANCE.

How ought the Indian Government to secure a fair and stable balance between its yearly income and the yearly outlay?

Is it feasible to attempt any large reduction in the military expenses, which now swallow up a third of the yearly income? Have Indian financiers made the most of existing resources, within the limits imposed by circumstance on an alien government? Are the people of India already taxed up to the prudent pitch, and if not, where shall we look for new sources of revenue? If we cut down our military estimates, how are we henceforth to deal with the wild tribes of the Punjab Frontier?

Questions like these would naturally be asked in many quarters at a moment when tidings of an inevitable deficit in the year's revenue have followed close on the news of another frontier raid into Hazara. Year after year the old story turns up again. The Indian Finance Minister brings forth his budget, in which the balance of income and expenditure appears so nicely adjusted that only a few thousand pounds remain over, or are found wanting at the year's end. Ere long the likelihood of some unpleasant mistake in the reckoning begins to be noised abroad. The sales of opium have balked all fair expectation, or a frontier raid has led up to a little war, or a drought has checked the circulation of money and the growth of trade, or the Home Government has somehow exceeded its usual rate of expenditure. A second estimate repairs the errors and makes large deduction from the pleasant prophecies of the first. Some months, often many months later, the verified statement of actual gains and losses imparts a yet deeper shade to the financial prospect. The deficit or the surplus of a few thousand pounds has by this time taken the substantial form of a deficit of two or three millions. How it all happened nobody seems quite to make out. The blame of it is thrown by mere guesswork now on those shoulders, anon on these. But there is no certainty about anything except the ugly fact that India has two or three millions on the wrong side of her books.

Who or what is to blame? People in England at once assume a chronic incompetency on the part of Indian financiers, as if something in the climate or the conditions of life in India were fatal to proficiency in fiscal arithmetic. And yet in the days before Laing and Wilson the India of old John Company managed to pay its way fairly enough, in spite of frequent wars and a debt mainly due to the policy of the English Government. A good deal of useful work, no doubt, was left undone, for want of funds or leisure; and these omissions it has since become the acknowledged duty of India's present rulers to repair. But they have only been building on Lord Dalhousie's foundations; and the many great works which he began or carried forward added a mere trifle to the debt of India, at a time when her revenues amounted to only thirty millions. For several years of his rule he could point to a yearly surplus of about half-a-million, and the subsequent deficits were entirely due to "the enormous expenditure" on public works, the cost of which he maintained that India's ordinary revenues could no how be expected to defray. "A large annual deficiency must and will continue to appear"—he wrote—"unless the Government shall unhappily change its present policy. . . . It is impracticable to effect, and absurd to attempt, the material improvement of a great empire by an expenditure which shall not exceed the limits of its ordinary annual income." The policy thus begun has ever since been steadily followed up, with respect at least to the material improvement of India. But the financial question has been complicated by opposite views concerning ordinary and extraordinary public works. Whether the new barracks, for example, should be paid for out of income or out of State loans, sometimes makes all the difference between a surplus and a deficit in the yearly returns. How is it by the way that India is always wanting new barracks? There has never been a time in the last twenty-five years at any rate, when the boon of new and improved barracks was not being showered upon this or that part of the country. Many and magnificent were the buildings of this class to which Dalhousie could point in evidence of his care for the British soldier; and yet the demand for more and more magnificent barracks continues to be satisfied at the rate of a million or two a-year.

The seven millions a-year paid out in the shape of guaranteed interest on railways would have made a very large hole in the thirty millions which Dalhousie once deemed "more than sufficient to meet all ordinary charges." Regarded as interest on money virtually advanced by private companies, this item naturally takes its place in the yearly estimates. Fortunately we have managed, with very little pressure, to draw eighteen or nineteen millions more a year into the Indian Exchequer; and yet we are told that the making both ends meet remains an unsolved problem. The military expenditure alone has risen from twelve to more than sixteen millions. A mere trifle of about half a million is all that can just now be spared for purposes of education. More money is wanted for many different sources of outlay, at the very moment when some untoward event may be seriously diminishing this or that source of ordinary income. And these things happen under the rule not of Anglo-Indian financiers of the old school, but of gentlemen specially sent out from England to enlighten the financial darkness of British India. Was Mr. Massey therefore the person most to blame for the difference between his estimates and the actual returns? It may be that he was, and we know that English finance ministers in their own country have sometimes made a mess of the national accounts. But he may at any rate plead that his misreckonings seldom, if ever, extended to the ordinary items of his budgets. In the matter of customs, excise, stamp-duties, military outlay, opium, and land revenue, his calculations generally hit the mark. It was mainly when they dealt with home expenses or outlay on public works, that actual results belied the previous estimates. We can hardly blame him much for not foreseeing or preventing the excessive outlay sanctioned in the one case by the India Office, in the other by the department of which Colonel Strachey is the active head. Some allowance at any rate should be made for the difficulty of collecting accounts and data from a number of departments, whose action extends not only over the vast Indian Peninsula, but to a country many thousands of miles distant from the seat of apparent rule. With regard to Sir R. Temple's omission to allow for the probable effects of continued famine, it is probable that he, like most of his official colleagues, jumped too hastily to the belief that all danger was over as soon as the cold weather rains had fairly set in, although the history of past famines in India shows how often one bad season has been followed by another. On this rock of undue hopefulness Indian statesmen are but too apt, we fear, to wreck their character for timely forecast.

Apparently indeed there is a screw loose somewhere in India's financial administration, a certain tendency to cut too close in respect of her yearly budgets. It may be that the whole system is too highly centralised to secure economy in expenditure, accuracy in the keeping of accounts, or elasticity in the fiscal processes. It has repeatedly been argued, and the Spectator once more enforces the argument, that more fiscal independence on the part of the local Governments would ensure alike the collection of a larger aggregate revenue, and less waste in the process of expending it. Give the local Governments a pretty large control over their own revenues, and they will turn them on the whole to better account. Under the present system they have to get what they need for local purposes by a course of stratagems involving much waste of public money, with small advantage to themselves. Under a more localised system different kinds of taxes might be raised in different provinces, and each province would have a direct interest in making the most of its own resources, and keeping the outlay within prudent bounds. Hindrances of course there are to the carrying out of such a reform, but this assuredly will prove to be one main element in that reconstruction of Indian finances which must sooner or later come about. Something however may at once be done towards checking what Mr. Massey called "the tyranny of the Public Works Department," without impairing its efficiency or curtailing its resources, which would go very much further if they were more discerningly applied. Much of the present delay in sending in correct accounts from public-works offices would be avoided by separating the duties of an accountant from the ordinary work of an engineer officer. A movement indeed in this direction is already, we perceive, ordained. It needs but a fair start to become thoroughly successful.

In view of the actual and impending deficits retrenchment of outlay has already begun and new taxes are threatened for the coming year. Neither process however can with safety or justice be carried far. Any sudden reduction of military strength would hurt the reputation more than it could save the pockets of the Indian Government. It is hard to see what material saving can be effected in the civil estimates. An increased income-tax is not at all desirable, still less an increase in customs or excise dues. New taxes are a source of proverbial danger to a rule so slightly rooted in the soil as ours is and will always be. Experiments in that line should be left to the local governments and the new municipalities, which best know their own wants and capabilities. Meanwhile it is awkward that another frontier raid finds our hands tied from inflicting punishment in the regular way. This however may prove a blessing in disguise, if it should force us to attempt some cheaper and surer way of dealing with these troublesome marauders. Major Evans Bell, we notice, would cut that Gordian knot by handing over all the Peshawar province to Shere Ali. It is bold counsel, and very bold would be the Indian Minister who resolved on carrying it out, as things stand. Such a step might certainly do away with a chronic nuisance, but at what a sacrifice of moral and even material guarantees for the future of our Indian Empire!

EDUCATION FOR THE MILLION.—III. INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The conquered countries in the Deccan were placed under the sole control of the Hon. Mountstuart Elphinstone, who in 1819 succeeded to the government of Bombay, in addition to the supervision of the Deccan, now incorporated with that presidency. Mr. Elphinstone was an accomplished European and Oriental scholar, who during the preceding twenty-four years had not only filled the highest offices of the State, but had travelled over every part of India, and felt the necessity of extending the native system of education throughout his new government. He may be said to be the leader who gave the impetus to the other parts of India. He caused several useful books to be translated out of English by learned natives, who understood both languages grammatically, and distributed them extensively throughout the country, especially among all the village schools, as well as among the neighbouring States, which excited intense interest in every direction, while all attempts to interfere with the numerous branches of native sectarians was avoided.

During his short administration he founded at the public expense normal schools and colleges at Poona and Bombay, so that we find by official returns in 1855 there were 235 schools of a superior class to the village schools, in which were 12,384 boys maintained at the public expense, and up to that period useful education had been imparted to about 70,000 natives of all classes who chose to attend. The books were eagerly sought after, and it was not infrequent to see a native gentleman travelling on horseback with a printed book in his hand to beguile the tedium of his journey.

It was about the same period that Mr. Elphinstone became Governor of Bombay that Sir Thomas Munro, his friend and colleague in the settlement of the Deccan, was appointed to the government of Madras. He visited Mr. Elphinstone on his way thither, and imbibed his views on the subject of native education at Madras. On inquiry, he found within his new government 733 native colleges, with 3,750 students. These colleges are described as institutions consisting of buildings with a number of professors, supported by endowments of land or money from the ancient kings of the country, independent of the village schools, which were universal.

In 1856 the return gives in all 12,498 schools and colleges, with 188,650 boys and 1,548 girls. Of these there were—Brahmins, 42,504; mercantile class, 19,690; agricultural and other classes, 120,458.

At the period when Lord William Bentinck, formerly Governor of Madras, became Governor-general of India, in 1828-9, he found that all judicial proceedings in that Presidency were conducted in the Persian tongue, a language wholly unintelligible to the inhabitants, and very indifferently understood by the European judges. The practice was confined to the Bengal Presidency, forming about two-thirds of the population of our Indian Empire. This inconvenience Lord William resolved to abolish, and immediately set about it by establishing an improved vernacular education, both for natives and Europeans. We have seen that in the early part of the century the Marquis Wellesley had deputed the Rev. Dr. Claudius Buchanan to collect statistical information in the several parts of India and the Burmese Empire; but more details on the subject of education were required, and Lord William Bentinck appointed Mr. William Adam, an American missionary, for the purpose of obtaining it. He was empowered to call on the civil authorities to give him every support. He confirmed the report of Dr. Buchanan that in almost every village he found a parish school, and in a voluminous report, filling nearly five hundred pages of closely-printed letterpress, he submitted a project for an extensive system of Normal Schools, and went into great detail as to the working of his project by means of vernacular education. His work was printed and disseminated throughout the Supreme Presidency. His experience led him to believe that "those who have not received a good native education first, find the English language of little use to them. There is a want of sympathy between them and their countrymen, and they derive little from their foreign rulers. It is only by means of native education that English principles and English ideas can be generally transferred and incorporated with the native character."

These sentiments were not sufficiently appreciated at the moment, but an opposite view had been taken, which induced Mr. Adam to give up a lucrative appointment and return to America, his native country.

It must not be supposed that while Lord William Bentinck was Governor-general, with Mr. Charles Edward Trevelyan (now Sir Charles), one of his confidential staff, and Mr. Macaulay, afterwards raised to the peerage, then in Calcutta—the education of the people was neglected. The foundation of an universal system was laid, but for the most part with a view of introducing the English language. This was made subservient to instruction in the sciences, and more especially to that of the healing art. A medical college was founded, which has yielded good fruit.

The Calcutta Review of June, 1852, states:—"Since the establishment of the Government schools 1,400 different works have been published in Bengali, many of them containing able disquisitions on Medicine, Philosophy, Law, Metaphysics, and Religion. A number of these have gone through twenty or thirty editions; not fewer than a million and a half of copies have been sold. Latterly the Vernacular Committee has given us 'Robinson Crusoe,' The Life of Clive, Raja Pretassa Ditya, Lamb's tales, selections from the native press, and an excellent illustrated magazine. The language has been found quite adequate to express the subtleties of law and philosophy, and to impart the enthusiasm of poetry. Thirty thousand Bengali books began to issue annually from the press; fifty new ones were published in 1852; one hundred thousand Bengali Almanacks were sold annually in Calcutta. The recent publication of a Bengali Dictionary by a native, containing 36,000 words, shows the progress and copiousness of the language."

The Afghan war of 1838 to 1842, and the subsequent wars of the Punjab, so entirely occupied the minds of the Governors-general from the time of Lord William Bentinck till the arrival of the Marquis Dalhousie, that little was done for education beyond what had been effected by the former. At length Mr. James, afterwards Sir James, Thomason, Lieut.-governor of the North-West Provinces, shortly after the departure of Mr. Adam, commenced to promote native education in his government. He took up Mr. Adam's view with respect to native education. In order, he said, "to produce any perceptible impression on the native mind it must be through the medium of the vernacular languages." Sir James was allowed to carry out his project in his own fashion, limited by the Supreme Government to eight districts out of his extensive administration. He first did away with the smaller English schools which had been previously established, and that language was confined to higher schools and colleges for the advancement of the sciences.

He laid the foundation at the same time, through his influence, of the Delhi Vernacular Translation Society, which in 1840 had published in Urdu fifty volumes, containing 14,000 pages, at a cost of about Rs. 16,000. Vernacular libraries were formed for distributing elementary works among the village schools. He also gave encouragement for forming schools for females, a branch which was zealously taken up by one or two wealthy natives.

The Court of Directors in England entirely approved of these proceedings, and subsequently gave an annual grant of Rs. 50,000 for the purpose. In 1848, 16,500 copies of Sir James Thomason's elementary treatises were sold, and in two years 21,605 volumes went off in the few districts into which his system was introduced. He however did not live to carry out his plan throughout the whole extent of his administration (of thirty-five districts), which was left to his successor.

I cannot conclude this letter without quoting a minute in Council of the Marquis Dalhousie, on the occasion of his acceding to the request of his successor for the extension of the system:—

"The sanction which the Lieutenant-governor solicited for an increase of the means which experience has shown to be capable of producing such rich and early fruit, I now most gladly and gratefully propose; and while I cannot refrain from recording anew in this place my deep regret that the ear which would have heard this welcome sanction with joy is now dull in death, I desire, at the same time, to add the expression of my feeling, that even though Mr. Thomason had left no other testimonial of his public life behind him, the system of general vernacular education, which is all his own, would have sufficed to build up for him a noble and abiding monument to his earthly fame."

At the same time, his Lordship urged the introduction of a similar system of education in the Punjab, which was successfully carried out by the Commissioner, Sir Robert Montgomery. The following table indicates the state of education existing in that Principality, in spite of several years of civil war, on its becoming an English province.

Independently of the parish schools, there were others, in which the following languages were taught:—

	Schools.	Students.
Arabic ... ..	166	1,108
Persian ... ..	377	2,183
Hindi ... ..	100	2,252
Gourmeeki (Sikh religious schools) ...	83	540
Sanscrit ... ..	76	1,311
Koran ... ..	255	1,199
Mixed ... ..	359	Not enumerated
Total ... ..	1,385	11,500

Calcutta, though the first to form colleges, has so frequently changed the system of Government education that it adopted the present universal system of vernacular tuition last of all.

As far back as 1803 Dr. Claudius Buchanan reported that, in the neighbouring towns around Calcutta, comprising 1,625,000 inhabitants, there were 100 upper schools, in which were taught Hindu, law, grammar, and metaphysics, supported by private voluntary subscriptions of opulent Hindus, or by grants of land of former Governments. In Calcutta itself, then containing only a population of 300,000, there were, in 1829, as many as 111 private schools. So that from the remotest period education has been universal throughout India, but the nature of the village school education was so imperfect till the art of printing, introduced by the Company's Government about the time of Warren Hastings, that the fruit fell to the ground as soon as formed ere it attained maturity.

THE SIMLA BALL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The example set by the Maharajah of Jeypore is, it is said, likely to be extensively followed. That prince "gave"—as is well known—"a ball," and the fame of it has, it appears, filled the breasts of several other great feudatories of our Indian Empire with an envious desire to do likewise. They burn to distinguish themselves in a similar manner, and ardently aspire to dance a real English quadrille with Lady Mayo, habited in the white kid gloves and other accessories of the period. Already the schoolmaster—or, rather, the dancing-master—is abroad. His Highness of ———, in particular, is said to be unusually persevering in practising his steps. The sound of the fiddle is reported to be daily heard within the walls of his palace, as he seeks initiation into the mysteries of La Poule, or painfully labours at the double shuffle to the monotonous one, two, three, of his instructor. Such are the beautiful results of civilisation, now at length making themselves apparent among the populations of the Far East. Light is at last breaking in upon their darkness of centuries. On danse.

It must be admitted that our preconceived notions regarding the actual mode in which the influence of our precept and example would first operate in India has received a check. We have hitherto imagined that it would make itself apparent in a hundred various ways, but we have never for a moment had the ingenuity to foresee, or the prescience to foretell, that it would be primarily indicated by the acquisition of the noble art of dancing, or that quadrilles (and eventually, one must conclude, "round dances") would be the first symptoms of the regeneration of the natives of that country.

It is useless to be wise after the event, but had we known this before, our better plan would have been (and perhaps still is) to secure the services of such eminent artistes as Madame Michau and Mr. D'Egville, and to induce them to proceed—with a staff of competent assistants—as missionaries to Hindostan, for the purpose of evangelising its inhabitants by the thorough inculcation of the choregraphic art. We have been hitherto mistaken as to our tactics, and our surest way to their hearts and intellects lies, after all, through the medium of their toes.

Looking at the matter more seriously however, and with reference especially to the hyperbolic expressions of satisfaction so generally evoked at the proof, assumed to be afforded by the Simla festivities, of the march of intellect in India, I should like to be permitted to say a few words. That a Hindoo nobleman of rank should, in defiance of the trammels of custom, permit himself personally to take part in our amusements, and to dance quadrilles with English ladies, instead of, as formerly, attending the nautes of his ancestors, may be a matter of congratulation, inasmuch as it betokens the subsidence of ancient prejudices; but it hardly signifies more than this somewhat negative result.

And then the practical question arises whether—assuming the willingness of the natives of India generally to follow the lead of the Jeypore prince and to share in our social relaxations—it is wise and right on our part to admit them to do so. Are they in very deed sufficiently enlightened to appreciate such privileges, and is there no danger of their abusing them?

I wish, for my part, very much that such questions could be answered satisfactorily. Is it probable, however, that the nobles and princes of India, or of any other Asiatic country where polygamy prevails, and the institution of the harem is flourishing in all its abomination, can be fitted, by the acquisition of a few English phrases and ideas, to mix unreservedly with our ladies in social intercourse? Is it likely that, fresh from daily association with their own countrywomen in their debased and slave-like condition, they are competent to understand (and not to misunderstand) the freedom of ours?

She thinks that, notwithstanding our fervent desire to conciliate the millions of India, by every means in our power, and in spite of our earnest endeavours to raise them in the social scale by education, so as to fit them to take some considerable share in the government of their own land, it will be long indeed before the gap which exists between the Hindoo and the Saxon, the Mahomedan Asiatic and the Christian Englishman, is sufficiently filled up to permit of their sharing together their domestic life.

But why do I talk of "sharing?" Is it not patent to every one acquainted with the East that there is no reciprocity in the matter, and that an Asiatic, be he of what country he may, would, whatever the state of superficial European civilisation he may have arrived at, die sooner than permit the females of his family to mix in a similar manner with ourselves?—Yours obediently,

S. V.

Notices of Books.

Ancient and Mediæval India. By Mrs. Manning. Two Vols. W. H. Allen and Co. 1869.

A readable work on ancient and mediæval India, drawn from the most trustworthy sources, and giving a detailed account of the various branches of her literature, her religious and philosophical systems, of her commerce and architecture, has long been a desideratum keenly felt, not only by students preparing for the Indian Civil Service, but also by that increasing fraction of the reading public who were anxious to obtain some better information on those subjects than could be got from the standard works now obsolete by Robertson, Maurice, and others. This desideratum has just been supplied by Mrs. Manning, favourably known already as the author of that charming volume entitled "Life in Ancient India," which appeared some thirteen years ago. A great portion of Vol. I. is naturally taken up with a full description of the ancient Hindu religious ideas as reflected in the Vedas, and with an account of their gradual development. The chapters on Hindu philosophy are perhaps the most successful attempt that has yet been made to deal in a popular form with that most interesting, but abstruse subject. To enable the reader to judge for himself, the author has embodied in these chapters translations of three standard treatises—viz., the Sāṅkhya-Kārikā, the Atma-Bodha, and the Tarka-Sangraha. The rest of Vol. I. is taken up with the chapters on Law, Medicine, Mathematics, Astronomy, Architecture, and Grammar. The second volume deals almost exclusively with the works of fiction, the epics with their episodes, the drama, the lyrical poetry, the fables, and concludes with an account of ancient Hindu commerce. Throughout these volumes the author conscientiously quotes the sources of her information, and very numerous these are. It is, in fact, a well-digested summary of existing data on most matters pertaining to the India of other days. The best authorities in each branch of study have been carefully consulted, and the result is two volumes full of learning conveyed in clear easy language, not more free from pedantry than from vulgar smartness. The volumes are interspersed with telling little woodcuts, mainly from the sketches of Mr. W. Prinsep.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

SHIPWRECKS IN THE RED SEA.

The Pioneer remarks that the deplorable accident to the Carnatic suggests the reflection that, with the enormous increase in the number of vessels navigating the Red Sea, which may be anticipated on the opening of the Suez Canal, will come a greatly increased number of these disasters. It seems, therefore, merely a natural measure of prudence or self-preservation to establish an improved system of safeguards and precautions. We believe that the existing surveys of the Red Sea leave nothing to be desired in the way of accuracy and minuteness. Every rock in that rock-studded sea is known and named. But this is often no better satisfaction than a post mortem examination of a corpse gives to surviving friends. Many more buoys, light-houses, and some stations of refuge are wanted to guard against shipwreck, or mitigate its danger to life. It may be thought that the matter is one for international action, but it would not be unsuitable to the position of England as, from her possession of Aden and Perim, the constable of the Red Sea, to accept the expense and dignity of being its protector also; and it would fall naturally to the Indian Government to imitate deliberation on the matter.

THE DEFICIT.

The Bombay Gazette regards the Government of India as seeming to think that it is entitled, by virtue of its exalted position, to play fast and loose with the local Governments, and to do a thing so unbusiness-like as that of sanctioning an expenditure for which it has not provided, one which it does not intend should be incurred. Our Municipal Commissioner holds, or held, a charming doctrine that he had a right to spend money in anticipation of sanction; but this is really not more objectionable than the Simla notion that the Supreme Government has a right to censure expenditure made in obedience to sanction. Why should Governments, supreme or otherwise, have the privilege of hanging out false lights? What does it all mean, except that the business of the Supreme Government is too extensive and complicated for its administrative resources? What does it mean, except that the Supreme Government, for the work to be done, has neither sufficient foresight, information, nor power of effective control? If, as our contemporary has aptly pointed out, the expenditure in England sometimes exceeds, or the revenue falls short, of the estimates, how can the Supreme Government of India reasonably expect that its financial management, extending to the whole Indian Empire, should not perpetually show similar results? The doctrine of administrative centralisation may be applicable to compact and homogeneous States; but it is not applicable to a fragmentary and diversified State like British India. A centralised system of account is a totally different matter. Hold the local governments responsible for every rupee they raise and every rupee they spend, but do not overload yourself by undertaking a minute superintendence over every pie obtained as revenue and every pie expended in administration. It has been commonly supposed that there is an efficacious mode of management known as the division of labour; but in financial affairs, at least, it has been abolished by the Supreme Government. We do not suppose that the stern prohibitions and admonitions issued by the sublime authority referred to will do the work of a sound and reasonable system adapted to the nature of the country, and, whatever may be thought in Olympus, the very limited faculties of men.

THE OVERLAND TRANSPORT SERVICE.

The Madras Times allows that theoretically viewed, the conveyance of our troops to and from England overland presents some pleasing pictures to our consideration, but the question is, whether they are not over-coloured? It seems a great advantage to have the troops on the road one month instead of three, to secure them an immunity from the bucketing which has been the lot of all Cape voyagers from the time of Vanderdecken to our own day, to lessen the chances of destruction by tempest, fire, and the Queen's enemies, as bills of lading have it; to avert, to a considerable extent, the horrors of seasickness and the tedium of a long voyage; but are there no objections to be made to the other route for the conveyance of troops? Practically, we think there are a great many, of which one or two are easy examples. In the first place, then, it is excessively costly, and we have proofs that it is inefficient under the present system of transport service; and, secondly, it appears not to be so healthy for the troops as the old route round the Cape. Troops from England, we understand, frequently embark for India suffering from the effects of "sprees" and dissipation, consequent upon a long farewell to old England. The overland route, which takes men rapidly to India, is not favourable to the convalescence of these soldiers, and the Mediterranean is not the healthiest sea in the world for crowded troop-ships to sail over. But the evils of the voyage out are nothing in comparison to those of the voyage home. Regiments ordered from India to England, after long tours of Indian service, are more or less diseased and weakened, and nothing is more likely to set the men up again and brace their constitutions than a long sea voyage. The overland route fails to afford them this panacea for their ills, for whatever good they may obtain from a fortnight in the Mediterranean is perhaps more than counterbalanced by a week in the Red Sea. We have, indeed, heard it remarked, that whereas troops from India via the overland route, look usually on arrival in England much the worse for wear, those who return via the Cape are rosy and strong as lions. In many instances this must be the case, for we all know that our Indian medical men will order sick officers home, via the Cape, instead of overland very frequently, and what is good for the officer is good for the soldier also. The apparently weighty objection that three months is a long time for which to lose the services of paid troops, must be considered with certain reservations. It is an open question whether (there being no emergent necessity for their services as in war), troops are not as well employed, and learning as much of the duties of a soldier's profession, on board an East Indian man, as in an Indian barracks. A soldier must, indeed, be the most stupid of mortals if he fails, in a three months' voyage round the Cape, to pick up much valuable information useful to him in his profession and through life. Further, whether proceeding to India, none the better for life in English garrison towns, barracks, and public-houses; or, returning from this country, yellow and enervated, he is picking up health and strength on the voyage for the service of Government, and so, in a certain sense, cannot be said to be wasting his time. As regards danger to troops by shipwreck, fire, &c., we imagine the danger is pretty evenly balanced on both routes at the present day, however it may have weighed one way or the other fifteen years ago. Again, if we balance the expense of the overland transit—the immense sum we have paid for the huge steam transports, which are yet unequal to their work, the cost of their repairs, their shortcomings, breakdowns, &c., against the hire of sailing vessels of the merchant service—we think it will be found that the latter are the cheapest in the long run, all contingent expenses inclusive.

ACCIDENT TO THE "TIGRE."—The Tigre, one of the steamers of the Messageries Impériales, which left Suez just at the same time as the Carnatic, and kept company with her for a considerable distance, is reported to have struck on a reef at Perim and lain there about five hours, getting off at last without damage.

THE NEW "ALBERT" ALPHABET.

Come, poor little orphan, sit down on my knee,
I'll teach you in couplets your A, B, and C;
And Mammy and you shall let every one see,
How wicked and vile speculators can be.

"Assurance! Assurance! Assurance!" wept she,
"Why could not my man let Assurances be?
Had he even invested his savings in Tea,
We might not be singing this sad A, B, C."

A for Assurance the Albert was famed.
B is the Board so appropriately named.
C the Committee with questions to ask.
D the Directors who boned the four lakhs.

E the Executor palsied and blank.
F are the Funds that should lie at his Bank.
G is the Grief at this terrible wreck.
H is the Halter for somebody's neck.

I is for Income so flourished in print.
K is the Knight who enquired where it went.
L is the Lawyer who looks for his fees.
M is the Management over the seas.

N is the Nothing one ever could learn
From O the great Ogbourne so haughty and stern.
P is the Plan of deception and shame.
Q is the Question of "Who is to blame?"

R for the Rogues widows' houses who rob.
S for the Stripes they should get on the nob.
T Transportation for nought will do less.
U the Unanimous voice of the Press.

W "double your leavings" 'twas said.
X excretion from graves of the dead.
Y is for "whY, and how long, Lord, how long?"
Z is the end of this alphabet song.

PRIGGINS.

Miscellaneous.

MAJOR GLASSE.—The Lahore print states that Major Glasse has been sent back to the Magistrate of Ferozepore for recommitment, he having been only charged on the less serious counts.

SIMLA.—We learn from a private letter that the weather at Simla cleared up on the 23rd Sept., the day before the Fine Art Exhibition opened. Report spoke highly of the collection, and the names of Colonels Baigrie and Fane are said to be at the top of the list.

INCOME TAX.—The Englishman says:—"District officers have been instructed to submit, as soon as possible after the 30th of September, the income-tax returns for the first half of the year 1869-70, showing the assessments finally made after legal revision. Can this return be required for any contemplated increase of the tax?"

REVISED GAZETTEER.—Mr. Grant, Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, has been for some time labouring assiduously in the compilation of a revised and enlarged edition of the "Central Provinces Gazetteer," and we understand that the only thing that now delays its publication is the sanction of Government to the plan of the work as suggested by Mr. Grant.

THE CONVICTED PRINCE OF NEPAUL.—The Prince of Nepaul has got off very cheaply; his fine and imprisonment have, it appears, been remitted. He is to remain, we are told, a State prisoner in Chunar for a year, although his offence was hardly of a political character. Chunar possesses also an interesting scion of Burmese royalty, the Mengoon Mengtha, and his equally interesting brother.—Pioneer.

CENTRAL INDIA.—It is rumoured that Major Pollard and Mr. Crawford Campbell will be transferred shortly from the Central Provinces to the Punjab, to take up some higher appointments on the State Railway to Peshawar. The Central Provinces could ill-spare the talent, energy and skill which Mr. Campbell particularly brought to bear in the Public Works Department.—Jubbulpore Chronicle, Sept. 22.—Captain Faber, Executive Engineer, Saugor, has applied for furlough to Europe.—Central India Times (Nagpore), Sept. 25.

NEW WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.—A Bill is to be immediately prepared in the Legislative Department for carrying into effect the reforms in weights and measures proposed by the Government of India, and sanctioned by the Secretary of State. The reform is for the present to be confined to weights, and the kilogramme, and not the English pound, is to be the new unit of weight. All the propositions of the Indian Government in connection with the proposed reform have been sanctioned. The danger of doing too much in the beginning is the only danger to be dreaded in connection with these reforms, and even as regards that there seems no reasonable grounds for apprehension.

PESHAWUR.—A telegram from Peshawur on the 23rd Sept. informed the Delhi Gazette that the cholera there was abating. Up to that date 130 Europeans and about 1,000 natives in the city had died from it. No officers had died. All the European troops were in camp.

MILITARY.—The Delhi Gazette hears that Hughes' Mule Mountain Train Battery has been ordered to Thundiani, whether for the purpose of protecting that isolated station, and overawing the turbulent inhabitants of the Black Mountain, our informant does not say; but we apprehend that its removal at this season from Khaira Gullee and Chungla Gullee, near Murree, is thought necessary in view to any epidemic visitation of the depot at the last-named sanitarium, and in order to enable the local authorities to provide accommodation for any sick that may require change.—The detachment of the 58th Regiment, lately encamped at Dubowrah, has returned to Allahabad; the whole regiment is now quartered in the new barracks. The Royal Artillery have also returned to their lines from camp.—Pioneer, Sept. 27.

PRINCE GHOLAM MOHAMMED.—Last year Prince Gholam Mohammed, with the consent of Government, invested Rs. 1,65,000 in Government securities, in order that the monthly sum of Rs. 550 might be given in charity to the infirm, the deformed, and the poor of Mysore, in the following proportions, viz, 100 Mussulmans, 50 Christians, and 20 Brahmins. The Chief Commissioner of Mysore is the official trustee of this fund, and selects the pensioners. The Prince has since invested a similar sum for the relief of the poor of Calcutta and its suburbs, the securities being endorsed to the judge and the collector of the 24 Pargannahs for the time being, who are to select the recipients of Charity. The scheme embraces 245 pensioners, of whom 150 are to be Mahomedans, 55 Christians, and 40 Hindoos; but his Highness is willing that the portion of the fund which he has set apart exclusively for the benefit of the Christian poor should be disposed of by the Government of India in any way they may think most desirable.

THE "ALBERT."—We have seldom seen anything so cool as Mr. Tait's letter to the manager of the company in Calcutta announcing the fall of the Albert. This is how the director of Indian business accounts for the collapse of the concern:—"The directors having before them the large amount of claims falling due, and the excessive mortality continuously announced, have, in the interests of all parties, determined to suspend payment." From the directors' point of view the collapse was occasioned by the assured dying at too fast a rate, otherwise the Albert would be still as flourishing as the directors' reports always represented it to be. We have not heard, however, of any great pestilence or war to account for the excessive mortality so peculiar under present circumstances to the assured in the Albert. The popular explanation is that the directors did not keep a sufficient reserve to meet their liabilities on policies falling due; and this is, in plain English, what Mr. Tait also says, but he prefers to express it in the euphuism quoted above.—Pioneer.

AJMERE.—The condition of Ajmere is still deplorable. The price of wheat has risen to 3½ seers in the Todgurh Tehseel, to 3½ in Beawur, and to 4½ in Ajmere itself. This rise has to some extent been caused by the heavy rains which have, for the time being, stopped the camel traffic, so that nearly all importation of grain has ceased. In the Todgurh Pargannah, however, the crops are now ready for cutting, and the market will soon be relieved. The rain has destroyed large numbers of locusts, and the villagers are busy in destroying as many more as they can. Captain Repton reports that the copious and timely fall has reduced the numbers employed on relief works to nearly one-half. He adds:—"The locusts, too, will fly in about ten days, I hope, and rid us of their presence; and I can at last hopefully look forward to a fair harvest, present and prospective. The talaos (tanks) are full, and the ground well saturated. The people are very tractable and loud in their expressions of gratitude for the assistance which has been given them under the orders of Government. Carriage of all kinds is scarce, and grain must be imported before the high rates can be broken down. I do not anticipate, however, any actual scarcity of grain, but I fear that high prices will prevail for some months longer."—Pioneer, Sept. 27.

THE VICEROY.—The Governor-General has formally notified that he will leave Simla between the 12th and 17th of October for Nynee Tal. His Excellency will be accompanied by the Secretaries in the Foreign Department and the Public Works Department. All the other head-quarters officials will gradually find their way from Simla to Calcutta after his Excellency's departure. "One object of this tour to Kumaon," says the Mofussilite, "may fairly be assumed to be the determination of the pending problem—can a large European cavalry cantonment be established with advantage in the locality? We are inclined to think the question is likely to be answered in the affirmative. We even go the length of thinking that with due foresight a large body of European cavalry might be advantageously cantoned in the Dhoon. Their cost of keep there, if a sufficiency of land were taken up for fodder, would be a fraction of that in the plains; and they would be just as handy for service in any probable direction as at Meerut or Benares. As soon as the Oude and Rohilcund line of railway is completed, with the sanctioned branch to Roorkee, cavalry stationed in the Dhoon, or infantry at Rauce Khet (just below Nynee Tal) will be within a few hours of Benares, Allahabad, Lucknow, Cawnpore, Meerut, Delhi, Curnaul and Umballa. What more is wanted if the sanitary considerations connected with the question are favourable?"

Madras.

THE MADRAS PIER.—The Madras pier, which was so sadly cut up by a little French vessel that came against it about sixteen months ago, has now been completely repaired.

PRINCELY CHARITY.—The Maharajah of Vizianagram is liberal in his donations. He has just, we learn from the Madras papers, added ten thousand rupees to the funds of the Monegar Choultry.

MURDER BY A SOLDIER.—A gunner, named Gimson, in the artillery stationed at Madras, has killed a comrade named Dunn by stabbing him with a table knife, and the coroner's jury has given a verdict to the effect that he had committed culpable homicide, not amounting to murder.

CIVIL.—Mr. J. B. Spedding, C.S., Principal Assistant to the Collector of Ganjam, is, we learn, to prepare the manual of that district.—Madras Mail, Sept. 25.

JUDICIAL.—The Bangalore Herald thinks that in the case of Mr. Kindersley, the Judicial Commissioner of Mysore, being called to the High Court of Madras, Major Pearce, the Superintendent of the Nundidroog (Bangalore) Division, will probably officiate as Judicial Commissioner, Mr. Gordon's leave not being yet up.

HEADQUARTER'S STAFF.—On the departure of Mr. J. H. Garstin for Europe on leave, Colonel Fordyce, military secretary to the Madras Governor, will become private secretary, and Captain Ross Church will be appointed military secretary. The Hon. John S. Napier will act as extra aide-de-camp to his father, Lord Napier.

LORD NAPIER'S SUCCESSOR.—The Friend of India thinks the rumour that comes from Madras, naming Sir Hercules Robinson as successor to Lord Napier, somewhat unlikely. Whether at Hong Kong or in Ceylon, Sir Hercules has not been a success. His conflicts with the coffee planters showed great want of tact as well as temper. Least of all is Sir Hercules fitted to succeed a hard-working Governor like Lord Napier. If the Colonial-office must be indented upon Sir James Fergusson is a likelier man.

INDIAN BISHOPS PROCEEDING TO THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.—Drs. Tissot, Leonard, and Depominier have arrived at Madras, to proceed to Rome, to be present at the Council which is to be held in December next. Dr. Charboneaux was expected to reach Madras on Sept. 23. All these bishops are to leave by the next French mail steamer. Dr. Fennelly, who has been for some time on a tour of visitation, is shortly to return to Madras, and will start for Rome next month. Dr. Depominier was present at the Roman Catholic Cathedral in Black Town on the evening of Sunday last, and pronounced the benediction.—Madras Times.

MILITARY.—The latest accounts received from the Red Hills, says the Madras Mail of the 21st Sept. are, that cholera no longer exists in the companies of H.M.'s 45th Regiment, "Sherwood Foresters," encamped there, and that the men are enjoying very good health. The two companies are shortly expected to return to the garrison quarters at the Fort. As we anticipated, the question of moving the 16th and 18th Regiments to and from Secunderabad has again been submitted, we hear on good authority, to the Supreme Government, and so strongly spoken against, that the contemplated change is not probable.—Bangalore Herald.

NEW FIELD FOR THE POLICE.—The Madras Government has opened a fine field for the exertions of its police. Lieut.-Col. Christie, the officer who was sent a short time back to the Cuddapah and Coimbatore districts to destroy certain man-eaters that had been alarming the inhabitants—more than alarming some of them—appears to have suggested that inducements should be held out to the police force to aid in destroying dangerous tigers, which are believed to be man-eaters. The Government thinks the suggestion well worthy of consideration, and has resolved to request the Inspector-General of Police to give notice that the Government will be prepared liberally to reward any successful efforts which may be made in that direction by the officers or men of the force, and to reimburse any bona fide expenditure which may be incurred for the purpose.

THE MADRAS STUD COMMISSION.—The Stud Commission at Oosoor has, we (Madras Mail) hear, completed its labours, and Mr. Hunter Blair returned to-day to the Custom House from an employment which he must have found very congenial. Mr. Athol Macgregor has now resumed the appointment of Acting Secretary, Mr. Grose that of Sub-Secretary to the Board of Revenue; and Mr. Crole has reverted to the sub-collectorate of Madras. The conclusion arrived at by the Commission is said to be unfavourable to the scheme of re-establishing breeding-studs in Mysore, it being found that, in the long run, country-bred horses would be dearer than those imported into India. This conclusion will be disappointing to those who, like ourselves, would wish to see this country self-dependent in the matter of horse-flesh. India's loss promises to be Australia's gain. Nevertheless, we love not Walers, nor their nasty tricks.

Bombay.

BACK BAY COMPANY.—The Bombay Government has taken over the Malabar-hill and Chowpatty properties belonging to the Back Bay Company in full satisfaction of the amount due by the company to Government, about six lakhs.

RE PREMCHUND ROYCHUND.—The case of the liquidator of the old Bank of Bombay against the Oriental Bank in respect of the loan to Premchund Roychund has been concluded, but the Court reserves its judgment till it has heard the case against the Asiatic Bank, which has now been begun.

A SKIPPER TRIED FOR ASSAULT.—Captain Wyllie, of the ship Thomas Bell, has been tried by the Chief Magistrate of Police at Bombay on a charge of assault and other injuries accompanied by force, at the instance of Cornet Graves, of the 20th Hussars (who came to Bombay in that vessel), and has been sent to prison for a fortnight.

IMPORTATION OF GRAIN TO INDIA.—Large quantities of grain are now imported from the Persian Gulf into Bombay, and much of this supply is sent to Guzerat which formerly grew not only its own grain but exported largely. What has caused this surprising revolution? Simply the substitution of cotton culture for that of grain. As a consequence of this, a few make large profits, perhaps, but the great body of the people in Guzerat have to pay more for the staff of life. So much for the political economy that felicitates the State because the cotton area has been enlarged.—Bombay Guardian.

MILITARY.—A Nusserabad letter, dated the 16th ult., says:—"The Artillery commences its march to Bombay on the 15th prox.; the Native Infantry proceed on the same duty to Neemuch, but it is expected their destination will yet be altered."—We understand that the march of the 3rd squadron 3rd Cavalry, from Poona to Guzerat, on Friday, October 8, has been counter-ordered, pending instructions from the Supreme Government. It is rumoured that the 8th (King's) Regiment will be sent to Deesa in lieu of to Nusserabad, as previously ordered.—Poona Observer.

THE ALBERT ASSURANCE COMPANY.—The Bombay Gazette contains a report of resolutions passed at a meeting of the committee which had been appointed in that Presidency to act for policy-holders connected with the Albert Life Assurance Company. The resolutions condemned the reconstruction scheme, and expressed a desire that the possibility of enforcing against shareholders of amalgamated companies the claims of policy-holders who had been transferred to the Albert from such companies should not be lost sight of by their London agents.

CAPTAIN GILLESPIE.—A statement published by our local contemporary that Captain Gillespie had been "released from confinement, the Court of Inquiry considering him guilty of no crime," was quite incorrect. We learn on good authority that the Court of Inquiry gave no opinion whatever, but simply recorded the evidence. The Brigadier-General at Kurrachee has withdrawn the European guard which was placed over Captain Gillespie, on the latter giving his word of honour that he would not attempt to escape. This has been done under instructions from Sir Augustus Spencer, who sent Brigadier-General Forbes the following telegram in reply to one received by him from that officer:—"If you think there is no reason for supposing that Captain Gillespie meditates escape, you may withdraw the European guard on accepting his parole."—Bombay Gazette.

THE DEPARTURE OF THE "JUMNA."—The following troops proceeded on Oct. 1 to England in her Majesty's Indian troop-ship Jumna:—H.M.'s 90th Light Infantry, consisting of 25 officers, 1 lady, 3 children, 8 staff sergeants, 5 wives, 11 children, 442 non-commissioned rank and file, 14 women, and 31 children.—Madras details.—14 officers, 6 ladies, 10 children—6 second-class passengers, 3 staff sergeants, 1 staff sergeant's wife, 3 children, 379 non-commissioned rank and file, 26 women, and 58 children. Other details. 7 officers, 3 ladies, 4 children, and 1 woman—the last from Aden. The following officers proceed by the Jumna:—Colonel Rattray, 90th L.I., Surgeon Norris, Paymaster Bamfield; Captains Sempie, 3-60th Rifles, Anderson, 2-19th Foot, Muller, 1st Royals, Kent, 2-24th Foot, French Rennie, V.C., Bainbridge, 2-21st Foot, Biddulph, 2-19th Foot, Ridge, 2-10th Foot, Carter, 90th L.I., Hackett, do., Chamberlin, 2-24th Foot, Warree, do., Caulfield, 90th L.I., Murray, do., Maillard, 16th Lancers, Rolland, R.A.; Riding Master Stoyell, R.A., Assistant Surgeon Thompson, 90th L.I.; Lieutenants Wilmer and Agnew, do., Stoton, Madras Staff Corps, Lambarde, 45th Foot, Ward, 90th L.I., Campbell, do., Nolan and Fielden, 2-21st Foot, Aphorpe, 108th Foot, Hamilton, 90th L.I., Assistant-Surgeon Minty, do., Quartermaster Gibbins, 90th L.I.; Lieutenants Jackson, do., Beard, 16th Lancers, Andrews, 18th Hussars, Christian, Bombay Marine; Ensigns Lawrence, Buller, and Balfour, 90th L.I.; Lieutenant Hennell, Bombay Staff Corps.

SUIT FOR DAMAGES.—In the suit brought by Henry Gamble against the G. I. P. Railway Company to recover damages for injuries suffered in an accident on that company's line in August, 1867—the accident by which Mr. Howard, barrister, was killed—a decree has been given by consent for Rs. 25,000.

LOCUSTS IN SIND.—The Political Superintendent of Thurr and Parkur writes, on Sept. 11, to inform the Commissioner of Sind "that locusts are throughout the zillah of Thurr and Parkur, and are desolating the crops, the grass, and stripping the trees of their leaves and bark. The eggs first deposited have hatched, and the ground is covered with young locusts, but these have done no damage to the crops, as they cannot fly, the people consequently being able to keep them off their crops by digging trenches round their fields, and destroying them by burning rubbish upon them when trapped therein. The old locusts have again returned to the talookas of Nuggur, Mittee, Deepla, and Chachra, and have deposited a fresh supply of eggs, which will after the usual time (21 days) hatch. The crops have been damaged by them. The cultivators are much depressed, have already in the Deepla talooka made two sowings, and now their crops in all probability will be devoured by the locusts, to destroy which is an utter impossibility. The locusts appear to prefer sandhills to the plain. They have frequently visited the plains, but the damage done there by them is simply nominal."

COTTON REPORTS.—We have received the following from Mr. Melville, General Manager of the Mofussil Press and Ginning Company (Limited), under yesterday's date (1st Oct.):—"The following reports have reached me from the cotton districts regarding the weather and the crops:—Hingunghat.—Messrs. Warwick and Co. write:—"During the past week we have had very heavy rain, so much so as to bring up the quantity since the 1st June last more than five inches over the average for the whole year. As yet, however, no actual damage has been done, but unless a speedy change in the weather takes place, we greatly fear that our expectations as to quantity and quality of the cotton crop will be far from realised. Omravuttee.—Since I wrote you a week ago, the weather has been very unsettled and not at all favourable to the crops. There has been some heavy rain, and this has knocked off a great many of the pods from the trees. The weather now looks better, and it is to be hoped we shall have no more rain. The damage done is said to be equal to one-tenth of the whole crop. Khamgaum.—I have nothing particular to add to my hitherto favourable reports on the state of the cotton crop in this district. Rather more than an inch of rain fell during the week, making the total up to nearly 27 inches, and although there was a heavy fall on Sunday, still it was not general, and I am glad to say the plants in that part were scarcely in bloom so that the damage, if any, must have been very slight. Shegaum.—The past week has been a damp cloudy one, with occasional showers. The rain-fall was 1 inch 27 cents. The crops are looking very thriving, and if all goes well we shall have a very superior crop. Broach.—The weather, which at the beginning of the week gave promise of clearing up, has become very unsettled, short intervals of bright sunshine being followed by very heavy showers. These have been prejudicial to crops of all kinds, bajree being the principal sufferer. The damage to cotton, which at present it is difficult to ascertain, is variously estimated by the cultivators at from five to ten per cent. A continuance of wet weather will both decrease the yield and deteriorate the quality. Surat and Randare.—It has scarcely ceased raining during the past week, and the ryots state that a very small percentage of pods will open. The statements differ so much, however, that it will be impossible to estimate the damage properly until the rain is over. Ahmedabad.—The prospects of the cotton crop are very promising. In some places I hear that bajree has suffered from excess of rain."—Bombay Gazette.

WRECK OF THE "CARNATIC."—An Alexandria correspondent of the Bombay Gazette writes as follows:—"As soon as the first shock of the collision was over the captain gave orders to have the mails, baggage, cargo, &c., taken from the afterpart of the ship and placed in the forepart, so as to lighten her by the stern. This transferring of the cargo, &c., went on for about thirty hours, when all of a sudden the ship parted in the middle, the afterpart sinking at once, and the forepart almost immediately after rolling over into the sea. At the time this occurred there was one of the ship's boats—the only one that had been lowered—in the water astern of the steamer, and attached by a rope. Some few people were in this boat, and Major Champain—who seems to have had an amount of presence of mind which does him infinite credit—cut the rope which attached it to the ship, and thereby not only prevented the boat and its contents being engulfed, but provided the only means of escape for the unfortunate people who were struggling in the water. As far as is known at present the number of Europeans lost amounts to about fifteen, and when the numerous crew of a P. and O. boat is taken into account, it is evident that Major Champain's promptitude has been the means of saving the lives of a large number of his fellow creatures. When the survivors were assembled on the island the first thought was of the homeward steamer from Bombay due at Suez a day or two ago. A man was sent to look out for her, who shortly afterwards came back and reported her in sight. It is said that the captain, whose conduct is stated to have been incomprehensible—I merely give the opinions expressed here—refused to believe this man, but that some of the passengers persisted in going out in what, with justness and for brevity's sake, I may call Major Champain's boat. It was fortunate this resolve was taken and acted upon, for there was but one rocket left from the wreck, and had this been sent off from the island and failed to attract the notice of those on board the Sumatra, worse consequences might have happened. As it was the boat and her gallant little party went out and waited till the ship was sufficiently near them, when their sole rocket was sent off and fortunately attracted the notice of those on board the approaching vessel. The survivors were brought to Suez by the Sumatra." Further accounts just received, with reference to the Carnatic, show what an extremely fortunate escape the survivors had on the island of Shadwan. There were I am told, no provisions saved from the wreck, and the water which had been saved was so damaged by the sea as to have been undrinkable.

Home.

MR. ANDREW ON THE INDUS VALLEY RAILWAY.

Mr. W. P. Andrew, Chairman of the Sind Railway Company, has lately addressed the India-office in a letter from which we make the following extracts:—

3. It appears from the despatches in question that the Government of India has expressed its general concurrence in the opinion recorded in the late Viceroy's Minute that it is desirable that the future extensions of the railway system of India should be undertaken by the direct agency of Government; the reasons alleged for this opinion being that Government possesses greater facilities than private companies for raising money at favourable rates; that the railways can be more cheaply constructed by Government agency; and that the terms of the contracts with the companies under the guarantee system throw upon the Government the whole of the loss which may be incurred, while they exclude the Government from any direct participation in the profits.

4. The directors are ready to admit that the facilities of the Government for raising capital are usually, though not always, slightly greater than those of companies; but they do not consider that past experience, so far as it can be held to bear on the subject, warrants the anticipation that works of such a nature as railways can be more cheaply constructed by the agency of Government. I would submit that whereas the Government considers—and, as it appears to the directors, considers reasonably—that the railways now proposed to be constructed can be constructed at less than the average cost of those which have been already made, the reduction which it is thought will be effected will be due in a great measure to the advantage gained by the experience of the past—an advantage which will operate in favour of the companies at least as much as in that of the Government, which is as yet confessedly deficient in the organisation necessary to discharge the task it proposes to undertake. The directors do not doubt that had the Government of India in the first instance itself undertaken the construction of railways in that country, it would have been equally impossible to have kept the cost of the earliest lines within such limits as might appear practicable after nearly twenty years' experience had been gained.

5. The question of the terms of the contracts with the existing companies I shall revert to hereafter.

6. My object in addressing you on the present occasion is not to contest the general soundness of the views on which the proposed change of the policy of the Government is based, but rather to bring to the notice of the Secretary of State the peculiar manner in which the Scinde Railway Company is affected by the change, and to point out, more prominently than has yet been done, the reasons why the case of this company, or rather the main line of this company, should be exceptionally dealt with.

7. In the first place it will be at once conceded that the position of the Scinde Railway Company, as affected by the proposed change, is altogether without a parallel in the whole of India. The Kotree and Mooltan line, which this company has for years past urged on the notice of the Secretary of State, and whose necessity has been at length recognised by all the highest Government authorities, is not an isolated line. Neither is it a branch or a simple extension of an existing line. It is, on the contrary, a central part of a trunk line of which both extremities have been already constructed and are in the hands of one company. It is a line to which the shareholders of the company concerned have for years past looked forward as the link necessary to unite their hitherto disjointed undertakings in one continuous railway—a link, in the words of a despatch of the Punjab Government [dated 13th October, 1868], "the fitting in of which alone can secure for the Scinde and Punjab lines, already completed, the prospect of becoming ultimately remunerative."

8. Before proceeding further, I would draw attention to one or two points in the despatches to which reference has already been made which would appear applicable to the case of this company. Lord Lawrence, in his Minute of the 9th January last (para. 22), observes that, "for the future, railways should, as far as is consistent with actual and implied engagements with the existing companies, be carried out by the Government itself." The Government of India, in despatch No. 24 of the 11th March (para. 6), commenting on Lord Lawrence's Minute, expresses itself as follows:—"Sir John Lawrence sums up his conclusions by stating that, in his opinion, railways should, so far as is consistent with actual and implied engagements with existing companies, be carried out by the Government itself. We assent to these views, and to the arguments on which they are based." It will thus be seen that neither the late nor the present Viceroy desired that the new policy to which they had given their adhesion should be allowed to prejudice the reasonable claims and expectations of existing companies. Several passages in Lord Mayo's despatches tend to confirm this view. His Grace the Duke of Argyll also, in his despatch of the 15th July, observes that certain projected lines (enumerated in the margin of the despatch) "are considered to be so connected with undertakings of existing companies as to give to the latter a natural hope and expectation that they will be entrusted with their construction, provided they are willing to accept it on certain specified conditions, differing somewhat materially from those of the existing contracts."

9. The precise meaning intended by the Government of India to be conveyed by the expression "actual and implied engagements" is doubtless open to question; but it appears to the directors that the case of the Indus Valley Railway may not unreasonably be considered as one of an "implied" engagement with an existing company. Turning, on the other hand, to the extract just quoted from the despatch of the Secretary of State, it appears to the directors to be simply impossible throughout the whole of the Peninsula to find another instance where a projected line is so inseparably connected with the undertaking of an existing company as is the Mooltan and Kotree line with the trunk line of the Scinde Railway Company.

10. As to the question whether there existed on the part of the shareholders of this company "a natural hope and expectation" that they would be entrusted with the construction of the proposed line, it is only necessary to draw attention to the resolution, of which a copy is given below,* which was moved and seconded by the shareholders themselves, and carried unanimously, at an extraordinary general meeting of the company, held on the 30th March last, in connection with the proposed amalgamation of the company's undertakings. This resolution shows in the most conclusive manner that the shareholders confidently expected the concession; and I believe I am fully justified in stating that the only point regarding which they entertained any anxiety or apprehension was as to the time when the Secretary of State should think proper to authorise the commencement of operations.

11. In para. 12 of Lord Mayo's despatch of March 11, after the remark that there may be some doubt as to the agency by which the Indus Valley line should be carried out, it is suggested that, "before the designs are completed, all doubts as to the agency for construction may easily be disposed of." The despatch continues, "If the railway is to be combined with a canal, it would almost necessarily follow that the Government should carry out the part of the line on which this is done, and, if so, then probably the whole line." Doubtless, if the proposed combination of the railway with a canal on the lower portion of the line should be ultimately decided on, the construction of that part of the line would naturally fall to the Government; and as the continuity of the company's railway would thus be broken by the interposition of a separate authority and separate interests, the benefits which are looked for in the proposed amalgamation of the company's undertakings would be in a great measure neutralised, and the grounds on which the company bases its claim for the concession of the whole railway from Mooltan to Kotree would be in some degree weakened, the question being limited to half of the line only. But with regard to this the directors would observe, that while it is doubtful when a final decision will be come to in regard to the canal and railway scheme, it is far from certain that that project will be ultimately adopted. The Board regard the project in question with great apprehension, as they are advised that it would be a serious engineering mistake to attempt, in such a country as Scinde, to combine a railway with a canal, by constructing the former upon the bank of the latter, as the only soil which would be available for the formation of the embankment would be unable to sustain the vibration caused by passing trains, or the scour of a large body of water, without being breached and ultimately destroyed. The upper half of the undertaking, from Mooltan to Roree, on the other hand, it has been decided is to be proceeded with at once—i.e., as soon as the estimates shall have been approved by the Secretary of State; and if the construction of that section is placed in the hands of this company, it will result in three very important advantages to the company, which the directors feel it to be their duty to urge with the utmost earnestness on the notice of the Secretary of State. The directors do this in behalf of the shareholders, whose interests, if the line is withheld from them, will suffer a most serious injury, and one altogether disproportioned to any possible advantage which can accrue to the Government by including either the whole or part of the Indus Valley Railway among the lines to be constructed by Government agency. The advantages in question, which are irrespective of the ultimate decision as to the lower portion of the line, are these:—Firstly, the breach of continuity between the upper and lower portions of the company's line would be reduced by one-half in respect of distance. Secondly, the average mileage cost of the company's undertaking would be considerably lessened by the incorporation of the Mooltan and Roree line with it, as the estimated mileage cost of that section is about one-third less than the average cost of the company's existing lines. Thirdly, the section in question would be constructed much more quickly if placed in the hands of the company than if it were undertaken by the Government, as it is understood to be the intention of Government to distribute on a number of lines in different parts of the country the annual outlay of 3½ millions, which it is proposed to expend on the State railways.

12. Before leaving this part of the subject, the directors desire to add a few words by way of contrast between the different proposals which have been made with regard to the construction of the Indus Valley line. The Punjab Government, in its despatch of the 13th October last, recommended that the line should be commenced simultaneously at both ends, and that it should be completed within a period of six years; the expenditure, estimated at a total of six millions sterling, varying from three-quarters to one and a-half millions per annum during that time. This arrangement would be very similar to that adopted in the case of the Delhi Railway, which will be completed from end to end next year, five years after its commencement. Sir Donald McLeod, it is to be observed, did not, so far as the directors are aware, regard the Indus Valley Railway as one which might fitly be undertaken by Government; the only para. in his despatch which has any reference to the question of the agency to be employed in its construction tending to an entirely different conclusion. The para. in question is given below.† If, on the other hand, the Indus Valley Railway should be included among the lines to be undertaken by Government agency, the date of its completion would be a matter of extreme uncertainty. Lord Lawrence, in his minute of the 9th January last (vide tabular statement thereto appended), has suggested that in the first five years 100 miles should be constructed; in the second five, 150 miles; in the third five, 150 miles; and, in a further period of five years, the remaining 50 miles: thus completing the whole distance in a period of from fifteen to twenty years after the commencement of operations. Even this tardy accomplishment of the undertaking, the directors would observe, would be entirely dependent on the fulfilment of the expectations of Government as to the average cost of the lines to be constructed throughout the country by its own agency. Thus, if the estimated average cost of these lines should in the end be exceeded, the completion of the Indus Valley Railway would be still longer delayed. When these circumstances are taken into consideration it will be seen that the directors are amply justified in stating that the decision of Government on this question affects in a vital degree the interests of the shareholders of the Scinde Railway Company, whose own opinion as to the serious disadvantage at which the Scinde and Punjab lines must be placed until the establishment of uninterrupted railway communication between the Punjab and Kurrachee is entirely borne out by the official testimony of the Punjab Government, already quoted in para. 7.

13. The Government of India concludes its observations on the Indus Valley Railway with the remark that if it be thought right to concede the line to the Scinde Railway Company, "the most complete security should be taken to give the Government power to exercise a really substantial control over the cost of the works." This remark leads the board to the question of the general terms of the existing contracts between the company and the Government, more especially with respect to the power of control vested in the latter. With regard to this subject, I have to remark that the directors are fully alive to the importance of keeping the capital expenditure within the lowest possible limits; and they are not less anxious than the Government of India that every possible endeavour should be made to secure that end. It would appear to be the opinion of the Government of India that the existing contracts do not practically secure to the Government so complete a control over the expenditure as might be desirable. In this opinion the directors are not altogether disposed to concur, as it appears to them that the control secured to the Government, as regards matters of expenditure, is practically very little, if at all, short of that which Government would enjoy if the undertakings were being carried out under the sole superintendence of officers in its own service. But if, in the event of the Secretary of State being disposed, on a reconsideration of the circumstances, to concede to this company the whole or part of the Indus Valley line, the Government of India should desire to suggest any modifications in the terms of the company's existing contracts which might appear calculated the better to secure the object which the Government and the directors have alike in view, the directors would be prepared to give such modifications their best consideration. I make this suggestion for the following reason. After the proposed amalgamation of the company's undertakings, which the directors are anxious to carry into effect with as little delay as possible, certain of the clauses in the existing contracts between the company and the Secretary of State will be rendered incapable of fulfilment, as some of the provisions are applicable only to sections of the undertaking which it will then be impossible to deal with separately. It would appear, therefore, to be necessary to substitute one new contract for the four now existing, and the opportunity might be taken of introducing any modifications in the terms which might be recommended by the Government of India and assented to by the board, with the concurrence of the Secretary of State. I need scarcely add that the board would be prepared to take into their serious consideration any suggestion which the Government might be disposed to make with regard to the disposal of surplus profits, or any matter appearing to the Government to affect its interests, as well as any suggestion which might have for its object the more harmonious and simple working of the company's undertaking.

14. There is only one point remaining to be noticed, and that is the circumstance that the Indus Valley line would pass through the native State of Bahawalpore. The directors, however, do not anticipate that that circumstance would occasion any difficulty which might not be readily adjusted, or which would not be felt in nearly an equal degree, if the line were to be constructed by Government agency.

15. In conclusion, I have only to add that the directors are assured that his Grace the Duke of Argyll is unwilling that the reasonable hopes and expectations of the shareholders should be disappointed, or that any step which might possibly have a prejudicial influence on the important interests involved should be taken without the fullest possible deliberation; and they submit these observations in the confident belief that they will receive at his Grace's hands the consideration which the subject deserves.

—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant, (Signed) W. P. ANDREW, Chairman.

EUROPEAN INSURANCE COMPANY.

At Guildhall, on Oct. 20, Mr. George Lewis, jun., applied to Alderman Wilson for a summons against Joseph Bentley, of Aldine-chambers, 13, Paternoster-row, for a wilful and malicious libel against the European Insurance Company. Mr. Lewis stated that the European Insurance Company had for some time past felt that they were being injured by some unseen and malevolent influence, since, as the Supreme Government may be pleased to decide; but hereafter, to save the unnecessary expense of a double agency, the entire system of the Scinde Railway Company from Kurrachee to Delhi, 1,129 miles long, should be managed by an agency with its head-quarters at Lahore."

* "That this meeting, believing it to be of the utmost importance to the company's existing undertakings that early steps should be taken to unite the several sections of railway in the company's hands in one continuous line, are of opinion that as soon as the Amalgamation Bill now before Parliament shall have become law, the directors should take the earliest opportunity of convening a meeting of the proprietors, for the purpose of considering the propriety of exercising the powers to be conferred by the Bill, with the view of placing the company in the best position for obtaining an early concession for the line between Kotree and Mooltan."

† "If the concession of a guarantee is sanctioned, it should be given to the Scinde Railway Company, and the construction be entrusted to one Chief Engineer, subordinate either to the Government of Bombay, or to the Government of this Proand the injury inflicted on them was so severe that they offered £500 for the discovery and conviction of their secret and malignant enemy. Alderman Wilson was probably aware that two petitions to wind up that company had been presented to the Court of Chancery, and they had been dismissed with costs, and since then they had discovered that a man named Joseph Bentley had published a pamphlet, in a tabular form, giving the names of the different companies, the date of their establishment, their annual income, their total funds invested, the total amount of the sums assured, the bonuses paid, and a remark as to their stability. In that little pamphlet was the name of the European Insurance Company, which it represented as having been established in 1819, with a total annual income of £368,563; total funds invested, £542,000; sums assured and bonuses, £11,276,600; and with the remark "Insolvent." In the list were several other large and substantial offices which he would not name, but which were put down as doubtful. If this system of libel were to be permitted it would be impossible for any office to carry on its business. What motive the man could have for acting so he did not know, but there was the fact patent that he was grossly libelling a large number of respectable offices. He only asked for a summons to bring Bentley before the Court to answer the charge. Alderman Wilson at once granted the summons.

The London Scotsman is informed that it has been determined on the part of one of the petitioners to take an appeal against the late decision of the Vice-Chancellor dismissing the petitions for the winding up of the European Insurance Society; and that Sir Roundell Palmer has been retained by the petitioner, while the Attorney-General holds a retainer on behalf of the society. But it may depend, we are told, on certain contingencies whether the appeal will be persevered with.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.

An extraordinary meeting was held on October 20, at the London Tavern, to declare an ad interim dividend for the half-year ending 30th of June last.

Mr. T. A. Mitchell, M.P., who presided, explained that the business of the day must be confined to a single resolution defining the amount of the dividend, in respect to which the shareholders had already been put in possession of the views of the directors that 6 per cent. per annum might safely be declared without any risk of trenching on the capital of the company. The course of trade in the East had continued to partake of that general dulness which had prevailed in this country for the last three years; and although they could not expect to be more successful than their neighbours, it was gratifying to find that all through India and the Australian States this bank had been enabled to hold its own second to no other institution. In China the exchanges had disappointed the expectations of this as of the other competing banks. The market was overdone with bullion, and from the last reports it appeared that from one and a-half to two millions of bullion had been returned from China to India. At the last meeting, in April, he informed them that the amount at which the old bad debt account then stood was £56,000. Since then it had been reduced to £36,000, and the realisation had resulted in a very fair profit on the valuation made. He could now inform them that the total sum involved was about £70,000, against which they had carried forward undivided profits last year £23,000. As he had explained at the previous meeting, the board had not intended to give credit to the firm through whose failure the loss, if loss it was, had arisen; for although the firm, which was an English one, had existed forty or fifty years, they had doubts about it, consequently the whole question was as to the security held against the £70,000 debt, and in this was involved intricate questions, not only of English, but of German and Dutch law. Against the £70,000 they held upwards of £30,000 in produce on bills of lading, and the goods which had come home had been sold by their agents, the Messrs. Hope, of Amsterdam, who had the money in hand. Their right to a part of this was undisputed, but to another part it was. Under all circumstances, however, the board believed that the balance carried forward at the end of the last year, and the amount in hand now, fully justified them in paying the 6 per cent. dividend. With regard to the progress of the bank, the best proof he could give was the fact that the deposits which were for one or two years and the current accounts had been doubled within the last two and a-half years. In conclusion he moved the adoption of the dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum.

The resolution, having been seconded by Mr. Jones, was carried unanimously.

THE BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE COMPANY.

A banquet was given at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, on October 20, by the Chairman and Board of Directors of the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, on the occasion of the approaching sailing of the Great Eastern steamer, from Sheerness, with submarine cable, manufactured for the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company. About 180 gentlemen were present. Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., presided; and amongst the company were Lord Houghton, Lord W. Hay, Mr. Massey, Captain Sherard Osborn, Mr. John Pender, Mr. R. W. Crawford, M.P., Mr. G. Elliot, M.P., Mr. W. H. Russell, Captain B. Seymour, Mr. Verdon, Sir C. Bright, and Sir F. Halliday.

Mr. R. W. Crawford, M.P., in returning thanks for the House of Commons, said it was a happy thing that neither the House of Commons nor the House of Lords had anything to do with this enterprise. The question of telegraphic communication with India had been to him a subject of the deepest interest for some years past. It was his lot some time ago to be concerned in the direction of an inquiry in the House of Commons into our communications with India. They went fully into it, and their report laid the foundation of the enterprise which they were assembled that evening, not to initiate, but to inaugurate. It was true that he was a party with other gentlemen, at different times, in endeavouring to induce the Indian Government to take up this enterprise, and the reason for that was that at that time the public mind was not sufficiently alive to the necessity of the case, but experience, as it always did, had made them wiser. The gentlemen around him had placed their enterprise at the service of the public, and the result was that the Great Eastern was about to take her departure with 2,000 miles of cable to connect Bombay with Suez, and in the course of a short time another cable would be laid to connect Falmouth with Malta; and when that was completed they would have an entire and unbroken system of communication which would enable anyone to send a message from the office in England to the office in Bombay without any of those vexatious delays with which they had for so long been familiar.

Lord W. Hay then proposed "Prosperity to our Indian Empire," coupling with the toast the name of Mr. Massey (the late Financial Secretary of India), and Mr. Verdon (the representative in this country of the Australian colonies).

Mr. Massey said there was never a period when our power in India was more securely established than at present. This country had been, in the truest sense of the word, a paternal Government to India. We had spread the benefits of civilisation; we had overspread India with railroads, and brought the distant parts of that country into close communication with each other, and thereby promoted the commerce of the country, but that commerce would be immeasurably increased by this mode of communication. He had to announce to them that arrangements in which he had been permitted to take a part had been completed for the laying of a cable from Ceylon to Singapore, with a view to an extension to the great ports and outlets of China.

Mr. G. Verdon was sorry to hear that China would receive the advantage of telegraphic communication before Australia. He believed they would never rest in Australia till they had the advantage of telegraphic communication with this country. He had been the means of communication between the company and the Government of Victoria on the subject, and the matter was now under the consideration of the Government.

The Chairman then proposed "Prosperity to the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company." He said on Saturday next the Great Eastern will leave Sheerness with this cable; and after a short delay at Weymouth for the completion of her coaling, she would go to Bombay; and he trusted that by the month of February at the latest the cable would be laid to Suez. A cable was also being constructed, to be laid in May or June, to connect Falmouth and Malta, and by that means they would, he trusted, have in the course of next year an unbroken telegraphic communication between this country and India.

Mr. Pender responded to the toast.

Sir D. Gooch proposed the "Health of their manager, Captain Sherard Osborn," which was drunk with much cheering.

Captain Sherard Osborn acknowledged the compliment in a speech of some length, in the course of which he stated that the works had been going day and night for the last twelve months, and the least fault or miscalculation might have prevented the Great Eastern from sailing on Saturday, as had been fixed.

Miscellaneous.

NAVAL.—The Star, in consequence of the defective state of her boilers, has been ordered home from the East Indies, and will be relieved by the Thistle, at present fitting out at Sheerness.

MILITARY.—The name of Lieutenant-Colonel C. H. Brownlow, C.B. Bengal Staff Corps, has been submitted to the Queen for the honour of filling the appointment of Aide-de-Camp to her Majesty, vacant by the death of Colonel W. A. Orr, C.B., Royal (late Madras) Artillery.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £200,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 20th instant, at the Bank of England. The amount allotted to Calcutta was £181,500, and to Madras £18,500. The minimum price was fixed as before, at 1s. 11d. Tenders on these presidencies at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 11 per cent., and those above in full.

INDIA, CHINA, AND AUSTRALIA SUBMARINE TELEGRAPHS.—It is stated that the promoters of the light cable company named the "India, China, and Australia Submarine Telegraphs," which was projected a month or two back, to lay a cable between Ceylon and Singapore, are returning the deposits to the subscribers. The field is therefore now left entirely to the British Indian Extension Company.

INDIA FREEHOLD LAND COLONISATION, TRUST, AND AGENCY ASSOCIATION (LIMITED).—At a meeting of this Association, on Friday, the report of the liquidators was presented. It expressed regret that the estates in India had realised only a nominal sum, and recommended a return of 4d. per share. Resolutions were passed to dissolve the company immediately after the balance in hand is appropriated.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—It is understood that, with the exception of one or two small and unimportant gaps in the Georgian section of the undertaking, the whole of the Indo-European Telegraph (Siemen's line) is now complete, and that the progress already made in the working arrangements, including the appointment of the requisite skilled staff at each station, will permit of the opening of the line on the 1st December next for through messages between England and India.

THE "GREAT EASTERN" AND THE INDIAN TELEGRAPH.—The whole of the arrangements connected with the shipment of the last portion of the cable to be laid between Suez and Bombay were completed on Friday, and, according to previous arrangements, the Great Eastern left the Medway on Saturday afternoon at an early hour, and proceeded direct to Portland-roads, where, after completing coaling, she will proceed round the Cape of Good Hope to the Red Sea, and commence laying the cable to Bombay. The Great Eastern will be absent from England for some three or four months, and on her return to the Medway she will commence the shipment of the cable intended to be submerged between Falmouth and Malta.

THE ALBERT ASSURANCE COMPANY.—On Friday an application was made to Mr. Leman, the chief clerk of Vice-Chancellor James, by Messrs. Brandon to appoint Mr. Chatteris, the well-known accountant, as representative of the policy-holders at the expense of the company; it was supported by holders of policies valued at upwards of £400,000. Mr. Mackenzie, for policy-holders to the amount of £2,000,000, opposed, and asked that a committee should be appointed at their own expense; the goodwill of the company was valuable, and should be realised. Mr. Lindo proposed Mr. Alfred Good, a policy-holder to the amount of £9,000. Mr. Lattey, representing Indian policy-holders to the amount of £2,000,000, supported the application of Mr. Mackenzie. Mr. Musgrave, from the office of Messrs. Lewis and Munn, opposed Messrs. Brandon's application. A long discussion followed, and ultimately the Chief Clerk declined to appoint Mr. Chatteris, and said all parties would go before the Vice-Chancellor on the question. Two other applications of minor importance were also ordered to stand over for hearing by the learned judge.

BRITISH INDIAN EXTENSION TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The prospectus has been issued of the British Indian Extension Telegraph Company, to construct the first important link of the communication between India and our Australian colonies. This will consist of a cable of 1,756 miles between Ceylon and Singapore, the capital for which will be £460,000, in shares of £10. A contract has been made with the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, who are to complete the work in the course of the coming year for £440,000, taking £130,000 in shares. The company will operate in conjunction with the British Indian Telegraph Company, with whom a tariff has been arranged by which the charge for a message of twenty words from England to Singapore will be £4. 4s., of which the Extension Company will receive £1. 7s. It appears that of the whole messages hitherto passing over the Indo-European lines about one-fifth have been for Australia, China, Singapore, Java, and other places beyond Galle, and the calculation of the directors is that seventy-five messages each way may be expected daily, which, after deducting working expenses and a provision for a reserve fund, would yield 16 per cent. per annum. Meanwhile negotiations are in progress with the Dutch and Australian authorities for concessions, and soundings are about to be taken for a cable route from Singapore to Hong Kong. Mr. Massey, late Finance Minister in India, is the chairman of the company, and Colonel Glover, Director-General of Telegraphs in India, is a member of the board.

MR. GRANT DUFF ON INDIA.—Mr. Grant Duff, M.P., Under-Secretary of State for India, addressed a crowded meeting of his constituents at Elgin on Wednesday, Oct. 13. In the course of his speech he gave an account of the material resources of India:—"I am happy to say that the amount of cotton exported last season, 1868-9, rose to 697,630,796, while for the season before it was only 614,056,049lb. Silk is exported from India to the amount of about £1,500,000 a year. Tea, chiefly from Northern India, is beginning to take a very high place in the London market. About 8,000,000lb. are annually exported, and there is some reason to hope that a new demand for it may soon arise in Eastern Turkestan. We are coming into closer connection with this long-sealed country, from which, till the other day, no European is known to have returned for more than two and a half centuries. Mr. Shaw, an Indian tea planter, has just succeeded in passing, unharmed, a good many months in Eastern Turkestan; and so has Lieut. Hayward, who was sent out on a scientific mission by the Geographical Society, and to whom that body has just granted £300 to enable him to explore Pamir, "the high mountain cradle" of the Oxus, which has hitherto been better known to poetry than science. All this shows an advance, but, stranger still, we were surprised a few days ago at the India-office by a visit from a Government official who has just come home on leave, bringing with him a companion whom he vouched for as a real live native of Yarkand—the very first, I should think, who had ever appeared in England. Of coffee, chiefly grown in the southern hills, about 37,000,000 lb. are exported. The Cinchona plantations, a new creation of British forethought, are flourishing exceedingly, and attempts are being made to introduce the ipecacuanha, which is as potent in acute dysentery as is the cinchona in malaria fever. Indigo has long brought great riches to the land, and additional seams of coal are being ever and anon discovered. Some foolish persons have advocated from time to time the annexation of Burmah; but anything more utterly opposed to the fixed purpose of her Majesty's Indian Government it would be impossible to conceive. We wish nothing in Burmah except trade—a trade which will be at least as profitable to its inhabitants as to us. Ever and anon, however, new prospects of trade will open, not only in Burmah, but in Siam, and the small adjoining countries. Nor can there, I think, be any doubt that, as lately pointed out by Sir Bartle Frere, Chinese immigration from the North, and, I may add, Anglo-Saxon immigration from the South, partly British-Indian, and partly Australian, are destined to restore far more than their pristine prosperity to regions some of which have strangely slipped back on the road of civilisation and progress."

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE KIRWEE PRIZE.

The Daily News observes that the claimants in the matter of the captured Government notes are supported in their demands by the opinions of eminent counsel specially learned in such matters, and it will surprise no one to hear that they are dissatisfied with a judgment which is unsustained by any of the reasons or arguments which led the judges to their conclusion. Besides, it is beyond dispute that documents of the kind in question have been already treated as prize, and that on one occasion in the Deccan war the Government of England actually compelled the East India Company to pay notes representing claims against the company to the troops who captured them. Under these circumstances the claimants not unnaturally desire that the former precedent may be followed, and this question be also referred to the Court of Admiralty. This seems a reasonable wish, and, apart from the interests of individuals, may be supported on the public grounds that the question whether notes representing value are prize of war or not needs authoritative settlement. When the dispute was merely between the Bombay force and the Madras force, the First Lord of the Treasury (Lord Palmerston) wisely referred the parties to an impartial legal tribunal of the highest authority in such matters. When the dispute lies, as it now does, between the First Lord of the Treasury and the Madras force, it seems unfair and improper that the former should pronounce judgment practically in his own favour and withhold his reasons from his opponents. Lord Palmerston once observed, relative to another Indian case, that "it is always unpleasant to refund," the present Lords of the Treasury would naturally lean to a conclusion which would relieve them from this disagreeable duty, and which would, at the same time, be identical with the view taken by their chief in Parliament. It is certainly as important to know authoritatively what is prize of war as who are entitled to it. The claimants' representatives state that their lordships were not assisted by the law officers of the Crown, or any other lawyers, save the "one counsel" of the claimants; if so, the fact adds additional force to the request of the latter. The public have a lively conviction of the shabbiness and injustice with which the army has so often been treated in matters of prize-money, and would, we feel assured, gladly see this important and interesting question decided by a competent and instructed legal tribunal like the Court of Admiralty. That Court solved the first part of the Kirwee prize question, and may wisely be authorised to complete its work, and produce judgments on both the points in dispute, which will prevent similar contentions and delays hereafter.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

The Economist believes there are accountants in England who, with the data in possession of the India Office laid before them, would in six months prepare forms scientific enough to preclude the possibility of any but wilful error, and simple enough to be completed and forwarded within the time suggested. If this cannot be done more time must be given—for of all systems the present one of mixing up certainty and guesswork is necessarily the worst. Old figures do not help business much, but new figures which are also inaccurate figures make business impossible. The evil as regards the past is mainly one of account, but there is another which affects the future. The Indian Chancellor of the Exchequer wants at once to avoid retrenchment which annoys everybody, and new taxation which annoys the Government. The tendency, therefore, is always to risk a good deal for the sake of an apparent equilibrium without new taxation, and it is secured very often by a sort of defiance of fortune. Everything is reckoned at its best, and the consequence is that any misfortune of any kind deranges all calculations, and if it occurs has to be met partly by loan and partly by "retrenchments," which impede the working of the machine. A full treasury can only be maintained by allowing a margin for possible misfortune, which margin should be a fixed one, and when actually saved be devoted as in England to the payment of debt.

The Spectator holds that the main source of Indian financial troubles is that the presidencies have not the spending of their own revenues, which are under the control of the Central Treasury. Pending a revolution in this respect, which for political reasons is not immediately practicable, the first and most important reform is to insist on a system of accounts so clear, so accurate, and furnished in such good time, say with the new year, that the Minister of Finance should always know on the 1st of April precisely what had been spent, and be able to estimate to a shilling the ordinary and regular charges. A margin should also be allowed. The total amount received for opium varies from £6,000,000 to £9,000,000, and the only safe course is to assume the lower estimate as a fixed datum, and treat all above that as surplus, to be saved, if possible, for the reduction of debt; but if not, to be employed in meeting unexpected claims from all other departments, whether they come in the shape of remissions of revenue on account of distress, or sudden calls for expenditure on any account but war. If the Military and Public Works Departments were steadily pruned down, if the absurd expenditure on police were severely revised, and if licenses to deal in tobacco were sold upon the French system in every village, the apparent loss created by assuming an arbitrary receipt from opium would be speedily made up.

Mails to India, &c.

The Mails to all parts of India, via SOUTHAMPTON, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those via MARSEILLES every Friday, at 6 P.M.

ENGLISH HOMES IN INDIA.

PART I.—THE THREE LOVES. | PART II.—THE WRONG TURNING.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

London: Wm. H. ALLEN and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, S.W.

TO PARENTS in INDIA and ELSEWHERE.—A Lady, Widow of a late Colonel in the Army, living in the highest part of Bath, offers a HOME to TWO or THREE CHILDREN between the ages of Eight and Thirteen, who would be educated with her own little girl of eleven. Girls preferred, but one little boy with sisters would not be objected to. Good references given and expected.

Apply by Letter to J. M. S., 4, Sion-place, Sion-hill, Bath.

INDIA.—A Lady, the Wife of a Merchant, residing at Blackheath, is desirous of assuming the CARE of TWO or THREE CHILDREN, whose Parents are in India. She is experienced in the management of Children, and will make the welfare of those committed to her charge her personal care.

For Terms, including Education, address B. T., care of Mr. BUNNERS, Bookseller, Blackheath Village, S.E. The highest references given and required.

HOME FOR INDIAN CHILDREN.

MRS. A. C. HOWDEN, a Lady of good family and social position, residing at Deer-park, Tenby, Pembrokeshire, Wales, is prepared to take the ENTIRE CHARGE and EDUCATION of THREE or FOUR YOUNG CHILDREN.

References.—The Hon. Sir BARNES PRACOCK, Chief Justice of Bengal, Calcutta; Mrs. ARTIS CRISP, 79, Boundary-road, St. John's-wood, London (whose five children were under her care three years); Rev. THOMAS BURDITT, Tenby.

TO PARENTS going to INDIA.—SUPERIOR HOME and CAREFUL TRAINING.—A Lady, the Widow of a Medical Officer of high standing in the late East India Company's Service, who has had much experience in the management and bringing up of Children, is desirous of undertaking the CARE of FOUR LITTLE ONES. Every care and comfort would be bestowed upon them, and their Education carefully attended to. Inclusive Terms up to the age of Twelve years, £110 per annum, exceeding medical attendance. References to several ladies and general officers at home and in India.

Address "Sigma," care of DAVID STEWART, Bookseller, &c., 4, Spring-gardens, Charing-cross, S.W., London.

TO PARENTS going ABROAD.—A HAPPY ENGLISH HOME for THREE or FOUR CHILDREN, with Educational advantages, is offered by the Daughter of a Professional Man, resident in a healthy neighbourhood in the West of England. A lengthened experience in the care of Children can be referred to, with good clerical recommendations.

Address A. K. R., Wellington, Somerset.

DR. LOCOCK'S WAFERS.—Read the following, just received from Mr. Sandell, Chemist, Yeovil, Oct. 16th, 1869:—

"I recommend Dr. Locock's Wafers constantly, knowing them to be very good for Coughs, Asthma, &c." They give instant relief to ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, and all DISORDERS of the BREATH and LUNGS. To singers and public speakers they are invaluable for clearing and strengthening the voice, and have a pleasant taste. Price 1s. 1d. and 2s. 6d. per box. Sold by all Druggists.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

Dismiss Your Doubts.—Let no one be longer oppressed with the notion that his malady is incurable till these purifying Pills have had a fair trial. Where ordinary preparations have failed, these Pills have been used with the most marked success. A course of this admirable medicine clears the blood from all impurities, and improves its quality. The whole system is thus benefited through the usual channels, without reduction of strength, shock to the nerves, or any other inconvenience. The weakest woman and most delicate child may fearlessly resort to this cooling, corrective, and vital strengthening medicine, which works the most beneficial changes where health seemed hopelessly lost.

QUINTESSANCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.

No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unfailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea, daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the raging fire of fever and dysentery that thinned the ranks around them.

Sold in half and quarter-pint bottles.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

THE GREAT INDIAN REMEDY for all BILIOUS and LIVER COMPLAINTS, including all disorders depending on either functional derangement or obstruction of the hepatic or biliary ducts, such as indigestion, jaundice, heartburn, dyspepsia, pain in the right side and shoulder, blotches, habitual constipation, offensive breath, depression of spirits, oppression after meals, nervous and general debility, restlessness, wasting, &c., &c., &c.

It has already saved some thousands of valuable lives (see the numerous testimonials in the pamphlet sent out with each bottle). It is the only remedy that has a really beneficial influence on the liver, proved beyond all doubt by 75,000 cases in which it has been tried.

Full directions for use with each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 9; Agra and Calcutta, October 5; Madras, October 4.

The financial question still occupies the mind of the Anglo-Indian public. In order to forestal further speculation as to its plans for meeting the deficit, the Government has taken the world into its confidence through the pages of the Gazette. It appears from this State-paper, a despatch to the Secretary for India, that Mr. Massey's projected surplus for 1868-9 has become a deficit of nearly two millions and a quarter. For 1869-70 the deficit is reckoned at over a million and three quarters. The Government avows itself determined to have no more deficits in the future. In the Public Works a reduction of eight hundred thousand pounds this year is to be followed by one of twelve hundred and fifty thousand the next. Large savings are to be made in the military and civil charges, but the strength of the British garrison will not be lowered by a single man. As soon as the Legislative Council meets in Calcutta—that is about the middle of November—it will have to consider a Bill for doubling the income-tax for the last half of the current year, so that the rate for the whole year will be raised to one and a half per cent. The Bill, we may add, is to run for six months only. Less excusable to our minds is the intended raising of the salt duties in Madras and Bombay by five annas, or sevenpence-halfpenny, a maund. The cash balances have fallen from nearly fourteen millions in 1866 to less than eleven millions in the present year, and the latter amount has been kept up only with the proceeds of the new loan. The Government however take a hopeful view of the financial position, and Mr. Strachey, Acting Finance Minister, looks forward to extinguishing the deficit by the end of the year.

EITHER Sir R. Temple failed to make due allowance for the probable effects of famine and trade depression, or else these effects have proved worse than anyone could reasonably foresee. The estimated yield of the one per cent. income-tax has already fallen from nine hundred thousand pounds to six hundred and eighty thousand. There has been a marked falling off in the customs' duties in the five months from April to August, and the returns of April and May show a serious decline in the import trade of India as compared with the same months of last year. The land revenue is likely to fall short of Sir Richard's estimate by at least £183,000, if not by three times that amount. The loss in the Customs' revenue may be as much as £457,000, while the estimated receipts from opium are to be cut down by half a million. The salt duties on the other hand and the spirit duties have thus far exceeded the estimate by over a hundred thousand pounds; but we fear that the increased duty on salt will not add much, if anything, to so desirable an excess. The home charges for this year are not so largely in excess of the estimates as they were last year, when Mr. Massey somehow forgot to add in the price of stores for which the Indian Government had itself indented. Part of the saving on military charges will extend to the new barracks, a matter for small regret if, as we believe, the saving can be carried out without harm to the soldier's well-being. But the short and sound solution of the barrack problem, if all these new barracks are absolutely needed, lies in treating them as the reproductive works they virtually are.

COLONEL KEATINGE writes hopefully from Rajpootana, with regard to the mediate future. For the present however there is no real abatement of distress. Grain was scarcer than ever, and the damage done by the locusts to the young crops has no doubt been immense. Such flights as those which have now passed on from Rajpootana to Sind and Guzerat have never been seen before, it is said. Green trees are left bare in five minutes. Large branches break down under their weight. For two hundred miles between Pallee and Chobatan they were swarming "as thick as sand." One flight in the Mahikanta district was reckoned to be seven miles long, five broad, and more than three hundred feet deep. Owing to the ravages of these insects in Ahmedabad the price of grain rose fast, the telegraph was set to work, and in two or three days the Bombay and Baroda Railway was pouring in train after train full of supplies to the hungry district.

A LETTER from a high authority in Rajpootana received by the last mail says:—"We have a most curious and painful state of affairs here. There has been beautiful rain; the prospects of the harvest, which will ripen in a month, are excellent, though very considerable damage has been done by locusts. Such however is the scarcity of grain, that we have far higher prices than last year, when there was no harvest at all, and the people are suffering very greatly. In British territory we are feeding them coûte que coûte, but in the native States many die. In another month the grain should ripen, and there should be unusual demand for labour as the draught cattle are nearly all dead. We shall not recover this for many years. I hear the Agra Durbar is not to be. It must have caused much harm in such a season." We have learnt from another and most trustworthy source, that the Durbar is positively not to take place.

AT Seepree in Gwalior the distress is still very great. Just as the Relief Fund there was all but exhausted, some timely contributions from Sindhia, Holkar, the Rana of Jallawar, and the Indian Government, served to prolong the lives of hundreds of wretches who would die at once if the relief came to a premature stop.

BOMBAY is excited about the Cotton Frauds Bill, which in an amended shape is supported by a majority of the Council, but seems to run counter to the main drift of public opinion, both native and European. The Bill has not yet passed.

SEVERAL passengers by the Carnatic have made their depositions before the Bombay magistrates. These were afterwards forwarded home to the Board of Trade. The captain himself left Bombay for England by the last mail. There is a general demand throughout India for a strict inquiry into the whole matter.

AMONG the passengers who left Bombay by the last mail were Messrs. Maine and Seton-Karr, both of whom have left India never to return. In the former India loses the ablest law member who has ever yet sat in the Viceroy's Council. The latter in twenty-five years of Indian service has filled a succession of prominent posts with undoubted ability of a high order, if sometimes, as in the matter of the Nil Darpan, with doubtful discretion.

READERS interested in the progress of education in India would do well to follow the series of instructive letters, the fourth of which appears in our present issue. They are the work of one who has often contributed to our columns the results of his long acquaintance with British India, and who writes from the fulness of a mind well stored with the requisite materials for informing others.

WE are glad to see that the India Office has allowed the claim of local lieutenant-colonels, who have elected to abide by the old furlough rules, to resume command of their regiments on returning to India. The claim was founded on the rule obtaining in the old Indian Army; but a difficulty had arisen from the changed conditions of the new organisation. His Grace however has very properly decided that local officers commanding regiments may retain their appointments during furlough taken under the old rules, even though they should thus seem to reap the benefits of both rules.

WE have received the second number of a new Indian monthly, called the Indian Economist, a well printed and ably written journal of economic and statistical researches bearing on India. Printed in Bombay, published in Calcutta, and edited by Mr. Knight, long known for his editorial labours in the Western capital, it seems from the beginning to aim at covering wide ground in its treatment of Indian topics. A pleasant combination of varied knowledge and tried ability with unusual freedom from local prejudices, would naturally be predicted of a journal thus brought into being. Nor is the promise belied by a closer inspection of the matter contained in these fifty-two pages. First among the leading articles comes a long and well-reasoned protest against the currency theories embodied in the English Bank Act of 1844, a measure which, even by its author's confession, has failed in times of crisis to prevent the evils consequent on a sudden contraction of the metallic currency. Another thoughtful article urges the necessity of an imperial guarantee for the State debt of India. A third argues with much force against drying up a fruitful source of revenue by extending the permanent settlement of Bengal to the North-West Provinces. Lord Lawrence is sharply assailed for his advocacy of a principle so obstructive to India's financial progress. In a fourth we have a powerful defence of India's financial credit against the aspersions of her English critics, aspersions for which Sir R. Temple is rather unfairly pronounced responsible. Other articles deal ably with the Indian Foreign Office, with Lancashire's demand for more cotton from India, and similar questions of the day. There is a long and instructive paper on Guzerat, a supplement full of agricultural details, besides many pages of interesting extracts culled from Indian and English papers. Altogether a goodly bill of fare for readers of a healthy digestion.

THE Indian Economist does good service in pointing the financial moral of six years in India, from 1861 to 1866. In three of those years there was a deficit, in the other three a surplus; but the aggregate surplus was £4,671,761, or nearly double the aggregate deficit. During that period nearly thirty-one millions sterling were laid out upon new public works. The new India Office absorbed half a million, the transport fleet three quarters of a million, new barracks and civil buildings seven millions and a third. The same amount was spent on new roads, tanks, and canals. Nine millions and a half were consumed by railways, chiefly in the payment of guaranteed interest. Three hundred and ten thousand pounds went as guaranteed interest on irrigation works, while the balance was expended on miscellaneous works and office-charges on the whole of this outlay. And all these expenses were defrayed out of income, although anywhere else the greater part of them would have been covered by loans. Consider moreover that in the same six years ten millions were spent on repairs of existing works. In the face of these facts does it not seem absurd to talk of India as being in a pecuniary strait, and needing fresh loans to pay the interest on former ones? What motive can English capitalists have for running down the credit of a country, which devotes five millions a-year of ordinary income to works whose cost would, anywhere else, have been defrayed by loans, or spread over a much longer term of years?

A NEW instance of penny-wisdom has lately occurred in the War Department of this country. Henceforth the married soldier is to be charged a halfpenny a day for each set of bedding supplied to his family, so that a married private with several children will either have to bear a heavy monthly tax upon his very limited means, or to huddle his children together in a style more belittling beasts than human beings. This turning of an ostensible privilege into an actual mockery is surely an original way of improving the soldier's morals and encouraging a good class of men to serve in the army.

THE Indian Government appears to have acted somewhat rashly in respect of the order lately issued, forbidding all engineers in its service to take commissions on work contracted for. The order has given great offence in India, as being an apparent slur on a most reputable body, and it has already called forth a strong disclaimer from the civil engineers of England, the gist of which will be found elsewhere. We are glad to see that the Secretary of State for India accepts that disclaimer implicitly and without reserve, and has written out to India for full explanation of the circumstances leading to the issue of so strange an order.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Army and Navy Gazette informs his readers that a favourable answer has already been given to the request of the Persian Government for the loan of British officers, to aid in organising and drilling the Persian Army. It is also asserted that officers for this purpose will be appointed by the Indian Government. These statements however are somewhat premature. Owing to the vacation and the absence of leading members of the Government, no definite arrangement has yet been concluded. The whole matter is still in suspense, but now that the Secretary for India and the Foreign Secretary have returned to town, we have little doubt but that some arrangement of the kind above mentioned will soon be carried into effect.

THERE is nothing like discipline as it is maintained in the British Army. It was fondly hoped that the new manœuvres lately carried out at Aldershot and the Curragh, in mild emulation of the Prussian system, would tend to discover in time of peace the strategic talent so often lacking to us in time of war. But apparently too much was expected of our military grandees. According to a writer in the Times it is deemed a gross breach of discipline for a junior officer to outwit his senior in the mimic battles of Aldershot. At the Curragh a cavalry officer received a sharp rebuke from his defeated antagonist for daring to capture some of the latter's guns by a well-planned movement. If these accounts be true, we must suppose that in the English army, as with certain wines, age is the only test of excellence, that the oldest officer is sure to make the best commander. Or is the game of strategy to be henceforth regulated by the usages of polite society? When a gentleman plays at chess with a lady, he is usually expected to let her win if she can. In the same way perhaps it is right for the junior officer to treat his senior as a lady whose very advanced age should secure her from the indignity of being out-manœuvred in the game of war. If all Europe would only accept this rule, what a world of trouble and expense might be saved! Standing armies might be cut down to any extent, and international quarrels summarily decided by a reference to the age and standing of rival commanders-in-chief.

WE regret to record the death on Monday of Lieut.-col. A. Allen, of the Bengal Staff Corps, at the early age of forty-six. He joined the 55th N.I. in 1842, and exchanging regimental for scientific work became Superintendent of the Roorkee Workshops in 1853. We believe he was the first man who fitted up a railway engine in India. In 1864 Colonel Allen was made Superintendent of Public Works at Jubbulpore, where he remained till his recent return to this country.

COTTON VERSUS CEREALS.

WE have long been wont to rejoice over the benefits accruing to India from the great start which the American War secured her in the work of furnishing cotton for the Lancashire mills. It has become a well-worn theme of congratulation alike for English politicians and Anglo-Indian financiers, that India is yearly gaining a firmer hold on the cotton markets of Great Britain. The Indian Government has done its best, by means of Cotton Fraud Acts and Cotton Commissioners, to satisfy the hunger of Manchester and Liverpool with a steady supply of raw material, good enough to please the eye and pass through the machines of the British manufacturer. Last year no fewer than 2,181,174 acres of Indian soil were laid out with the wealth-diffusing plant, and the number of bales exported from Bombay, Carwar, and Kurrachee, amounted to 1,294,291. The whole amount exported from India was a million and a-half. During the present year the acreage sown with cotton is considerably larger, for the ill-wind of the famine has blown this much of good, that many fields unfitted by the long drought for bearing grain have since been devoted to cotton. But of the probable yield at the year's end it is still too early to form a sound estimate. In the Berars, where the cultivation is this year wider than ever, the plant is still backward, but likely under present conditions to develop into a full crop. "The rain," writes Mr. Rivett-Carnac, "has always fallen where it was wanted." In Khandeish and the country south of Khaugam and Oomrawuttee the plant is well forward, and promises a good yield. In the course of a year or so branch railways will connect the cotton-fields of Dharwar and the Deccan with the neighbouring port of Carwar, while Coconada may in time become the natural outlet for the cotton grown in the valley of the Godavary.

It is good therefore that India should persevere in growing a staple so necessary to Lancashire and so profitable on the whole to herself. A trade that brings her from twenty-five to thirty millions a-year must add in many ways to the well-being of millions among her children, to say nothing of the new branches of industry it tends to bring forth. But India cannot live by cotton alone. Dear grain may have its compensations, but a chronic scarcity of home-raised grain is not a thing to desire for her under present circumstances. Abundant cotton and a steady market for it is a prospect pleasant to think of; but even in the midst of all that sweetness the "something bitter" will bubble up. While Manchester is calling on the Indian Government to spare no outlay that will help to bring more cotton into English looms, people in India are beginning to misdoubt the policy of extending the cotton culture at the cost of crops available for the food of man and beast. Already it seems that Guzerat is indebted to the traders of the Persian Gulf for a large proportion of the grain she once used to grow herself. The price of flour in that province has accordingly risen to a pitch unpleasantly high for the poorer millions, who reap small compensating benefit from the spread of cotton culture. From the Deccan we hear that Sir Salar Jung has resolved to handicap cotton in the rivalry with grain by exacting a higher rent from fields sown with the former. A clergyman, writing from Indapore, in the Poonah district, to a Bombay journal, complains that most of the peasantry about him are "carried away by the cotton speculation," and that more than half the soil has been devoted to the more attractive staple. Some persons even go so far as to ascribe the prevalence of famine prices throughout the country to the great breadth of land, which through the active countenance of so many Government officers has come to be sown with cotton. Whatever truth may be contained in this last assertion, we are not quite prepared to accept the meaning set upon it by these "disinterested observers." What seems to them an unequalled misfortune may just as reasonably be regarded as a sign of general progress in the right direction. If prices have risen, so have wages; and the level of general comfort may be actually higher with flour at 14 or 16 seers a rupee than it was when the rupee could purchase twice that amount. That it is higher in many parts of India, especially in the cotton districts, there is very good ground for believing. Nor is it by any means unlikely that the substitution of cotton for grain has in many cases brought new life into fields hitherto bearing unkindly crops. The soil and climate of Guzerat for instance may be better suited to cotton than to grain, in which case Guzerat ought with proper management to get grain cheaper from abroad than she could grow it at home. Still under present conditions there may be some reason to fear that the new kind of staple is in some places superseding the old at a rate not immediately conducive to the general good. It is not for Government however to meddle rashly with the inevitable course of things. But it can greatly shorten the time and lessen the weight of suffering by aiding every effort to bring one part of India into easy communication with another.

FINANCIAL ECONOMY.

"A GENERAL OFFICER," in a recent letter to the Times, puts forth some noteworthy suggestions on the subject of financial economy in India. Of the three measures hitherto proposed for equalising income and expenditure one is immediately dismissed as unjust to the many, and another is pronounced of little consequence as a financial saving. To increase the salt-tax would be to increase a burden already lying heavily on the poor. As for a reduction of office establishments, the consequent saving will be "so small as to be barely deserving of consideration." On this point however the Indian Government seems to think otherwise.

The third measure to which he refers is an increase in the income-tax, which "will fall principally upon the wealthy traders and bankers," people who have flourished under our rule, but have hitherto "scarcely borne their fair share of the burden of the State." On the fact thus stated, few, except the traders themselves, would be inclined to take issue with the writer. For many years past it has been the chief aim of Indian financiers to reach the trading classes with the fiscal plummet; but somehow the result of ever-varying experiments has been to fish up much less than a million a-year, no small proportion of which has been furnished by people who have nothing to do with trade, and many of whom can ill spare the percentage thus levied on their small incomes. Every attempt to distribute the burden upon the right backs has hitherto ended in comparative failure. Nobody in his heart likes direct taxation, and the mercantile classes of India have a deep-rooted dislike to those prying processes which frequently vex the souls even of the most upright Englishmen in their own country. Still it is quite right and necessary that native bankers and traders, and rich gentlemen of all professions should pay towards the maintenance of the common weal a share proportioned to their several interests in the maintenance of the common weal. How does the "General Officer" propose to secure this end?

In the place of an income-tax he would introduce "a graduated capitation tax"—in purer English a poll-tax—extending to all classes in receipt of 500 rupees or upwards a-year. The different grades, we are told, "should rise by suitable stages, the distinction between any two grades being sufficiently well defined to enable an honest man with very little thought to register his name in the class to which he fairly belonged." The Government should still retain the right of appointing assessors to see justice done in all doubtful cases. Such is the process recommended by the writer in question, and the only objection we have at first sight to offer is that the process has already to some extent been tried. The principle, at any rate, of the writer's proposed reform has been followed, we think, in Mr. Massey's and Sir R. Temple's recent modifications of the system introduced by Mr. Wilson. Further improvements in the same direction however are still to carry out. Would it not be as well for instance to use the machinery of local Panchayats or Committees for the purpose of adjusting the incidence of the tax on all concerned, so that the Government might be freed from all appearance of undue prying into the household affairs of its native subjects?

Instead of increasing the salt-tax, the same writer would extend the provisions of the Act for registering assurances to all modes of transferring real property, "whether by mortgage, purchase, bequest, or any other means of succession." The law in Dutch India might be made the model of an Act which would benefit the people at large without involving too heavy a cost for the collection of such a duty. Let the certificate of registration alone assure the title to all such property, and many forms of litigation would cease to fill lawyers' pockets at the public expense. With regard to curtailment of expenditure, he would secure it by a thorough reform of the Indian military system. At present India pays heavily for a machine which always breaks down in the hour of trial. The irregular system failed in the Bhotan and Umbeylea campaigns—when will English journals cease to confound Umbeylea with Umballa?—and only the want of serious opposition prevented its failure in Abyssinia. Officers on staff pay are doing regimental duty, while hundreds of regimental officers remain unemployed. The State, moreover, has to bribe officers, by the price of their commissions, into a service once eagerly sought after by a crowd of candidates. The General Officer proposes to turn thirty-seven of the Bengal regiments into regulars, with a proper compliment of officers gained by doubling up the cadres, and compelling every officer, not otherwise employed, to rejoin his regiment. There would still remain twenty-three regiments of irregular infantry, besides contingents. The weak point of this scheme would be the sight of staff-corps majors and lieutenant-colonels doing duty as regimental captains; but the writer would get over that by giving them staff pay and the usual command allowance. We fear, however, that officers thus remanded to their regiments would greatly murmur at so dire an invasion of their thrice-established rights for the mere convenience of their employers. Their pay at the time might not be affected, but how about their chances of promotion? That the irregular system, as now worked, has proved a conspicuous failure, we do not care to deny, nor do we doubt that the reform in question would end in reducing the cost, while it largely improved the efficiency of the Indian army. But the first condition in all such efforts to retrieve the blunders committed during the last ten years must be a careful adherence to pledges deliberately made, however strong the temptation to override them. Too much cause has already been given the officers of the old Indian army to complain of the readiness with which their new masters contrive new glosses on the text of existing covenants. At the same time, the ever-growing need for reduced outlay and increased efficiency demands some sort of compromise between individual rights and the claims of the public service.

EDUCATION FOR THE MILLION.—IV. INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With such abundant elements of national education in village schools, it would not be difficult, I imagine, to make use of them to higher purposes than at present. Where endowments of land and other immunities on the part of the State exist, it has, I conceive, a right to exact a more complete fulfilment of the duties of the teachers than at present; and it might be promulgated that after a limited period for preparation village schoolmasters will be required to pass an examination, for which purpose the Normal Schools might be rendered available, as in Dublin, and if the candidates should be found deficient, the immunities of the State might justly be transferred to some other member of the family who may be qualified; the selection to be left to the village municipality, or to the head of the Normal School department, as may at the time be deemed expedient.

While secular education was progressing, the necessity for medical education forced itself on the consideration of Government, and the Council of General Education at each Presidency was requested to form a Medical College, to which should be attached a hospital to provide a class of native practitioners fit to aid, and, in case of necessity, to fulfil the duties of surgeons educated in Europe.

In order to effect this object, it became necessary that the students should have a competent knowledge of English, in which language the whole tuition was to be conducted.

Such a college in Calcutta was established in 1840, and the following is an abstract of the general result in the official report of 1854.

The Medical College consists entirely of professors of the English department, of which there are ten European and one native Assistant-Demonstrator of Anatomy. The Hospital Establishment consists of five physicians, five surgeons, and one apothecary. There were at the time of the report (1853-4) ninety-five students in the English Class and 112 in the Military and Bengali Class. The following tabular statement gives the number of students attending the several classes in Calcutta:—

Classes.	Number of Lectures.	Number Attending.	Daily Average.
Anatomy and Physiology ...	140	25	24
Descriptive and Surgical Anatomy...	100	31	29.50
Medicine ...	100	50	47.26
Surgery ...	78	50	48.51
Midwifery ...	74	50	45.89
Botany ...	58	38	34.81
Materia Medica ...	90	38	35.42
Chemistry ...	87	52	48.39
Medical Jurisprudence — Toxicology	46	41	37.65
Ophthalmia, Medicine, and Surgery	24	51	49.83

The hospital is capable of containing 300 indoor patients, and possesses a library of 4,126 volumes. The following table shows the number of patients treated in 1853:—

	Remaining last June.	Admitted.	Total in 1853.	Cured.	Relieved.	Died.	Remaining.
Indoor Patients ...	92	2,512	2,604	2,205	—	241	99
Outdoor Ditto ...	105	13,496	13,711	12,917	687	—	107
Surgical Operations ...	—	2,057	2,057	2,057	—	—	—
	197	18,205	18,402	17,269	687	241	205

When we consider the very imperfect state of the medical art in India among the natives themselves, the vast amount of as-assistance required in military hospitals, in civil stations, and in jails, it is impossible to appreciate too highly the value of such institutions, founded on scientific acquirements. Other similar establishments were established elsewhere, and have been greatly increased since.

I am indebted to a friend holding a high office in one of the London hospitals for the following opinion on the medical education and examinations in India as compared with those in practice in London:—

"As far as can be collected from the report of 1854, it appears that more than four years' attendance is required on subjects much the same as are taught in English schools. The knowledge of the subjects taught is from time to time tested, and the final examination is, to a great extent, a practical one. This is far better than the system pursued in the College of Surgeons and the Apothecaries'-hall here, which is simply oral, and that for a very short time, and occurring but once, at the end of the period of study, which is only a year and a-half."

In the North-Western districts Sir James Thomason established free hospitals at the principal towns under his charge, wherein native educated practitioners were employed. The return of 1855-6 shows the following result:—

There were at that time 171 dispensaries in twenty-one principal towns, in which 145,766 patients were relieved at a public cost of Rs. 40,966, besides Rs. 1,924 contributed in five towns by private individuals. In the Bengal Provinces there were fifteen towns, besides Calcutta, having dispensaries, in which, during the six months between 1st October, 1852, and 31st March, 1853, of which only the report had been then received, 30,211 patients had entered, and Rs. 14,162 expended by the State.

A similar report had been received for the same period of the Punjab dispensaries, of which there were eleven in the same number of towns, maintained at a public expenditure of Rs. 9,329. A Charitable Hospital has been established at Rangoon on the same footing as Government dispensaries in the large towns in India.

On turning to Madras one finds there were in the year 1855-6 thirty-two towns having public dispensaries derived from the Medical College at the Presidency, into which 136,703 patients had been admitted, at a cost of Rs. 48,702. The only reports which had been received from Bombay in 1853-4 were for the same limited period of six months, and showed in two towns—Poona in the Deccan and Bandara in Guzerat—the admission of 2,695 patients in the former and 1,006 in the latter. At the same time I received the following interesting information from the East India House:—Government civil dispensaries were at this time authorised to be established in the principal towns throughout the British dominions in India wherever the inhabitants have been found willing to contribute towards the expense. At this time the general rule appears to be that the Government should provide medicines and instruments, pay the salaries of the superintending surgeon and native doctor. The cost of the rest of the establishment, as well as of the building, to be defrayed by private subscription.

A recent report on the subjection of education has been received up to 1866-7 from the Governor-general, of which I hope to be able to avail myself in a future article, exhibiting the great progress made during the administration of the Marquis Dalhousie, and subsequently since the Government has been transferred to the Crown.

THE "CARNATIC."

The Bombay Gazette regards it as a foregone conclusion that all the circumstances involved in the total wreck of the Carnatic will be subjected to the strictest scrutiny by a competent Court. That is a matter of course; public opinion in England will be scarcely less earnest in demanding it than Anglo-Indian opinion, and we may be sure that public duty will be performed. But that is no reason why the calamity should not form a legitimate subject for comment and question. Here is a well-found steamer, commanded by a man who must have been thought fully competent to perform the duty entrusted to him; she starts from Suez with many passengers, a valuable cargo, and her Majesty's mails. The course has been run hundreds of times; it has its dangers, but they are well known, and can be guarded against. Yet what happens? She had been out of port for fifteen hours only when "breakers were suddenly seen on the starboard bow." How was that? The reef over which the breakers were rolling had not sprung up since the last P. and O. steamer started from Suez; on the contrary, its existence was laid down in the chart, and the sailing rules provided means for safely turning its flank. In short, the reef was a well known reef, and it will be desirable to find out what occasioned its sudden discovery on the starboard bow. Why did not the Carnatic evade its jaws, as scores of ships had done before, as the Tigre did that very night? We may fairly hope that the Court will elicit an answer to that question. At present no answer has been published, and the fact remains unexplained. Now there may be good and sufficient reasons for an aberration from the ordinary course of the mail steamer; but what can justify the course pursued after the ship had become jammed hard and fast on a ridge of rock whose submerged sides were washed by many fathoms of water? Seven hours after she struck the sea began to pour into the hold. She was aground from funnel to bows; from funnel to stern she was hanging over deep water. What hope could there be of getting her off in a condition to float? What reasonable hope of safety for passengers, crew, mails, cargo, except in getting them, or part of them, out of the ship, and on to the Isle of Shadwan close by? It was not the business of the passengers, indeed, they had no power to decide any question, but it was the business of the captain. Here was a ship laden with all sorts of things, precious human life, letters almost as precious, and a valuable cargo. The ship was gone, but the precious things we have mentioned were untouched, and a little way off was a safe refuge. Why did not the debarkation of passengers begin between eight and nine when the water made itself felt? Between that hour and sunset all the human beings not required for work might have been put ashore, and supplied with provisions, water, fuel, means of striking a light, and some sort of shelter; the mails might have been landed, and if there was time, the specie; the other cargo might have been exposed to the fate unhappily reserved for all. Nothing of this kind was done, or attempted to be done. The only approach towards it was the hoisting out of the boats. The consequence was that when the crash came everybody and every thing was at the mercy of the sea. It was almost by an accident that the womenkind were in a boat, and they would have been lost but for the presence of mind on the part of the brave man who cut the tackle. It was by a mere chance that means of striking a light were conveyed ashore, and without fire what would have been the fate of those who had the good luck to reach the land? All they had, by chance, was a box of lucifer matches and one rocket. Without these the forlorn wretches on the Isle of Shadwan would have seen the Sumatra go by, but the Sumatra would not have seen them—and what would have been their fate?

THE INDIAN DEFICIT.

The Englishman complains that ever since the pressure of Mr. Wilson's iron grasp was taken off, the Budget system has failed to do its work in India. It neither estimates our wants with accuracy, nor does it maintain the equilibrium between our revenue and expenditure. But the fault in this case does not lie with the system. That system acts with perfect certainty in other countries, and with due allowance made for the delays incident to time and space in this vast empire, we have a right to demand an equal success from it here. We venture to say that no one who is acquainted with the Finance Ministers whom England has sent us since 1862 will be at a difficulty to find out the cause, and, thoroughly as we believe in the value of English supervision, we would rather a hundred times have a picked Civilian at the head of the Department than the class of men we have for seven years received from home. Fortunately for Sir Richard Temple, the discoveries have taken place at too early a period in his career for him to be held directly responsible. The whole department has been disorganised for the past seven years, and perhaps all that can be said of the present Finance Minister is that he suffered from one predecessor's age and incompetence, and from another's laziness and girlish anxiety about his health. But the truth being now known we hold it to be the imperative duty of the Government to tell the whole truth. There is nothing in such cases like facing the difficulty, and, at whatever sacrifice, setting it right. We noticed the other day that the Friend urged fresh taxation as the means of filling up the gap. But we protest, on behalf both of English capitalists in this country and of the native population, against any such bold and indiscriminating suggestions. The Government must do its share, and for every rupee that it lays on the tax-payer, it should retrench two from its own expenditure. The public must see a bona fide effort at economy on the part of the Government, and a bona fide determination to maintain a permanent equilibrium in the finances before it will submit to further taxation. Temporary imposts to meet temporary but ever recurring deficits are mere quack medicines—bread pills, with a little jalap in them, easy enough to swallow but utterly powerless to reach the root of the disease. Judging from the past three years, the revenues of British India are steadily and permanently three millions per annum below the cost of the administration; and even in this current year of anxious economy and personal letters from the Viceroy to the heads of provinces, the deficit cannot be reduced much below two millions. If three millions a-year are required to produce a permanent equilibrium, we have a right to demand that two shall be obtained by retrenchment. Let the public see the Government curtailing its own expenses before they are called upon to curtail theirs. If the Government can do this, there is no fear but the remainder will be forthcoming.

THE HON. MR. MAINE.

It is but seven years that Mr. Maine has spent in India—including, we think, but one short visit home—but the labours and influence of a man of his attainments, coming to this country with his powers fully matured, are not in any way to be measured by the superficial test of length of service. Long before Mr. Maine looked to become an Indian legislator and lawgiver, he had, by his work on "Ancient Law," achieved his position as the first of literary jurists of the day. As Professor of Civil Law at Cambridge and Reader of Jurisprudence in London, he had attained proficiency in the gift of applying the principles of jurisprudence to the problems of modern legislation and to the practical administration of the law. Coming to India in 1862, in the prime of his power, and with, no doubt, an eager desire to cope with still more difficult tasks, he found work awaiting him more varied, if not more formidable, than he could have wished. Much of the rougher and foundational work had been done; but the transition stage from Company to Crown had scarcely been passed through. Codes and formal modern ordinances were taking the place of executive orders and temporary "regulations," while Legislative Councils, provincial and supreme, were beginning to pile up that heap of new laws and statutes for all of which Mr. Maine was in some sort compelled to stand sponsor, whilst his utmost efforts were necessarily ineffectual to restrict their number, or to reduce them to that harmony and unity which as an accomplished jurist he must have desired. India is exacting on all Englishmen within its borders who are willing and capable as workers, and she uses them without very scrupulous regard to that perfected division of labour which at home secures the utmost that can be got from each in his own speciality. Mr. Maine, though legal member, has, in his character of executive councillor, intermeddled with every branch of administration, not excepting the making of peace and war. During the brief tenure of the Viceroyalty by Lord Elgin, whose powers were then failing, Mr. Maine had much to do with the actual government of the country, aided of course by the local knowledge of his colleagues. It was after that period of unsettlement that Sir John Lawrence was chosen as pre-eminently fitted, alike by strength of character and experience, to guide the country through the financial and administrative difficulties that annexation and the Mutiny had left behind. Then Mr. Maine was left more free to prosecute his own onerous duties, of which the settling, applying, and to some extent the revisal of the codes formed the more prominent portion. But these were only a small part of the work pressing on the legal member who had to devise laws, as the Remarriage Act, and others affecting succession and inheritance, in which the wide toleration shown by the British Government in India had to be reconciled with the new reign of law and the claims of justice to individuals. The Acts needed to adapt the various courts and the subordinate judicial service to the altered conditions of modern procedure have been very numerous, all of them demanding the closest practical skill, and a firm grasp of principles. Then, again, the commercial law of India had to be adapted to the reforms at home and to the requirements of the age of joint-stockeries and the enormously increased foreign trade of India. In almost all these new paths Mr. Maine has, while taking due account of conditions to him anomalous and strange, succeeded in bringing his measures not only up to the level of what was already needed here, but in many respects beyond the still confused and conflicting state of English law. It has been said that Mr. Maine does not possess an exact knowledge of the country, or any close acquaintance with the people for whom he has been making the laws. Granting that some deference must be shown for these assertions, Mr. Maine has disarmed criticism of all importance, by the admirable discrimination with which he has chosen as guides in practical questions the men most worthily and safely to be trusted as representing the permanent interests of India and her people.—Times of India.

Miscellaneous.

THE AGRA DURBAR.—The Indian Volunteer Gazette, a Simla print, professes to be in a position to state that nothing will be definitively settled concerning the durbar until the first meeting of the Viceroy's Council in October.

PROPOSED COLLEGE.—There is a proposal to establish a college at the capital of the North-Western Provinces. The Lieutenant-Governor supports the project, and has himself contributed Rs. 2,000 to aid in furthering it. He is sanguine that the Supreme Government will aid.

PIG-STICKING AT MEERUT.—From a Meerut correspondent's letter in the Mofussilite, it appears that the Tent Club of that division expect to have the pleasure of Lord Mayo trying a spear with them at pig-sticking on his way to Raneehet.

ACCIDENTS FROM LIGHTNING.—Nineteen men were lately struck to the ground by lightning at the Cossipore gun foundry whilst casting a gun. A European overseer named Jack, for having saved them from being burnt by the molten metal, has been presented by the Government with a silver watch.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—Mr. Aitchison took charge of the Foreign Office from Mr. Seton-Karr at Simla on the 1st October. Mr. Seton-Karr, and the Hon. H. S. Maine, sailed for England from Bombay by the steamer of October 9. The Hon. B. H. Ellis has been allowed a furlough of six months from the date of departure of the mail steamer of 30th October.

BURMAH.—Mr. J. S. Manook, the Kullawoon of Mandalay, has been appointed by the Burmese Government to sit with the Political Agent for the trial of mixed suits, under Article V. of the late Treaty with Burmah.—It is said by a contemporary that Major McMahon may succeed Major Sladen as Resident at Mandalay, and that he will shortly take up the appointment.

EUROPEAN ASSURANCE COMPANY.—On receiving word from Bombay of the telegrams intimating that petitions to wind up the European Assurance Company had been presented to the Court of Chancery, Mr. J. L. Napier Hay, the Calcutta secretary, publicly notified, by order of the directors there, that the business of the branch was suspended for the time being.

UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS.—The Government of India has, the Indian Daily News believes, re-solicited the orders of the Secretary of State, on the recommendation made in 1868, that uncovenanted servants, with salaries of less than Rs. 10,000 per annum, appointed before the 19th May, 1855, may be allowed to draw one-third or half pay pension irrespective of the limits laid down in the Pension Rules of 1864.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—We learn of the death at Jubbulpore, on the 25th September, of the Rev. Finch d'Anyers Willis, chaplain of that station; he was but thirty years of age, and had been only one season in the country; it was of typhoid fever he died. Mr. Willis's active ministrations among the sick in the military hospital at Jubbulpore during the late trying season are said to have induced the disease to which he at last succumbed.

DEPARTURE OF THE HON. H. S. MAINE.—At the meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla on Sept. 24, H.E. the Viceroy said, "I wish to give notice that, at the first meeting of the Council at Calcutta, I shall move a resolution expressive of the high sense which his colleagues entertain of the long, faithful, and valuable services of the Hon. Henry Sumner Maine; and I shall ask the Council to concur with me in expressing regret for his departure, and sincere wishes for his future welfare and happiness."

CHOLERA AT PESHAWUR.—We are glad to hear that the cholera is leaving Peshawur. On the 25th no fresh cases had occurred amongst the Europeans, and only some few in the native lines. In the city there were about thirty deaths. The cholera at Peshawur appears to have been of a most virulent type; in many cases the patient died in a few hours, even without all the usual symptoms of cholera. H.M.'s 36th has suffered severely, having lost more than seventy men. It is supposed that not fewer than one hundred and eighty Europeans have died, and about fifteen hundred natives.—Delhi Gazette, October 2.—According to the Pioneer, H.M.'s 104th are proceeding to Cherat, a hill about four thousand feet high, thirty miles from Peshawur. The deaths in the Artillery have been 41; in the 36th Foot, 103; and in the 104th Fusiliers over 60, making in all rather more than 200 Europeans, including women and children. The wife of the paymaster of the 104th died on the evening of the 26th ultimo. Amongst natives the mortality has been greater still. The deaths in the city are even now, though the disease has abated, from 32 to 35 daily, while the daily average, counting from the commencement of the disease, is no less than 70. The native regiments have suffered least—about 60 men; this does not, however, include camp followers. Altogether, the deaths from cholera, European and native, within less than a month fell just within two thousand.

FOOD PROSPECTS IN THE PUNJAB.—The prospects of the Punjab have altered very materially for the better since the publication of the memorandum of the 1st of September. The crops were then in many districts drying up from the continued drought, and an immediate fall of rain was necessary to save a portion of the Punjab from famine. The rain, so urgently needed, has at last fallen, and on Saturday, the 4th, and Sunday, the 5th of September, seems to have been very general in the Punjab from the Sutlej to the Jhelum, or even the Indus. The majority of the reports here published were despatched previous to the late fall of rain; but telegrams, private and other letters have been received from many districts, and all are to the effect that the rain has been of the utmost benefit, and has saved the kharif harvest, which in some districts will be much below the average, irretrievable harm having been already done by the drought; but in others will be average, or above the average. Nevertheless, the circular of the Central Committee, published on the 1st of September, and asking for subscriptions for the relief of distress, as much as ever deserves attention. The low rates of labour and the high prices of food have created an immense amount of distress, upon which a fall of rain can have no effect for a considerable time. Prices will eventually fall, but while they continue, as at present, at famine height, there must be a large number of the population on the verge of starvation, never able to obtain a full meal, and in whose behalf the appeal of the Committee should meet with a generous response from the public.

Mr. SETON-KARR.—The Civil Service gave Mr. Seton Karr a farewell dinner at the United Service Club on the evening of Wednesday (Sept. 29), and besides all the civilians at present on duty, or on leave at Simla, there were as guests, Sir H. Durand, Dr. Murray Mitchell, Colonel James, of the Commissariat, General Norman, Major Burne, Colonel Hervey, Colonel Strachey, and Major Beynon. Mr. E. C. Bayley was in the chair. Mr. John Strachey proposed the health of Mr. Seton-Karr, who responded in his best style. He alluded to the family ties which called him home. His place in the social circle of his own family none could fill; his place in the Government of India had found another and a worthy occupant. He reviewed shortly the great events which had happened in India since his arrival, twenty-seven years ago. Then men's mouths were full of the splendid deeds of Nott and Pollock—Lord Ellenborough had just come out, and he was the first Governor General of whom he had had personal experience; Lord Hardinge associated his name with the valiant actions against the Sikhs; Lord Dalhousie, the master whom it was his pride and his honour to serve, had signalled himself by the consolidation of the newly-acquired province, and by various acts of annexation, which he, Mr. Seton-Karr, speaking now for the last time in India, contended were righteous and justifiable. Lord Channing saw the Empire in flames; he left it peaceful and in order. His great successor, the Viceroy who had risen from the ranks of the service to which so many who listened belonged, had consistently in his career proved his strong sense of duty, and posterity would form of him a juster estimate than those who now declaimed against him as narrow-minded and illiberal. If he might say a few words about himself, he would remark that he should prefer some active career to idleness on his return to England; though if he had to live his life over again he would hope to profit by experience and be more tolerant than in some cases he had been of the opinion of others; there were many public acts which he would most certainly under similar circumstances repeat. He felt strong attachment to the service which he was leaving, a service remarkable for its active competition and generous rivalry. In the course of his speech, Mr. Seton-Karr paid a touching tribute to Sir J. P. Grant, with whom, in the course of his service, he had had to work in more than one capacity. The speech was throughout enthusiastically received, and Mr. Seton-Karr sat down amid much cheering.—Mofussilite.

MILITARY.—The 11th Bengal Cavalry have been ordered to proceed without delay to Calcutta, so as to arrive there not later than the 15th November. It is conjectured that this order has connection with the reception of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh.—Major-General Beatson, who was seriously ill, is now better, and has resumed command of the Sirhind Division.—Lieutenant-Colonel J. Willes has been appointed to succeed Major-General Macpherson as Commissary-General of the Bengal Army. Colonel Willes is the officer at present officiating.—It is reported from Abbotabad that a garrison of 800 infantry, a squadron of cavalry, and a battery of Mountain Train Artillery, is to be stationed in Agror.—Major Glasse will be tried at the criminal sessions of the Chief Court of the Punjab, which opened on the 18th October.—It is reported that Colonel Haig has signified his willingness to accept the post of Chief Engineer Central Provinces, which had been offered to and declined by him in the first instance.—Major Saunders, at present aide-de-camp to his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor N.W.P., is likely, the Englishman states, to vacate his present appointment for one in which his high qualities as a soldier will have more scope; rumour says he will be succeeded on the staff of Sir William Muir by Lieutenant B. Wemyss, Adjutant 41st Native Infantry, at present on leave at Nynce Tal.—The contest which has gone on for years between the civil authorities and successive Commanders-in-Chief as to the management of the Punjab Frontier Force, is, according to the Friend, likely to be decided in favour of the latter; General Wilde, the staunch supporter of the Punjab Government, has gone over to the enemy; the arguments on both sides almost balance each other, or a decision would have been come to long ago. If the change is made, the first result will probably be, the appointment of an outsider to the command; Colonel Wilson is spoken of, who was Sir Henry Lawrence's right-hand man at Lucknow, but the force would prefer one of its own number.—From Cawnpore it is reported that the band and six companies of the 14th Regiment and the division of Royal Artillery have all returned to cantonments from the cholera camp, where they had been for two months.—The Government of India has, says the Indian Daily News, declined to sanction the proposition of the Chief Commissioner, British Burmah, to substitute native troops of the Bengal Army for those of the Madras Army in the garrisons of the Burman Province.—Though (says the Pioneer) in deference to "The Senior" and the Horse Guards, the promotion of Indian colonels is stopped, until the Commission have settled the knotty point of equalisation, and redressed the balance of the East by calling generals into existence in the West, still the promotion of captains and majors of the Indian lists to majorities and lieutenant-colonels will go on as of yore.—The Pioneer hears that, owing to the sickly state of the 103rd Royal Bombay Fusiliers at Morar, it is determined to remove them in this relief to Delhi and Roorkee; the 1st Battalion 11th Foot from Fyzabad will, we believe, take their place at Gwalior. From the same cause alterations will be made in the destination of several batteries of the A Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, in order to relieve the two batteries at Peshawur—A and D going to Peshawur, and B and E to Rawul Pindce and Sealkote respectively.—We are glad to learn from Subathoo that the 41st Regiment has been free from cholera for the last twenty days; one of the detachments is under orders to return to barracks on the 5th, and the remainder on the 10th inst.—Pioneer, Oct. 1.

Madras.

JUDICIAL.—It is said that Sir Adam Bittleston has sent in his resignation of the office of Puisne Justice of Madras, and that in all probability he would be leaving India about October.

MILITARY.—The Madras Government has had under consideration the question of reducing the detachment of native infantry at Trichore from two companies to one company, and has come to the conclusion that, as the efficiency of the troops of his Highness the Rajah of Cochin has not much improved, it is not desirable for the present to make any reduction in the strength of the detachment.

RETRENCHMENT.—A Madras contemporary says:—"In pursuance of the recent stringent orders of the Secretary of State to effect a reduction in military expenditure, the Government have, on the recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, abolished the Quarter-master-general's Departments of the Southern Division and Ceded districts. This is but the precursor of further great and important reductions that are at present in contemplation."

Bombay.

THE DECCAN.—The whole of the Deccan has enjoyed a most abundant monsoon, and a fine rice harvest is expected.

LADY MANSFIELD.—It has almost been settled that Lady Mansfield is to start for Bombay at the beginning of November, and that she will leave for England by the mail steamer of the 20th November.

MARWAR.—Large numbers of starving Marwarces are again compelled to leave their own country, and to flock to Sind for sustenance.

A QUERY.—Referring to the loss of the Carnatic, the Bombay Guardian puts a curious question:—"The waters of the Gulf of Suez have lately been let into the Suez Canal. Has this lowered the water in the Gulf?"

THE LOSS OF THE "CARNATIC."—The depositions of several of the passengers by the steam-ship Carnatic have been taken by the Chief Magistrate, by order of the Bombay Government, for transmission to the Board of Trade in London. There are very few discrepancies in the statements of the different gentlemen, and those only of the merest detail.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.—A Bombay telegram of October 21 says that H.M.'s Fort ran aground near Cape Guardafui, while cruising in quest of slave dhows. She sustained considerable damage. It is stated that the Arabs have fired upon H.M.'s gunboat Clyde, near Muscat. It is expected that H.M.'s Daphne will shortly proceed to the Persian Gulf.

LOCUSTS IN WESTERN INDIA.—Locusts swarm like the dust of the earth throughout Marwar, Jodhpore, Ajmere, and the Mahi-Kanta. Clouds of them have also visited Guzerat. In all these districts great injury has been done by them. An extraordinary flight of locusts—seven miles long, five miles broad, and 300 to 400 feet in depth—visited the Mahi-Kanta last week, doing great mischief. Enormous quantities of grain have been imported into Guzerat from Bombay during the first week of October in consequence of the province being overrun with locusts.

COTTON FRAUDS BILL.—A meeting of native merchants was held on Wednesday, October 6, at Messrs. Jefferson, Campbell and Co.'s, Bombay, to consider what action should be taken with reference to the Cotton Frauds Bill at present before the Legislative Council. The meeting appointed a committee with instructions to have a petition prepared for presentation to his Excellency the Governor in Council, praying that the further progress of the Bill may be deferred for the present, and that certain amendments (to be specified in the petition) may be made in the Bill.

SOUTHERN MAHRATTA COUNTRY.—The latest reports we have from the Southern Mahratta Country are up to the 28th September. The weather had been all that could be desired for the crops, and the cotton plants were from four to six inches above ground, continuing to look well. It was the general opinion that the stock of cotton remaining in those districts to go forward from last season's crop was much less than has been usual at the end of the monsoon. It was estimated that of saw-ginned Dharwar and Compta together some 55,000 bales remained to be shipped. Cotton has, therefore, been going to the coast much later this season than it did last, and some of it may have been damaged by the rains on the way.

DEPARTURE OF THE TROOP SHIP "MALABAR."—The following officers and troops proceeded to Suez for England in H.M.'s troop-ship Malabar, on October 8:—Col. Pratt, C.B., 23rd Regt., wife and child; Col. Moore, 108th Regt.; Lieutenant-Colonel Elgee, 23rd Regt., wife and children; Surgs. Reade, V.C., and wife, and Webb; Major Twentymann, 18th Hussars, and wife; Capt. Hutton, 59th Regt.; Cumming, 59th Regt., and wife; Tilley, 23rd Regt.; Graham, 23rd Regt.; Holroyd, 23rd Regt.; Harcourt, R.A., and Winstanley, 23rd Regt.; Assist.-Surg. McCarthy, 23rd Regt.; Capt. Tulloch and Liddell, 23rd Regt.; Assist.-Surg. Parr, R.A.; Capt. Warne, 24th Foot, and Fenn, 49th; Lieuts. Seagram, Leslie, and Hutchinson, 23rd Regt.; Assist.-Surg. West, 23rd Regt.; Lieuts. Bradshaw, ditto, Goodall, 59th Foot, Knox, and Norman, 23rd Foot; Quarter-Master Knighley, 23rd Foot; Ensigns Griffiths, Anderson, Boddam, Mayhew, 23rd Foot; Lieut. Yates, 3rd Bombay, N.I. Troops:—270 invalids and time-expired men, 17 women, 30 children from general depot; 22 invalids, 4 women, 2 children from Kurrachee depot; 10 invalids, 1 woman, 4 children, Madras Presidency from Kamptee. 560 staff sergeants, and non-commissioned rank and file, &c.; 35 wives of soldiers, 75 children of soldiers.

MILITARY.—It is understood that there is every probability that the move of the 8th (King's) Regiment and 3rd Cavalry into Guzerat will be postponed until next year on account of the famine there. —Owing to the prevailing scarcity in Marwar and part of Rajpootana the movements in relief of the 11th, 20th, and 28th Regiments N.I. have been postponed until the marching season of 1870-71.—The left wing of the 2nd Queen's has taken the place of the Royal Welch Fusiliers at Bombay, but about the end of March it will be relieved by a wing of the 88th Regiment (Connaught Rangers) from Nowshera, and will return to Poona.—The Bays are to leave Mhow for Bombay about the 15th December, marching to Khundwah, from whence they will proceed on by rail, leaving their camp equipage for the 15th Hussars to take over on arrival at Khundwah, and the horses on arrival at Mhow. Major Fawcett exchanges with Major Burnell to the 16th Lancers at Bangalore.—Captain A. W. Macnaughten, 3rd Regiment Light Cavalry, has been appointed to officiate as Superintendent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Police during the absence of Lieut. S. Babington, or until further orders.—Lieut. Seton, Bombay Staff Corps, has been granted thirty days' preparatory leave to proceed to the Presidency for the purpose of obtaining a final medical certificate to England.

CHANDA COAL.—It is said that another trial has been made by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway of the suitability or otherwise of Chanda coal for the use of railway locomotives, but the result has not proved quite satisfactory.

REPORTED MASSACRE ON THE HIGH SEAS.—The ship Princess Dagmar, Captain Lewis, belonging to D. Corsar, Esq., Arbroath, Scotland, arrived in Bombay harbour on Friday, Oct. 8, with a cargo of coals from Newcastle, N.S.W., which port she left on the 1st of August last. Captain Lewis reports that he came by the North-east Channel, and while in the Torres Straits was boarded by the captain of a cutter from Sydney, who had been sent out in search of a vessel (supposed to be the Catherine Seymour) which left Sydney for the pearl fishing about Wednesday Island. There had been twenty-two men on board the vessel, and the natives had boarded her, murdered the men, killing the captain also, by throwing a spear in at the skylight whilst he was asleep in the cabin, and then set fire to the ship. The captain's wife (Mrs. Gascoigne) and son had also been on board the vessel, and are supposed to have been carried off by the natives as a revenge for the loss of some of the women of the island who had been carried off on a previous occasion by European sailors. The captain and his wife were Europeans, but no exact information can be obtained as to whether the men who are supposed to have been massacred were Europeans or not. The ship had been picked up, and the information which the captain of the Princess Dagmar brought to Bombay had been got from her log by the master of the cutter who hailed him in the Straits, and asked that the tidings should be conveyed to the people at home.

A TIGER.—A correspondent at Bhewndy sends the Times of India the following account of an adventure with a tiger:—"A rather tragical occurrence took place near here this morning, September 27. A fucker and two of the Tanna police were travelling hither from the eastward on the Agra Trunk-road, and at about two miles from this they halted to drink at a nullah, when a tiger made his appearance, apparently on the same errand. The fucker begged the sepoys to remain quiet, as he had a charm which would defend him against any animal, and enable him to destroy the tiger single-handed, but on his going towards the beast he sprang on him, and in spite of his charm the poor fucker was instantly killed, on which the sepoys immediately loaded and fired at the brute, wounding him severely, and finished him off with a second shot. The dead tiger and the body of the fucker have been brought in. The poor man appears to have been dreadfully mauled and torn, especially about the head; and his body presents an awful spectacle, considering how instantaneously the deadly injuries were inflicted. The tiger was an old male, but in poor condition; he measured 7 feet 6 inches in length, and 3 feet 6 inches in height; his foreleg just above the foot was 10½ inches in circumference; his teeth and claws appeared very much worn. It is current here that there are more tigers in this neighbourhood. It is only a few days back when on the road that one of my peons came running back to me in a great fright, and stammered out, 'Sahib! Sahib! blot burra burra bang udhar!' I looked in the direction pointed out, and saw him plainly enough, but as I was totally unarmed I thought discretion the better part of valour, so walked off quietly."

THE INDIAN LOCUST.—What the Indian locust is and what it does may be seen from the following account by a Rajpoot of Marwar given by a contemporary:—"The female chooses sandy soil, still moist with rain, in which to lay her eggs. She pushes her abdomen about 1½ inch into the sand; and drawing it out, leaves behind the sheath. In that is deposited the spawn, which looks like spittle, and consists of 108 eggs. If the ground be hard and the eggs are not buried, they come to nothing. The eggs are hatched in about fourteen days. In favourable ground they have great vitality, and neither rain nor ploughing them in has any effect in destroying them. The young issue from the ground like white ants from their nest, and follow one another in a direct line, never turning to the right or left. As they are always in dense masses when they lay their eggs, the young are in masses still more dense, and cover the ground to the depth, in places, of three or four inches. As soon as born they take a decidedly easterly direction, and crawl in that direction, covering the ground in dense masses for a breadth of four or five miles, and a length of perhaps ten to twenty miles in great phalanxes. They destroy all living vegetation in their path so completely as to give the idea that no green plant had ever grown there. Till they get their wings they usually crawl along the ground, unless disturbed, when they hurry on by very diminutive hops when young, and larger ones as they increase in size. A range of hills will deflect their course to the north or south, as will a crowd of villagers beating tom-toms; and the latter frequently gives rise to fights between these driving them out of their lands, and the other party preventing them from entering theirs. No other obstacle seems to stay their course. If a piece of water lies in their path they swim over it—if a wall they climb over it—if a well, they fall into it, till it is choked up. Myriads are destroyed in this way, by falling into ditches and pits, and inequalities in the ground, out of which they cannot escape. Myriads more may be washed away by heavy rains whilst they are still very young, and myriads are destroyed by a bird, the "Bayah," a little larger than a sparrow, which is said to pierce a hundred locusts for each one that it eats, and which follows the young swarms in flocks. Locusts change their skins seven times. They are first a blackish colour, next brown, then brown with green, then green with red, and last of all green with yellow. There is an interval of seven days between each change. They get their wings only after the last change, or when they are forty-nine days old. They take three days in undergoing this change, and before their wings are strong enough to bear them. When they can once fly they are blown along by the wind from place to place during the day, and rest during the night. At this stage of their existence they prefer alighting on trees and shrubs, which they completely bare to the ground. They travel in this way from twenty to twenty-four miles a day, till they reach the neighbourhood of the sea. When they taste the salt they die, and the people on the sea coast collect their dry bodies, pound and eat them. They lay their eggs only once during their life time. Their visits afflict the country once in twelve years, and they continue for three years. On this occasion they have come after only seven years' interval."

PROPOSED INTRODUCTION OF THE METRIC SYSTEM.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—The despatch of your Excellency's predecessor in Council, dated Nov. 6, 1868, relative to the introduction in India of the metric system in connection with weights, has been considered by me in council. I forward herewith copy of a letter dated March 27, 1869, from the Board of Trade, to which department a reference was made upon the subject, and also copy of a memorandum by the Warden of the Standards.

I consider that your lordship's predecessor in Council acted with due judgment in limiting the reform for the present to weights, and I approve of the adoption of the kilogramme as the new unit of weight, in preference to the English pound.

The propositions submitted in the 11th paragraph of the despatch under reply have my approval, and I accord my assent to them.

I desire to be furnished with a report on the operation of the new system, after a fair period has been allowed for the experiment.—I have, &c., London, June 10, 1869.

ARCYLL.

RE-ARRANGEMENT OF THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

Simla, Sept. 17.—The expansion of the business of this department, consequent on the determination of the Government to carry out railways directly under its own officers, and to control more effectually the operations of the old companies, and the extension of irrigation works, and the necessity for watching more closely their financial results, has made it essential to modify, in some degree, the system under which the business has, till now, been conducted.

The Governor-general in Council, at this early stage of the proceedings, is unable to determine precisely the system which will be most suitable for permanent adoption; but, so far as it can be foreseen, an effort should be made to place the conduct of business at once, and as closely as possible, on the footing on which it will hereafter have to be carried out.

The Government of India is disposed to consider that the integrity of the Public Works Department should at least so far be maintained that the whole of the business should continue to be carried on in one department of the Government, and that, to such an extent as is practicable, the several branches of duty should be conducted on the same general principles, and under the same system. As regards the financial control of the operations of the department, it is also thought that a certain unity of management and system is desirable. Moreover, great practical inconvenience would arise if any complete severance of the various branches of the department were made, particularly at the moment when there is a prospect of a large development of actual work.

At present the system under which the department is managed is generally as follows:—The business is divided into the following branches:—

- |                    |                   |
|--------------------|-------------------|
| 1. Military Works. | 5. Establishment. |
| 2. Civil Works.    | 6. Account.       |
| 3. Irrigation.     | 7. Forests.       |
| 4. Railway.        |                   |

The work in each branch is superintended by an officer—the Inspectors general of military works and irrigation works and forests, the Under-Secretary and two assistant secretaries, having charge each of one branch. The Accountant general, with two assistants, manages the accounts. There is an extra assistant secretary, who had charge of the office at the Presidency during the absence of the Government, and who helps generally where he is needed. Within the last few weeks an extra assistant has also been obtained to help in the railway branch, where the work is exceedingly heavy. This arrangement is for the present temporary, but some permanent measure of the kind will be necessary, and will shortly be brought forward.

The Secretary is expected to exercise a complete control over all the separate branches.

To meet the requirements of the department in its present condition, the Governor general in Council is of opinion that it may most conveniently be divided into the following main branches:—

1. Buildings and roads—to include the present military and civil works branches. 2. Irrigation. 3. Railway. 4. Accounts. The above to be placed under officers, to be termed "Deputy Secretary;" the Inspectors general of military works and irrigation, and the Accountant general, being the deputy secretaries in their several branches.

Besides the above, the forest business will remain under the Inspector general of Forests, and the establishment branch will be continued with a little modification, the assistant secretary in charge of it being designated "Under Secretary."

The Deputy Secretaries will have placed on them the complete responsibility for all the business done in their branches, in the same sense that the responsibility has, till now, rested on the secretary. They will also ordinarily sign letters containing the orders of the Government of India relating to their several branches.

The Secretary will exercise a general control over all the business, and will sign all very important letters, or resolutions, &c. He will be expected to watch all the operations of the branches generally, and be cognisant of all important matters dealt with.

To give effect to the above resolution the following appointments are made:—

Col. W. A. Crommelin, C.B., R.E., inspector-general of military works, to be also deputy secretary to the Government of India in the Buildings and Roads Branch.

Col. J. C. Anderson, R.E., officiating inspector-general, irrigation works, to officiate also as deputy secretary to the Government of India in the Irrigation Branch.

Major E. C. S. Williams, R.E., under secretary in the public works department, to be deputy secretary to the Government of India in the Railway Branch.

Lieut. col. G. Chesney, R.E., accountant-general, to be also deputy secretary to the Government of India in the public works department in the Accounts Branch.

Mr. A. B. Sampson, B.A., assistant secretary, to be under secretary to the Government of India in the public works department.

Mr. J. S. Thorpe to be assistant secretary to the Government of India in the public works department, as a temporary arrangement.

The whole of the above appointments are to be regarded as provisional and temporary only, and to be subject to any modification which the Government of India may hereafter think necessary.

THE EX-NAWAB OF TONK.

Sept. 15.—No. 1,308.—The undermentioned despatch from the Secy. of State for India, No. 165, dated Aug. 10 last, containing the decision of H.M.'s Govt. in the case of the ex-Nawab of Tonk, is published for general information:—

No. 165—Political.

India Office, London, Aug. 10, 1869.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—H.M.'s Govt. have had under their consideration the memorial of the ex-Nawab of Tonk, with the documentary evidence appended to it, which your Excellency has forwarded with your letter, No. 83, of March 13 last, in the Foreign Department.

2. After a careful examination of all the evidence advanced upon both sides, I cannot discern any sufficient grounds for departing from the opinion which your Excellency's Govt. has expressed with respect to the guilty complicity of the Nawab in the murderous outrage which resulted in his banishment to Benares.—I have, &c., (Signed) ARGYLL.

RESUMPTION OF COMMAND AFTER FURLOUGH.

Simla, Sept. 16.—No. 967.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published for general information: Military.—No. 210.

India Office, London, Aug. 10.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor General of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have had under my consideration in Council your Lordship's letter dated June 3 last, No. 171, requesting a decision on the question raised by the Government of Madras, whether lieutenant-colonels of the local service, who have elected the furlough rules of 1796, are entitled to resume the command of their regiments on their return to India from leave of absence.

2. According to the custom in the Indian army under the former organisation, a lieutenant-colonel commanding a regiment, when going on furlough under the regulations of 1796, resigned his command; but, as a matter of course, on his return he was appointed to the command either of that corps or of another to which he had been transferred in his absence.

3. By the new organisation, however, if he were to resign the command of his regiment, another officer would be appointed thereto; and, on the return of the lieutenant-colonel, it might probably happen that there would be no vacancy to which he could be appointed.

4. To permit a local officer, under the furlough rules of 1796, to retain his command as if he were an officer of the staff corps, is no doubt open to the objection raised by the Commander-in-Chief, that it is giving him the benefit of both sets of furlough rules. It must, however, be borne in mind that two different matters are bound up in the choice of furlough rules, namely, the mode of computing furlough and pay while on leave, and the mode of reckoning service for pension. An officer who has elected the rules of 1796 might be willing to come under the regulations of 1868, so far as his furlough is concerned, and yet might be loath to do so, on account of the benefits as regards his service for pension, which he would forfeit by giving up the rules of 1796.

5. Bearing in mind the difficulty in which such officers may thus be placed, and considering the comparatively small number to whom the rules of 1796 are now applicable, I have no objection to permit an exception to be made, so far as to permit officers of the local service, appointed to be commandants of regiments, who have chosen to abide by the furlough rules of 1796, to retain their appointments during the period of furlough, and on the rates of pay sanctioned by those rules.—I have, &c., (Signed) ARGYLL.

OFFICERS ON DUTY WITH INVALIDS.

Head-Quarters, Simla, Sept. 14.—No. 263.—The C. in C. has been pleased to promulgate the following rules for the guidance of general officers in detailing officers for duty with detachments proceeding to the ports of embarkation and to England:—

I. On every occasion of a party of invalids proceeding from a division to the port of embarkation, an officer who is ordered to England, and who is entitled to a passage at the public expense, is to be placed in immediate charge of the party, the documents ordered to accompany the men being handed over to him. This officer will retain possession of all necessary papers, including those he receives at the embarkation depots, during the entire transit, and until he gives over charge of the detachment at Netley Hospital. On no account is he to hand over the custody of the papers, or be removed from the immediate charge of his party en route. It will be understood that the above rule is not to interfere with the regulations of the service, which require the senior officer of the entire detachment to assume command and be responsible for discipline.

II. Officers ordered to England for duty at the regimental depots will be detailed for duty with detachments proceeding by the overland route, whether consisting of invalids or men in health.

III. Officers of the British service (see G.O. No. 187 of 1866 [Bombay G.G.O. No. 518 Sept. 11, 1866] not employed upon the staff), invalided to England are entitled to passages at the public expense, and their services are to be utilised for duty with troops either by the overland or Cape route, when required, and when the certificate of the medical board does not declare them to be unfit for such duty. Other officers entitled to public passages (as detailed in G.G.O. No. 471 [Bombay G.G.O. No. 305, May 30, 1865] May 11, 1865, page 73 S.O.) are also available for duty when required.

IV. If a sufficient number of officers entitled to public passages are not available, officers proceeding home on their private affairs are to be attached to the parties; but these officers must understand that they will have no claim to embark with the troops, unless there shall be no officers at the ports of embarkation with claims to free passages available to relieve them.

V. The following is the scale of officers to be employed with detachments of troops embarking for England via the Cape:—

For troops attached to the Cape.
For detachments of	20 and under	60	...	1 officer.
"	60	"	90	...	2 officers.
"	90	"	150	...	3 "
"	150	"	300	...	4 "
"	400	"	500	...	6 "

For the overland route the proportion is never to be less than two officers per 100 men.

The above scales are exclusive of medical officers.

In cases of emergency, and when regiments and detachments embark together, officers belonging to the former may be attached to the latter for duty during the voyage.

VI. When there is an insufficiency of officers entitled to free passages at the ports of embarkation to make up the required complement, officers of the British service proceeding home on their private affairs shall be next detailed for the duty.

VII. When no officers proceeding on leave are available, a special report must be at once made for the orders of the C. in C. of the Presidency (by telegraph if necessary), who will give such instructions as the exigencies of the case may require.

VIII. The scales laid down in para V. will be adhered to as far as possible by general officers of divisions in despatching the parties down-country for embarkation.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

Sept. 20.—No. 3,535.—Read office memorandum from the home department, No. 602, dated the 25th ult., and enclosures, proposing that a military officer on the invalid establishment who holds a civil appointment should be allowed leave of absence under the rules for uncovenanted servants.

Resolution.—The proposal of the home department is sanctioned, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State, on the understanding that the invalid pay of the officer concerned will merge in his absentee allowance as an uncovenanted servant, and that only his service in the civil department will be taken into consideration in granting him leave.

No. 3,538A.—Extract from a letter addressed by the Under Secretary to the Government of India in the financial department to the senior chaplain of the Church of Scotland, No. 3,538, dated Simla, Sept. 20:—

Para. 1.—Referring to letter No. 417, from the Government of India in the home department to your address, dated the 25th ult., I am desired to state—

1. That the orders of the financial department, No. 101, dated April 24 last, on the subject of privilege leave, are applicable to chaplains.

2. That the words "any other leave" in the above orders refer to every description of leave other than privilege leave, as well as to retirement from the service. [See orders No. 2,053, dated July 16, 1869, published at page 122 of the Gazette of India of the 17th idem.]

3. That although an officer is bound, when applying for privilege leave, to declare that he has no present intention of taking any other leave, or of retiring from the service within six months from the expiry of the leave applied for, yet he is not absolutely debarred either from taking sick leave should his health render it necessary, or from retiring within that period. But in such cases a chaplain or other officer would be liable to be called upon to reconcile his previous declaration with his subsequent application for leave, or for permission to retire.

EDUCATIONAL.—Mr. H. Rattray to be a member of, and secretary to the Local Committee of Public Instruction at Burrisaul.

MUNICIPAL.—The following gentlemen to be municipal commissioners for the town of Patna:—Dr. J. B. Allen, Mr. J. W. McCrindle. For the town of Burdwan, viz.:—Lieut. col. J. J. Hume, Mr. H. Unwin, C.E.

DONATIONS TO POLICE OFFICERS.—Examination.—Notification No. 2,640 of Sept. 25, 1868, sanctioning a donation of Rs. 500 to police officers passing in Punjabee, is hereby cancelled.

BANDS.—NATIVE OFFICERS.—It having come to the notice of the C. in C. that instances have occurred of native officers being employed in the bands of regiments, the C. in C. begs to point out that this is contrary to the regulations of the service, and must be discontinued.

A SENSIBLE SANITARY PROVISION.—The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct the cancellation of that portion of para. 1 of G.O.C.C., dated June 21, 1864, of standing orders, permitting the issue of two drams of rum during the prevalence of epidemics, or in special individual cases when deemed advisable by the medical and commanding officers.

FINAL MEDICAL BOARDS.—Committees.—The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct the discontinuance of final medical boards at ports of embarkation, in the case of officers of the British service recommended for change of climate beyond Indian limits by a medical board presided over by the inspector general of hospitals.

POLITICAL.—The following appointments have been made, Sept.:—Mr. A. B. Sampson, B.A., assistant secretary, to be under secretary to the Government of India in the public works department. Mr. J. S. Thorpe to be assistant secretary to the Government of India in the public works department, as a temporary arrangement. The above appointments are to be regarded as provisional and temporary only.

SALARIES OF COMMANDANTS OF CONVALESCENT DEPOTS.—The following is to be substituted in lieu of the G.O. No. 623, dated Sept. 1, which is cancelled:—"As the staff salaries of commandants of convalescent depots and hill sanatoria are held to include allowance for one charger, horse allowance must be deducted in the charge for the military pay of a regimental officer of the rank of field officer appointed to any of those commands."

THE SURVEY DEPARTMENT.—Under the authority of the Government of India, military officers serving in any branch of the survey department, either trigonometrical, topographical, or revenue, are understood to be, in every respect, in civil employ. Accordingly an officer serving in the survey department would, on taking furlough under the Rules of 1868, be entitled, under Clause 5 of these rules, to calculate his furlough at 50 per cent. of his average receipts for the past three years.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned candidates are reported to have passed the lower standard in Hindoostanee on Sept. 6:—Lieut. F. Bigg, R.A.; Privates J. Shannon and H. Sinclair, 5th lancers; Ensign N. C. Martelli, 1st battalion 11th foot; Ensign H. M. Carter, 62nd foot; Ensigns W. F. Vetch and A. H. Hornsby, Lance corporal R. Brunker, and Private J. Wilson, 102nd foot; Assistant apothecary J. Forsyth, Passed Hospital apprentices G. Garstin, H. A. Davis, and J. Farrelly, sub medical department. Lieut. H. A. D. Hawes, 4th Punjab infantry, passed the prescribed examination in Pushtoo, before a special committee assembled at Peshawur, on Sept. 7.

CIVIL FURLONGS, &c.—The following civil servants have obtained leave of absence, on medical certificate, under rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Mr. C. Miller, magistrate of police, Calcutta, for one month, from Sept. 26, under paragraph 16 of the uncovenanted service absentee rules. Mr. J. Pickard, surveyor, second grade, fifth division, Lower Provinces, for two months, from Sept. 20, under orders of Nov. 8, 1865. Dr. J. Davies, medical officer of Balasore, reported his departure from India on board the ship Roman Empire, which was left by the pilot at sea on Sept. 15. In supersession of notification No. 35A, dated June 17 last, three months' privilege leave is granted to Mr. C. A. Elliott, settlement officer at Furruckabad, with effect from Sept. 1. One month's leave on medical certificate is granted to Major W. B. Thomson, deputy commissioner, Upper Godavery district, in extension. Mr. L. Griffin, officiating deputy commissioner, Lahore, has obtained one month's privilege leave, with effect from Oct. 15. Lieut. col. E. D. R. Ross, executive engineer, Saharunpore division, public works, availed himself of his privilege leave on Sept. 5, on which date he made over charge of the division to Lieut. T. Gracey, R.E., assistant engineer. Two months' privilege leave is granted to Mr. J. H. Twigg, officiating joint magistrate and deputy collector, Agra, with effect from Sept. 3. Privilege leave for one month is granted to Mr. A. Campbell, superintendent of Roorkee workshops, with effect from Sept. 17. Mr. W. S. Seton-Karr, secretary to the Government of India in the foreign department, is granted furlough for one year, with twelve days' subsidiary leave to reach Bombay, from such date as he may avail himself of the same.

MILITARY FURLONGS, &c.—The following officers obtained furloughs to Europe on medical certificate, and leave of absence in Sept., under the rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified:—Vet. surg. Oliver, C battery A brigade R.H.A., to Calcutta, from Sept. 1 to 30. Lieut. Andrews, 18th hussars, to England, via the Cape, from date of departure. Lieut. Williams, H battery 8th brigade R.A., to Nynee Tal, from Aug. 31 to Oct. 31. Col. Willis, C.B., 38th foot, to Bombay, for one month, from Oct. 15, and thence to England, for 12 months, on private affairs. Lieut. Forster, 60th foot, to Nynee Tal, from Sept. 3 to Nov. 30. Ens. Fotherstonhaugh, to Nynee Tal, from Sept. 3 to Nov. 30. Capt. Jennings, to England, via the Cape, from date of embarkation. Ens. Vincent, 95th foot, to remain at Poona, where he now is, from Sept. 1, 1869, to Feb. 28, 1870, on urgent private affairs. Capt. Wolseley, 103rd foot, to remain at Murree, from Sept. 1 to Oct. 15. Lieut. and adjt. Golwin, to England, for 15 months, from date of departure from Bombay, on private affairs, doing duty with troops. Lieut. Robertson, 107th foot, to remain at Shillong, from Aug. 15 to 27, on private affairs, in extension. Staff-assistant surgeon Painter, to England, via Egypt, from date of departure. Lieut. Horsburgh, adjutant of the 2nd regiment of the Central India horse, is granted thirty days' leave, from such date as he may avail himself thereof, subsequent to Nov. 19, to enable him to proceed to Bombay preparatory to his obtaining furlough to Europe. The privilege leave for ninety days granted to Assistant surgeon Harvey, in medical charge of the political agency, Eastern States, Rajpootana, dated April 15, is, at that officer's request, hereby cancelled. Ensign Anson, 2nd wing subaltern, 2nd Sikh infantry (on probation), is granted leave of absence under the operation of G.G.O. No. 1,009 of 1866, from Oct. 1, 1869, to April 1, 1870, to proceed to Calcutta to study the native languages. Capt. Freeman, 3rd squadron officer, 4th Bengal cavalry, to Europe, on furlough, for two years, on private affairs, embarking at Bombay. Lieut. colonel Pester, of infantry, commandant, 9th regiment native infantry, having been recommended for leave to Europe on medical certificate for fifteen months, is granted furlough for that period, embarking at Bombay. ### GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

ACTING ALLOWANCES ON JOINING NEW APPOINTMENTS.

Sept. 10.—No. 3,349.—The following letter to the address of the Accountant-general, Madras, dated September, 1869, is published for general information:—

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 3,010, dated the 9th ult., and in reply to state that the rule contained in the order of this department, No. 3,129, dated Dec. 8, 1868, "that when an officer, holding an acting appointment, is transferred to another appointment of not inferior emoluments, he shall continue to draw his acting allowances during the time spent in joining the new appointment," is applicable to every case of transfer to another appointment, whether substantive or acting, of not inferior emolument.

2. I am desired, however, to take this opportunity of observing, with reference to the order of December, 1868, mentioned above, and to the subsequent order of this department, No. 743, dated May 23, 1869, that no officer should draw acting allowances for any office after the substantive incumbent of that office has resumed charge.

HORSE ALLOWANCE.—The Governor in Council notifies that horse allowance is inadmissible to regimental officers of the rank of field officer holding the command of depots and sanitarium.

NEW CHAPLAINS.—The Revs. J. B. Trend and A. H. Seymour to be junior chaplains on the Madras establishment. Mr. Trend will fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of the Rev. A. W. Pearson; and Mr. Seymour is appointed in the vacancy occasioned by the death of the Rev. C. D. Gibson.

CIVIL LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following civil servants have obtained leave of absence on medical certificate, under the Rules of 1868:—Mr. B. C. Lezatt, deputy collector of Salem, for four months. ## GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

BOMBAY MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

Bombay Castle, Sept. 15.—No. 658.—The following despatch from her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for India, in the financial department, dated July 29, No. 111, is published:—

Sir,—I have had under consideration in Council your military letters—dated Nov. 3, 1862, No. 88; Sept. 23, 1865, No. 67; Dec. 10, 1867, No. 115; Sept. 17, 1868, No. 101—with their several enclosures, from the late committee of management of the Bombay medical retiring fund, on the subject of the state of the fund, and the claims of the subscribers.

2. I have also had before me in Council the report of Mr. S. Brown on the fund, and I have now to inform your Government that I have sanctioned the following grants to the members of the fund from the dates specified, viz.:—

1st. The restoration, with effect from April 3, 1867, of the annuities of present incumbents in Class I. to £300, the amount at which they stood in the year 1857.

2nd. The restoration, with effect from April 30, 1867, of present and prospective annuities of Classes II., III., and IV., to the amounts at which they stood in 1857, viz., Class II. to £240, Class III. to £200, Class IV. to £160.

3rd. The addition of 5 per cent. to present and prospective annuities of £240, £200, and £160, with effect from May 1, 1869, from which date the annuities of present incumbents will be as follow:—Class II. at £252, Class III. at £210, Class IV. at £168.

Three annuities of £252, £210, and £168 being allotted annually for the future, in accordance with the existing regulations of the fund, the annuities of £300 being continued only to the present incumbents in Class I.

4th. The grant of three extra annuities, in the present year, of £252, taking effect from May 1, 1869.

I have to request that you will take the necessary measures for making the secretary to the fund and the subscribers in India aware of the grants which have now been made by her Majesty's Government.—I have, &c.,

GOODENOUGH.—On board the steamer Mooltan, between Galle and Aden, Sept. 13, F. A. Goodenough, son.

LECKY.—At Palamcottah, Sept. 22, second and infant son of Lieut. G. Lecky, 22nd regiment N.I., son.

McFARLANE.—At Morar, Sept. 9, the infant daughter of Mess-sergeant and Mrs. McFarlane, daughter.

MALCOLM.—At Bushire, Sept. 20, J. A. Malcolm, Armenian merchant, son.

ROBINSON.—At Bangalore, Sept. 27, wife of 2nd class schoolmaster Robinson, 2-10th regiment. [Sam, aged 22.]

SAM.—At Madras, Sept. 29, A. Sam, youngest son of the late E. Seth Tate, of Madras, Sept. 27, Charles Henry, the youngest and infant son of Conductor J. Tate, Ordnance Department.

WILLIS.—At Jubbalpore, Sept. 25, Rev. F. A. Willis, chaplain of Jubbalpore, aged 30.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—The following telegram has been received in London:—"Cable Ship, Oct. 29, 11.55 P.M.—Friday, midnight, off Gay's Island. First half of cable laid and buoyed. Tests perfect. Commence second half on Monday. The Tweed leaves for Bombay immediately. All well."

BENGAL MILITARY FUND.

A report by Mr. Samuel Brown, the actuary of this institution, has for some time been under consideration by the Secretary of State for India in Council, with a view to deciding whether certain concessions requested by the directors of the fund can safely be granted. Mr. Brown enters into a series of elaborate arguments supported by statistics, and concludes as follows:—

Although the estimates do not show that the time is fully arrived when if new members had continually been admitted at the present high rates of subscription the liabilities would be balanced by the assets, yet it is evident it would have been very nearly attained, say in about three years from the present time.

It is for the Government of India to consider whether, under these circumstances, the concessions may not be forthwith granted on the following grounds:—

First. The proposal to reduce the pensions of the widows previous to 1856 by 10 per cent., though a hardship upon them, was only fair to the members in the service whose widows were to suffer loss to that extent, although they themselves were paying 25 per cent. extra on all their contributions to make up the arrears of which the deceased members ought to have borne their share to make the fund safe for the payment of pensions to their own widows. The reductions of the pensions, as proposed, was the only way in which they could be made to contribute something towards the deficiency, and it would probably by this time have made the fund wholly solvent, as shown by the valuation. For not only would the whole value of all the existing pensions granted before 1856, and amounting in 1865 to 53,46,304 rupees, be reduced by 10 per cent., but 10 per cent. upon all the payments made since 1856 would have accumulated in the fund, at compound interest at 8 per cent., till 1865.

Upon these accumulations the Government would have allowed, and would continue to allow, according to regulation, the extra interest of 4 per cent., thus constituting a fair claim for favourable consideration.

Secondly. The non-admission of new members, caused by questions of public policy, has deferred the period at which the sacrifices to which the contributors since 1858, and the present members have submitted, would have restored their own widows to the enjoyment of equal benefits with those before 1856. These are circumstances over which the officers could have no control, and yet have rendered ineffectual the heavy calls to which they have submitted.

Thirdly. The great increase in the subscriptions payable in Europe indicate that a large source of accumulation has been stopped, since the contributions whilst on service are double those of retired members, and though the increase in the pensions on promotion is arrested, it is not equal to the permanent loss of half the subscriptions, and the whole of the donations which would have been paid on promotion. The greater part of this excess of retirement is, no doubt, to be attributed to changes in the army, caused by the policy of Government on the transfer of the Indian power, and not to the natural rate of retirement which would prevail under ordinary circumstances.

Fourthly. Whatever may be thought of the justice of the claim to the arrears in consequence of errors in adjusting the exchanges, there can be no doubt that the liberal intentions of the Honourable Court of Directors were not fully carried out in these respects previous to 1853, and that the large sums which would have accumulated in the fund would have caused the Government heavy charges for the extra interest of 4 per cent., which have been saved at the expense of the members who have been so overcharged for their corresponding benefits since 1853.

For all these reasons, the claim for the restoration of the present widows since 1856, and future incumbents from this time, to the full pension of the widows previous to 1856, so strongly urged in the appeal of the committee, deserves the favourable consideration of the Government, and appears to be justified, to a great extent at least, by the results of the present investigation into the financial progress of the fund.

The cost of such a concession may be estimated at 31st December, 1865, assuming that the same regulation is to apply to the pensions of widows brought on by the mutiny in 1857-1858, as to the proportion borne by the Government.

			Rs.	Value. Rs.
India Pensions since 1856	...	268	4,11,834	35,40,810
Europe " "	...	16	21,457	1,73,729
			384	4,33,291
India Mutiny, 1857-58...	...	94	1,27,932	11,13,871
Europe " "	...	4	5,665	49,310
			482	48,77,720

The total liability would at that period have been increased by one-ninth part, or 5,41,969 rupees, and the annual payments by about 62,988 rupees, which cannot but be considered a moderate compromise for the larger claims which have been at different times put forward since the state of the fund was investigated in 1853.

I have thus endeavoured conscientiously to discharge the duty entrusted to me, and endeavoured to give as clear and impartial a view as possible of the state of the fund when it was closed to the admission of new members, and of the progress which had then been made towards placing it in a sound condition, and its possible improvement thereafter.

The difficulties were greater than usual, since events and changes had occurred, during the period under review, which disturbed the usual rates of mortality, marriage and retirement, on which such calculations have to be based, and which require more than usual discretion in judging of the results.

But I hope this report will enable the members to see that the vigorous measures they took in 1853 were being crowned with complete, though gradual success, and the Government to take a liberal view of the concessions requested, seeing that these costly remedies would not have been required if the expressed intentions of the Honourable Court had been fully carried out at the time, or the members had been allowed greater freedom in requiring all the annuitants to bear their due share of the burden.

Acting upon these considerations we believe it has been decided to restore the pensions to the amounts paid prior to 1856, and the only question open is the date from which the same are to take effect. This will probably be fixed as the 1st April, 1869; but should the exigencies of the case require a later date, the boon is not likely to be deferred beyond the 1st January next; and although the arrears, if granted, will undoubtedly afford relief, yet the fact that the pensions are increased will be highly satisfactory, and we congratulate the Bengal Military Service that their long personal sacrifice is now about to be rewarded.

THE ALBERT LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

On Saturday, in Vice-Chancellor James's Chambers, before Mr. Bloxam, Chief Clerk, Mr. Hooke applied on behalf of Mr. Edward Butler, a policy-holder in the Medical, Invalid, and General Medical Society, to be allowed to file a bill for the purpose of separating the interests of this society from those of the Albert. In March, 1861, the whole of the business of the former company was transferred to the latter, that company however having no power over it until the expiration of ten years. As this term was now coming to a conclusion, this bill was filed for the purpose of protecting the interests of the shareholders and policy-holders of the Medical Society. Mr. Paddigan, on behalf of a shareholder, presented a summons to the effect that the Albert should be made a party to the suit. The solicitor to the Albert said it might have an interest in the matter. The Chief Clerk said that he should make both orders; and if it were found that the insertion of the Albert in the bill was not necessary, it should have its costs.

Messrs. Holt and Pike's Committee of Policy-holders and Annuitants in the Albert Company have issued a report, in which they give reasons for believing that there is little probability of any scheme of general reconstruction being carried, and that there is little hope that an advantageous transfer of the company's business will be effected. This committee are of opinion that with men of known ability and energy, who have no personal or pecuniary objects to subserve as directors and trustees, the policy-holders should form a mutual society, and undertake, in the first instance, the assurance of eligible lives from their own body at rates of premium based upon the English tables of mortality, which, while affording an immediate average reduction of 10 per cent., would still leave a loading of 12½ per cent. to cover the expense of management and other contingencies. If the premiums received were invested at 4½ instead of 3 per cent. (which is the sum generally assumed by actuaries) healthy lives at the age of thirty-five could be assured by the new society at £2.4s. 8d. per cent., whereas the rate charged by the Alliance Company is £2.16s. 8d.

Miscellaneous.

MISS CARPENTER embarked on board the P. and O. steamer Delhi on Saturday, October 23, bound for India.

DELHI AND LONDON BANK.—A meeting was held on October 27 of the Delhi and London Bank, and a dividend, at the rate of 2½ per cent. for the past half-year, was declared.

FINANCIAL.—Mr. Charles Turner, who rendered valuable service at Bombay on account of the Abyssinian Expedition, has been appointed to be the assistant-accountant at the Treasury, Whitehall.

MEDICAL.—The Duke of Argyll has appointed Surgeon-major F. Broughton, Bombay Army, to be a member of the Indian Medical Board, in the room of Surgeon A. H. Hilson, Bengal Army, who is about to return to India.

SINGAPORE GAS COMPANY.—At the meeting on October 26 of the Singapore Gas Company (Limited), the profits for the half-year were stated at £1,419, and dividends were declared at the rate of 7½ and 5 per cent. per annum, respectively, on the preference and original capitals, free of income-tax.

MYSORE COFFEE COMPANY.—An extraordinary general meeting of the Mysore Coffee Company (Limited) is called for the 3rd of November, "for the purpose of receiving the annual report of the directors, the balance-sheet, and other statements of accounts, and also for the election of an auditor."

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The following exports were effected in P. and O. steamers during October (from Southampton, &c.):—Per Delta, Oct. 9, Southampton to Bombay, gold £5,000; per Ripon, Oct. 17, Marseilles to Bombay, silver £5,640; per Pera, Oct. 16, Southampton to Bombay, gold £25,000; ditto, Madras, gold £4,450; per Poonah, Oct. 10, Marseilles to Calcutta, gold £1,000, silver £39,544.

THE LE BAS PRIZE.—This prize, founded in memoriam of the late Rev. C. W. Le Bas, is given annually for the best English essay on the subject of general literature, such subject to be occasionally chosen with reference to the history, institutions, and probable destinies and prospects of the Anglo-Indian Empire. The Rev. Mr. Le Bas was a former Fellow of Trinity, and for thirty years was connected with Haileybury College. The prize for the present year has been adjudged to Henry Trueman Wright Wood, B.A., of Clare College, Cambridge.

FALMOUTH, GIBRALTAR, AND MALTA TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The report of the Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta Telegraph Company, presented on the 2nd of November, states that the manufacture of their cable has commenced, and also that the cable for the British Indian Company is rapidly approaching completion. The Great Eastern steamship left Sheerness for Bombay on the 23rd October with upwards of 2,200 miles of cable on board, and the remainder will follow very shortly in two other steamships. The laying is expected to be finished in March next. The Falmouth cable is expected to be laid within a few weeks afterwards, so that the whole line of submarine communication between England and India will be completed sooner than had been originally announced.

CAPTAIN T. N. WALKER.—At a meeting of the Royal Humane Society, October 27, an unusually large number of cases in which persons had risked their own lives in saving others from drowning were brought under the cognisance of the society and rewarded. The bronze medallion was awarded to Captain T. N. Walker, of the Bengal Staff Corps, for saving four persons under the following circumstances:—On a dark night in January last, at Alipones, near Buxa Bhootan and Coocbehah, a native boat was taking to the military station a cart with mess things and a native sentry and mess servants. Through the fault of the boatman the boat began to sink in about nine or ten feet of water, the current being very strong at the time, and the men tumbled into the water; not being able to swim, they were in great danger, but Captain Walker jumped in and succeeded in saving them all, one after the other.

THE SUPERSESSION COMMITTEE.—The Committee, under the presidency of Vice-Chancellor James, to whom the consideration of the Supersession of Colonels' question was referred, met at the War-office on Monday, and after a short sitting adjourned till Monday next. It is understood that no more evidence will be taken, and that the report may very shortly be expected. We fail, however, to learn that they have arrived at any satisfactory solution of the difficulties which have arisen. It is to be feared, indeed, that the result of their deliberations and investigations may prove but of a negative character. Little else could be expected, seeing that the Committee commenced their labours upon the distinct understanding that any course they might recommend for adoption was not to involve an increase of expenditure of British or Indian money. The members of the Committee were thus placed in a similar position to that occupied by the Israelites in Egypt, when they had "to make bricks without straw."—Broad Arrow.

HIS HIGHNESS THE NAWAB OF JOONUGHUR has promised an annual donation of 1,000 rupees, for the purpose of defraying the expense of translating the Journal of the East India Association into Guzerathi, thus assisting in a great measure to promote one of the main objects of the East India Association, which is, to teach the people of India, through their Journal, what the Home Government is doing for them, and to help the Government and the people of this country to understand better what are the wants and feelings of the people of India. Not only the higher but the lower classes in India take a warm interest in the work of the association, which is being evinced by the numerous small as well as large donations for the establishing of a permanent fund. Sixteen native gentlemen have also offered their services gratuitously for the translation of the Journal into Guzerathi, thereby greatly lessening the expense. The Council of the East India Association has elected the Nawab of Joonughur to be one of the vice-presidents of the association.

BRINDISI TO ALEXANDRIA BY THE ITALIAN COMPANY'S ADRIATIC ORIENTAL STEAMER, WEEKLY.—This route, considering its comparative cheapness, and the shortness of its sea passage, promises to rival—it has already been very detrimental to—the old Marseilles route. We have been informed that for the next two months the cabins, first class, are nearly all engaged; the steamer which left Brindisi on the 5th instant was crowded. Several passengers, many of them ladies, arriving by the trains on the 4th, who—expecting to find berths—had neglected to secure them previously, were compelled to put up with whatever accommodation could be provided for them. Passengers taking tickets the whole route from Paris to Alexandria, who can spare the time, have now the privilege of breaking off from the main line, either at Bologna, to visit Florence, Rome, and Naples, or at Falcouara lower down the line, for Rome and Naples only, and joining the main line again at Foggia; whence on to Brindisi, the whole of which can be done, spending two days at Florence, three days at Rome, and four at Naples, within the fortnight, seeing the most interesting cities of Italy in the best time of the year. Among the passengers by this route from Brindisi on the 5th were:—Colonel Sir W. W. Turner, K.C.S.I., to resume command of the Saugor Brigade, Bengal, and lady; Colonel Carey, Bengal Army, and lady; Colonel Raines, C.B., 95th, and lady, for Bombay.

STAFF COLLEGE.—The following is a list of the successful candidates at the late competitive examination of officers for admission to the Staff College in February, 1870:—

	Marks.
Lieut. F. Roberts, Royal Artillery, Madras ...	2,979
Lieut. J. L. Needham, Royal Marine Artillery ...	2,956
Capt. G. S. Schwabe, 6th Dragoon Guards ...	2,911
Lieut. H. B. Moffatt, 1st battalion 24th Foot, Malta ...	2,876
Capt. H. T. Jones, 81st Regiment ...	2,865
Lieut. E. H. H. Collen, Royal Artillery, Bengal ...	2,857
Lieut. D. L. Brain, 1st battalion 4th Foot ...	2,604
Lieut. W. E. Montague, 91th Regiment ...	2,402
Capt. W. R. Lascelles, 2nd battalion Rifle Brigade ...	2,312
Lieut. H. Atkinson, 99th Regiment ...	2,248
Capt. F. Cardew, 82nd Regiment ...	2,234
Lieut. H. L. Dundas, 2nd battalion 15th Foot ...	2,188
Capt. L. H. Bruce, 91st Regiment ...	2,156
Lieut. H. P. Walmsley, 56th Regiment ...	2,046
Brevet major C. R. Johnson, 50th Regiment ...	2,031
Capt. the Hon. H. Legge, Coldstream Guards ...	2,001

THE INTERNAL TRAFFIC OF INDIA.—On Friday evening a paper was read at the Westminster Palace Hotel, before the East India Association, General Sir A. Cotton, K.C.S.I., in the chair, by Mr. Hyde Clarke, late cotton commissioner in Turkey, on Transport in India, with reference to the interests of India and England. In a general examination of the various modes of transport by railway, road, and water, Mr. Clarke mentioned that the accelerated communications by the first means could alone develop the moral and industrial resources of India for the benefit of its population, and our own. He referred to the large sums lately raised in England for railways in Russia, of which only a small portion was spent on English rails and engines, but most on those of France, Belgium, North Prussia, and Austria, paid for with our capital. Our Indian Government might have obtained these funds for the necessary extension of railways in India, when engines and rails would have been brought here, and a large quantity of manufactured goods would also have been purchased for India, that in a time of great financial suffering and distress we should have obtained relief for all our manufacturing interests, and Manchester and other districts would have become better customers for the cotton and products of India. Mr. Clarke referred to the connection of the subject with the through railway to India, the progress of English settlement in the hill regions, and generally with the welfare of India.

MILITARY.—The following exchanges of brigades by officers of the Royal Artillery have been sanctioned by the Horse Guards:—Between Colonel J. R. Anderson, C.B., 9th brigade, lately embarked for India, and Colonel R. C. Romer, 13th brigade, at Plymouth; between Lieut. colonel N. M. Mackay, 9th brigade, and Lieut. col. M. A. Biddulph, 14th brigade, deputy adjutant general, India; between Captain W. C. Nangle, 7th battery 12th brigade, A.D.C. to the Commandant of Woolwich garrison, and Captain J. L. Clarke, 6th battery 15th brigade, at Gibraltar; between Captain and brevet lieut. colonel C. E. Oldershaw, E battery 14th brigade, at Deal, and Captain J. K. Holdsworth, 6th battery 5th brigade, at St. Thomas Mount; between Captain E. Harrison, C. battery 19th brigade, at Meerut, and Captain F. H. M'Leod, of the 25th brigade, at Allahabad; between Second Captain C. H. Pickering, F battery 4th brigade, at Kilkenny, and Second Captain S. C. Kyle, G battery 8th brigade, at Cawnpore; between Second Captain A. S. Hunter, F battery 14th brigade, at Nusseerabad, and Second Captain E. H. Ryan, E battery 19th brigade, at Rawul Pindee.—A good service pension has been conferred on Colonel Edward Kaye, Royal (Bengal) Artillery, now commanding H.M.'s Forces at Mooltan. The pension had previously been drawn by Major-general McPherson, late military secretary to the Punjab Government, who now succeeds to colonel's allowances. Brigadier-general Kaye served in the war in Afghanistan, the Sutlej campaigns, and the war in the Punjab, and was all through the siege of Delhi. Few officers indeed have seen more or harder service.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—A general meeting of this Corporation was held on Oct. 28, at the offices in Threadneedle-street, for the declaration of an interim dividend. Mr. James Blyth presided, and said it was proposed to declare an interim dividend of 30s. a share, free of income-tax, or at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum. The net profit of the half-year was £93,012. 17s. 9d., which, added to the balance brought forward of £7,635. 17s. 4d., gave a total of £100,648. 15s. 1d., from which £90,000, the amount of the dividend now declared, was deducted, leaving a balance to be carried forward to the credit of the current half-year of £10,648. The bank was going on prosperously; the reports from the agents abroad being of the most satisfactory character. In the most prosperous times there were, however, some drawbacks, but it would be satisfactory to the shareholders to know that at the present time everything was provided for. As they were all aware, the bank was engaged in a contest with the Bank of Bombay in reference to a claim of £25,000 made by that bank, arising out of the affairs of Premchand Roychund. £5,328 of that amount had been received back from certain securities, but a considerable sum, £19,600, was still outstanding. The question as to liability was before the courts, and must, he believed, be decided in favour of the Oriental Bank; but having regard to the uncertainty of the law, the board had thought it right to make provision for it as a bad debt; although they had every reason to believe it would prove a good asset. The dividend was agreed to.

THE ST. GOTHARD RAILWAY.—In speaking of the signature of the final protocol relating to the St. Gothard Railway, the Times of Oct. 29 says:—"Thus is this most momentous matter settled at last. The work is to be entrusted to a company, which must engage to complete it in nine years, and to receive a subvention of 85,000,000*fr.*, to which Italy is to contribute 45,000,000*fr.*, and Switzerland 20,000,000*fr.*, the rest being subscribed by the various German States. Had the petty communities of Lugano, Coire, Zurich, and other places been at all reasonable, the work might have been accomplished ten years ago instead of the period at which we may now hope to see it done. Once done, however, the advantages likely to accrue to Continental traffic from the St. Gothard line may eventually exceed all that we at this moment look forward to. Besides opening the only direct communication between the Ticino and the Rhine—i.e., between Central Lombardy and Central Germany, between the Mediterranean and the North Sea, between Genoa and Antwerp or Rotterdam—the St. Gothard line will render England and Italy independent of France, as regards the transmission of the overland mail to India through Brindisi. From Ostend to Cologne, to Bâle and Lucerne, across the St. Gothard and down to Bologna and Brindisi, the route will not be many miles longer than from Calais to Paris, Macon, the Mont Cenis, Bologna, and Brindisi. It is to be hoped, however, that before this formidable competition is organised the French companies will forego a partial advantage which may cause them a total loss. Till the Euphrates line is constructed the highway to India lies through Brindisi. The French might just as well hope to sink the Italian peninsula as to deprive it of its position as the great 'Mediterranean pier'—that pier by means of which mails and passengers can get half way to the East by land, avoiding the delays and discomforts of a tedious circuitous navigation."

COMMISSIONS ON PUBLIC WORKS IN INDIA.—Some important correspondence was received on Saturday, from which it appears that at a meeting of the Council of the Institution of Civil Engineers, held on the 21st Oct., a notification of the Public Works Department, India, dated the 31st August last, was considered. The circular notifies that as it is a recognised practice in the civil engineering profession in England to receive commission on contracts given out, and on stores and materials, in addition to the stated salary, all persons in the service of the Indian Government must consider that the receipt of any commission or consideration on account of any business in which he shall be concerned on behalf of the Government is prohibited. The council having considered the notification, passed a series of resolutions emphatically protesting against the allegations contained in it. On Wednesday last a deputation had an interview with the Secretary of State for India, and submitted in writing:—1. That the profession does not recognise the acceptance by civil engineers of commissions, or other payments, except openly and directly from their immediate employers. 2. That the profession distinctly discountenances, repudiates, and condemns the practice implied in the notification No. 242, recently issued by the Public Works Department of the Government of India. 3. That it is a rule of the institution not to receive into membership any person tainted, or believed to be tainted, by any of the improper and corrupt practices alleged in such notification. 4. That if it be possible to cite instances of misconduct by persons calling themselves civil engineers, yet that any such instances are entirely exceptional, and amount to flagrant departures from the well understood and well recognised practice of the profession, and therefore cannot justify the broad accusation contained in the notification in question. On Friday Mr. Grant Duff, in reply, wrote from the India-office:—"I am directed to state that the Duke of Argyll will immediately communicate with the Governor-general of India on the subject of which these letters relate, desiring to be informed of the circumstances which led to the issue of the notification in question. His Grace considers it almost superfluous for me to add that he regards with implicit confidence the indignant repudiation by the institution of any recognition of the practice referred to in the notification."

EXTENSIVE FRAUDS IN INDIA.—Thomas Nash Turnbull, an overseer in the Forest Department at Wynad, in the Presidency of Madras, apprehended on two warrants, charging him with embezzling various sums of money, entrusted to him, amounting to £3,431. 5*s.*, the property of the Indian Government, was brought before the sitting magistrate, at Bow-street, on Oct. 27. Mr. Poland, instructed by the solicitor to the India-office, prosecuted. Mr. Poland said that he had to apply under the provisions of the Act 6 and 7 Vic., chapter 34, in order that the prisoner might be committed to prison and sent back to take his trial in India on the warrants issued from that country for his apprehension. He did not propose to read on this occasion the whole of the depositions that had been taken, as they were very voluminous; but he would give the substance of them, and read over the principal parts relative to the embezzlement. The prisoner was what was termed the first class overseer in the Forest Department, Wynad, in the Presidency of Madras. He had held the position for some time, and was supposed to have absconded in the January of the present year. The depositions were then carefully taken and the warrant issued, signed by Mr. William Logan, joint magistrate and justice of the peace, and addressed to Mr. Underwood, magistrate. Communication was made to the authorities in England, and the prisoner was ultimately apprehended at Batt's Hotel, Piccadilly. The substance of the depositions was that the prisoner had entered, while in his office, into several contracts for timber with the deponents, and received various sums, amounting in all to £3,431. 5*s.* English money, for the goods. It was his duty to pay this into the Treasury office. The prisoner, instead, left with the key of the iron safe, which was afterwards broken open, and the money was not found to be there. He paid into a branch of the Madras Bank a sum of about 15,000 rupees. He purchased with a portion of the money some English sovereigns. Soon after he presented a withdrawal cheque to the branch, and they telegraphed to Madras and received a reply to pay the amount. The prisoner withdrew the money and left for France, from which he recently left for England. The warrant was made out under the Acts of the Indian Penal Code, and sent to the Home Secretary in England. James Forster, police-sergeant A 2, deposed that he apprehended the prisoner in his bed-room at the hotel. He acknowledged that he was the man, and pointed out a paragraph in an Indian newspaper, headed "The Extensive Frauds in India," and said that it referred to himself. He said there was no necessity to read the warrant, as he knew what it was about. He was then taken to the station. Mr. Wm. Elphinstone Underwood, justice of the peace in India, and deputy magistrate of Wynad, Malabar district, proved that the warrant was addressed to him by Mr. W. Logan, joint magistrate. He (witness) could swear that the copies produced were correct copies of the original depositions taken by Mr. Logan. There were also produced perfect copies of the original exhibits. He could identify the prisoner at the bar. Knew him and his handwriting well. Had come over to England for the purpose of identifying him and bringing the depositions. After a technical discussion of some length between Mr. Vaughan and Mr. Poland, the prisoner was remanded.

ATTEMPTED FRAUD ON THE INDIA-OFFICE.—At the Central Criminal Court, on Oct. 27, before Mr. Justice Lush, William Bird, a ship steward, aged 26, was indicted for having personated John Campbell, who served under Major-General Whitlock at Banda, with a view to obtaining £75, John Campbell's share of the Banda and Kirwee prize money; and Charles Lake, a clerk, aged 34, was indicted for having incited Bird to the act. It appeared that nothing had been heard of Campbell at the India-office from the time he returned from India in 1859 by the ship Conflict until an application was made on the 9th of July last by a letter signed "T. Miller," stating that the correspondent had purchased Campbell's right to the prize money for £30. In reply to this letter, since proved to be in Lake's handwriting, the Military Secretary wrote that Campbell must make application in his own name, and enclosed forms for the purpose, which should be returned properly filled up and accompanied with a certificate of his identity, signed by the clergyman of his parish. The papers were returned, accompanied by a certificate of identity, signed by the Rev. T. W. Nowell, of Poplar parish, but it did not appear that Mr. Nowell had any reason for believing the person who applied to him was John Campbell, and his lordship, remarking upon this point, described Mr. Nowell's act as rash and improper. These papers were accompanied by a request that the money should be sent to the address from which all the letters had come, No. 23, Ellerthorpe-street, Poplar, where Lake had arranged with a Mrs. Collins to receive his letters. To this the Military Secretary replied requiring Campbell to apply for the money personally. Up to this time Lake only had appeared in the matter; all the letters were in his handwriting, and he only had communicated with Mrs. Collins; but as Lake had already appeared at the India-office and obtained £75 as his own share of the prize money, to which he was justly entitled, it was suggested by the prosecution that he was obliged to get an accomplice, and induced Bird to apply for the money. Bird and he went to the India-office. Bird made the application while Lake walked in a corridor outside with his head muffled in a large wrapper. After a little conversation with a messenger Lake left the office. In the meantime Bird was being questioned in the office as to when he went out to India, when he returned, &c.; his answers were all accurately given until it came to the name of the ship in which Campbell returned from India, and this he gave as the Great Tasmania, instead of the Conflict. This excited suspicion, and led to further inquiries. Bird then admitted he was not Campbell, but said he had been asked by a man in the park, who said he was Campbell, to make the application. Bird was detained, and Lake was soon afterwards taken into custody in the park, where he was walking without the wrapper on his head. In reply to the charge, he said he had been induced to do this because he was starving, and in an elaborate narration of his grievances, which he offered in his defence, he stated that all his friends and relations were in India, and that the Government would not send him out there, although he had no chance of employment here and was starving. On Bird were found papers containing statements in Lake's handwriting respecting Campbell. The jury returned a verdict of "Guilty" against both prisoners, and his lordship sentenced them each to five years' penal servitude, the minimum sentence, but promised in the case of Bird to represent in the proper quarter that if the act had given him any discretion in the matter he would have exercised it in clemency towards him. He had evidently been the dupe, still he must have known he did wrong when he distinctly represented himself as Campbell.

This increase of postage will not affect the Letters of Officers of the Army and Navy serving in India and Ceylon; such Letters will continue to enjoy the privilege of transmission at the reduced postage of Sixpence the half-ounce, via Southampton, and Tenpence the half-ounce via Marseilles.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth.

A French line of Mail Packets leaves Marseilles every fourth Saturday. Postage for Letters and Papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English Mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these Packets must be specially addressed—"By French Mail Packet from Marseilles."

Up to the end of December the dates of despatch from London will be the Thursday evenings, September 30th, October 28th, November 25th, and December 23rd, and by Supplementary Mails on the morning following.

Supplementary Mails will also be made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday morning, via France and Italy to Brindisi, and thence by Italian packet to Alexandria, but should they not reach the latter place in time, the departure of the regular Mails for Suez will not be delayed. The postage of letters will be at the rate of 1s. 4d. for each half-ounce, and of newspapers 4d. for each four ounces.

A REALLY MODEL STATE.—The lady who at present sits on the throne of Bhopal bids fair to rival her mother's fame as an administrator. During a reign of more than twenty years the late Begum had materially improved the conditions of the State by encouraging education, by bringing waste land under cultivation to the benefit of her subjects as well as of her treasury, by abolishing monopolies, by organising an efficient police, and by reducing the public debt. But for some time past, owing to failing health, her pilgrimage to Mecca, and other causes, she had not been able to make a tour through her dominions, and the consequence was that misrule on the part of local officials was not unfrequent. It has been the first care of the present Begum, after the days of mourning for her parents were ended, personally to investigate all abuses. For three months during the hottest season of the year she has been in camp, moving from district to district, so that every one who had a grievance might have full opportunity of getting it remedied. Before starting she issued a proclamation to the effect that she had reason to believe there had been oppression in various quarters, and that therefore she summoned every one who had any complaint against any of her officers, high or low, whether then in office or already retired, to attend and represent his case. The invitation has been generally accepted, and the inquiry has ended in much good, both to the State and to individuals. Public servants who were found to be old or infirm have been pensioned; those who were convicted of fraudulent transactions, of receiving bribes, of exaction, or of selling justice, have been dismissed and punished, and, wherever it was possible, any sum which had been taken over and above what was due has been refunded. The weights of shopkeepers have been examined, and such as were proved to be deficient were set straight, the owners of them at the same time being fined. Dilapidated buildings belonging to the State have been repaired; encamping grounds have been planted round with trees; tanks have been deepened and wells have been dug. In short, whatever a patient hearing of petitions and a judicious expenditure of money could do has been done. The example of such devotion, energy and loyalty as characterise the past and present Begums of Bhopal is as rare as it is praiseworthy.—Pioneer.

SEED GARDENERS FOR INDIA.—Mr. Rivett Carnac, Cotton Commissioner for the Central Provinces and Berar, lately pointed out the advantage of having seed-gardeners to assist in the improvement of the cotton grown in those provinces; he also suggested the advisability of getting these men from England. The Governor-General in Council has acceded to his proposal, and an application is about to be made to the Secretary of State for three experienced seed-gardeners, viz., one for Nagpore and two for the Berars.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That FORTY APPOINTMENTS in the ENGINEER ESTABLISHMENT of the PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT in INDIA will shortly be OPEN to PUBLIC COMPETITION.

A COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION will accordingly be HELD at this Office in the month of JULY next.

Full Printed Particulars of the Conditions on which Candidates will be admitted to the Examination, and likewise information respecting the nature of the Appointments to be competed for, may be obtained at this Office on application, either personally or by letter, addressed to the undersigned.

W. T. THORNTON, Secretary,
Public Works Department.

INDIA OFFICE, 27th October, 1869.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That, in conformity with the intention announced of sending to India annually a certain number of YOUNG MEN, Trained and Educated for ultimate Employment in the Higher Branches of the Department for the Conservation and Management of the FORESTS under the Government of India, ELEVEN Young Men will be selected in DECEMBER next to go to India at the end of 1872, if so many are found duly qualified.

The salary will be at first £300 a-year, and the salaries of the appointments in the three Presidencies range between that sum and £1,500 a-year. Promotions will depend upon efficiency, and the occurrence of vacancies in the higher grades.

Applicants must be British subjects, above seventeen and under twenty-five years of age, and unmarried.

As active habits and a strong constitution are most important, Candidates will have to undergo a strict medical examination.

They must send to the Revenue Department of the India Office, on or before the 25th of November next, a statement of their names and parentage, with a certificate of birth, and of being possessed of a competent knowledge of the following subjects, and they must be prepared to undergo an examination in the same:—

1. English writing from dictation and English composition.
2. Arithmetic in all its branches.
3. Algebra, elementary principles, simple and quadratic equations, ratios and proportions, logarithms, arithmetical and geometrical progression.
4. Geometry (1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 6th Books of Euclid and plane trigonometry).
5. Free hand-drawing.
6. A good colloquial knowledge of either French or German, with the facility to read and translate the works of some classical writer in the language.

A preference will be given to those Candidates who show proficiency in—

1. Surveying and land measuring.
Geology and mineralogy.
2. The elements of any of the following subjects:—
Plan-drawing.
Botany.
Mechanical and natural philosophy.
Chemistry.

If selected, they will be further required to go through a course of training and instruction in Forestry and cognate Sciences for two years and a-half, in France or Germany, previous to their departure for India, and the Secretary of State will contribute £50 at the end of each half-year, towards the expenses of their training, in the case of such Candidates as are favourably reported on by their instructors. In addition to this, the young men will be required to pass some weeks under one or more approved Foresters in Scotland before they go out to India.

More detailed information as to these appointments may be had on application to the Assistant Secretary, Revenue (Forests) Department, India Office, Westminster.

(Signed) HERMAN MERIVALE.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "104 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINIMENT OF ARNICA.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE OF RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CONTUSIONS, WEAKNESS OF THE JOINTS, CHILBLAINS, &c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

Composed of the Extracts of DANDELION, TURKEY RHUBARB, and JAMAICA GINGER.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SASSAPARILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

AN ENTIRELY NEW METHOD of FIXING ARTIFICIAL TEETH, without springs or wires, or any painful operation, more natural and durable than any introduced, giving a facility in mastication and speech hitherto unattained. To be had only of Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, &c., 61, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from Eleven till Five.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS. Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 223, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d., postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 223, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.

UPWARDS OF FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

GRATIFYING RESULTS.—No phase of external ailments can present itself which is irremediable by the early and diligent use of the above-named remedies. The merest blotch upon the skin and the deepest ulceration of the flesh yield with the same certainty to the detergent and healing properties of this celebrated Ointment. Bad legs, burns, eruptions of the skin, and scrofulous sores can be cured with facility by the continued use of this Ointment, aided by Holloway's purifying Pills. Under this treatment the foulest ulcers become clean, and in a few days florid granulations appear, which gradually grow and fill up the cavity with firm and healthy flesh. No drawback nor relapse need be feared.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 16; Agra and Calcutta, October 12; Madras, October 11.

All the papers are taken up with the questions raised in the long and momentous despatch from the Indian Government to the Secretary of State, which we have printed in full elsewhere. The general drift of it has already been given by us. There is no mistaking the earnest manner in which the Indian Government express a resolve to let things go on no longer as they have done, but to leave henceforth "no room for doubt that, in time of peace, our income will always be in excess of our expenditure." But they want help from home in so laudable an undertaking. There is one point which they own themselves powerless to carry without such help. Keenly alive as they are to the need of "reducing the present enormous charges for the Army," and confident as they are that a way can be found to that end which "will not in the least diminish our military strength," they fear that without "the most complete and prompt and vigorous support from her Majesty's Government" their efforts will be in vain. They therefore "earnestly" entreat for all the assistance which his Grace the Indian Minister can give them. That obtained, they at least will not fail in "the serious duty" that lies before them.

THE scheme thus strongly commended to the home authorities will probably take something like the following shape:—The whole Indian army being now but a few thousands stronger in point of numbers than the Bengal Army was before the Mutiny, what need is there for keeping up three separate armies with a threefold staff, and three commanders-in-chief? Would not one commander-in-chief be enough, with one adjutant and one quartermaster-general under him, and one army divided into several corps? From the Head Quarters Staff the work of reduction might be extended to a few superfluous divisional and brigade commands. There is no need for three or four inspectors of artillery. Madras and Bombay, it is thought, can spare a few regiments from their native armies. The native feudatories might be ordered to cut down the numbers of their own troops, which are too many for the convenience of the paramount power. Lastly comes the great question of reducing, not the effective strength of the British garrison, but the number of regiments and officers on the rolls. At present the British troops in India number about 57,000 in all, with about 3,600 officers, or one officer to every sixteen men. Such a proportion of officers is far too large on the face of it. What the Indian Government propose is to get rid of the superfluous officers without weakening the rank and file. By raising the strength of the cavalry regiments to 632 officers and men, and that of the infantry to 1,029, an important saving could easily be made without the loss of a single effective soldier. The number of infantry regiments would merely be reduced by seven, and of cavalry by four, while the effective privates of these eleven would be drafted into the remainder. There is room also for some reductions in the Artillery. It is easy to see that reforms of this sort affecting the British Army will not be carried through without a struggle on the part of the Horse Guards and their friends. But if the present Ministry, which is all for economy at home, will only do its duty by the economists in India, a scheme which has found so much favour with the highest military authorities out there can hardly fail to secure itself a fair trial. In some of its features it bears a strong resemblance to the programme sketched by Major Chesney in his "Indian Polity," and to the measures suggested by Lord Dalhousie himself in one of his last minutes.

OUR predictions of many weeks back regarding the Agra Durbar have been fully verified. The Viceroy himself has announced that there will be no durbar. The wonder is that, in view of the suffering reported for so many months past from Rajpootana and the adjacent provinces, so many people should still have believed in the likelihood of a ceremony which under the circumstances would have been a crime. It appears however that some kind of military gathering will come off at Meeanmeer, near Lahore, next February, in honour of the Duke of Edinburgh. Five batteries of artillery, two British and two native regiments of cavalry, three British and two native regiments of infantry—about six thousand men in all—will parade together on that occasion. The Soldiers' Exhibition will be opened at Meerut instead of Agra.

INSTEAD of marching a small army into the Hassanzai country, the Government has contented itself with taking cheaper precautions against future raids into Hazara. The Agror Valley has been removed from the jurisdiction of the regular courts, and will henceforth be ruled by such officers as the Punjab Government may appoint, according to such laws as it may enact for their guidance. The same arrangement may be applied to such portions of the Hazara, Attok, and Rawal Pindi districts, as it may think fit to place under special conditions. Agror is henceforth to be garrisoned by a body of troops prepared to act at the shortest notice against any raiders. The 23rd Punjab Pioneers, a troop of the 16th Bengal Cavalry, and Hughes's Mountain Battery are to form the garrison.

THE locusts are ruthlessly sweeping through Guzerat, after having wasted Marwar. On the 14th October they were swarming in Broach, covering and devouring every green thing. The next morning they began flying off towards Surat. In Marwar the grass is already reappearing where it had been eaten by locusts. Cultivation there is going on busily, but the present distress is "terrible"—writes Colonel Keatinge—and grain is not likely to fall much before next May. In the cotton district of Dhollera there was some fear of a visit from the locusts, but up to the 10th October none had been seen.

THE death of Azim Khan, already made known here by telegram, supplies the Bombay papers with one topic for discussion. No one seems to regret his fate. He is described as "rapacious, cruel, vindictive, licentious—the model of a bad Oriental sovereign." If he had succeeded, perhaps another set of adjectives might have been found to fit him. His ill-luck seems to have followed him to the last. Even in Persia he failed to secure asylum such as he craved. It remains to be seen how Abdurrahman Khan will behave himself as virtual heir to his uncle's pretensions.

OWING to the break in the Indo-Turkish Telegraph line, the new line through Persia and Russia has been largely used for Indian messages. And here is a specimen, culled from the Bombay Gazette, of the style in which it works:—

London, 21st.—Days insurrection volontry Barcelona refused disarm erektea bariechres tatetupl send amaise of severe fighting orders restored Jestik fleary pattot cornuned sonied.

29th.—spisow clarundas al ouhbral association lord been an continent head opportunity collectired opinions seen persons who exercise influence on bestiwos Europe and believe at no time since prussians austrian paer existed faviar paus pant monte montement blessing peace.

What a pity that the Red Sea Cable was not ready for laying this time last year! According to a late judgment in one of our courts, the senders and receivers of these muddled telegrams have no means of redress from the telegraph companies, who are not bound to take proper care of the messages entrusted to their charge.

THE last Report of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce refers to the experiments made in Bombay with a view to naturalise the divi-divi, an American plant of special value to tanners. This plant seems to have thriven like a native in Western India, needing no particular culture, and growing freely in hedges or amidst jungle. The sample pods sent from Bombay to London and Liverpool have been valued at the highest figures, and found on analysis to yield even more of the tanning properties than the divi-divi of Venezuela and Central America. There is every reason to hope that this plant will ere long form a significant item in the exports from Bombay.

BESIDES its tea-gardens, which may in time contribute largely to the export trade with Turkistan, the Kangra Valley can already show the beginnings of a promising trade in Cinchona, China grass, and slate. According to Major Paske, the Deputy-Commissioner, the Cinchona plantation at Burwarneh, 3,000 feet above the sea-level, had in eight months grown from seedlings a few inches high into "healthy and promising young trees, many of them three feet high." This was near the end of 1867, since which time new plantations have been laid out in the Valley. Want of land is the one great drawback to extended culture of a plant which seems to take most kindly to the Kangra soil. The first experiments with China grass were carried out by Mr. Montgomery on his Ram Bagh estate in Kangra. From what he saw there Major Paske was satisfied that the plant would thrive anywhere over the Valley, and, if grown in sufficient quantities for export to Europe, might bring large profits to the producer and manufacturer. Slate quarrying in Kangra grows more and more profitable every year. An English company with a large capital farm the important quarries of Khanyara, six miles from Dharmasala. These produce excellent roofing-slates, which are largely exported for buildings at Jalundhar, Umballa, and elsewhere. So great is the growing demand, that the company are hard pushed to keep abreast of it. It is to be hoped that the Government will ere long aid their efforts, by making a cart-road from Dharmasala to the quarries. Another quarry is now being worked at Dalhousie.

IN spite of indignant disclaimers on the part of the Institution of Civil Engineers in general, and of Mr. Hawkshaw in particular, it is not so very clear that underhand bargains between engineers and contractors are things utterly unknown and intolerable to the profession at large. One engineer, at any rate, writing to the editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, declares that contractors have "openly offered" him bribes of various kinds, "in such an easy, matter-of-fact, cool, business-like way," that he could not but suspect, what indeed they told him, that "they had on similar occasions had their offers accepted." The same writer goes on to illustrate the modes in which contractors make money unfairly out of their employers, and the awkward position in which an honest engineer is continually placed amidst knavery which he can neither check nor fathom. After all it may be that the Indian Government had some excuse for issuing the circular which gave so much offence in both countries. There must be a certain proportion of black sheep in every profession, and that of engineering is not less free than others from the temptations of the day.

LAST Saturday the Great Eastern left Portland, bound to Bombay with the long desired Red Sea Cable on board. She, and her comrades, the Hibernia, Chiltern, and Hawk, carry between them about 4,050 statute miles of cable, more than enough to connect Bombay with Suez. This cable is exactly as long as the French line between Brest and America, and is covered nearly in the same way, special provision being made against the ravages of the teredo, which, like the native of India, has a weakness for prepared hemp. The core of the cable consists of a fine copper wire, with six similar wires coiled round it. A heavier length of the same wire, with a proportionately thicker covering, will be laid down between Aden and Bombay. The outermost covering is formed by a mixture of pitch, tar, and ground flint—for the teredo's benefit—spread over strands of iron wire and yarn. Of the whole length to be laid in deep sea, 1,205 miles are required for the deeper part of the Red Sea, and 1,874 for the deep sea between Bombay and Aden. The strongest and thickest sections of the cable are the shore ends, protected by a further coating of galvanised iron wire beneath the outer cover aforesaid. Next to these come the sections destined for the shallower parts of the Red Sea and the Arabian Sea.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Daily News, who has just been taking a trip down the Suez Canal, attests the reality of "an unbroken communication from sea to sea," and has no doubt whatever but that a little more outlay is "alone needed to make the Suez Canal a practicable highway for the nations of the earth." At the same time he regrets that the opening of the Canal should take place so soon, and foresees some risk in piloting large ships through, for some months to come.

RICE AND GRAIN FOR WESTERN INDIA.—The ship Nagpore, with 1,726 tons rice, sailed from Bassein on 1st Oct. for Bombay, and the Kentuckian, with 1,700 tons, left on 16th Aug. Besides the above ships, the Baron Macaulay and Washington Irving were loading, and would remove together about 2,000 tons rice. The Malta also had arrived, and would load about 750 tons rice. The Camila, 476 tons, was loading gram and wheat. All the above ships are bound for Bombay, and several more are on the way to Rangoon under charter to load back.

TRADE WITH CENTRAL ASIA.

THE papers recently published by the India-office on the Trade of India with Eastern Turkestan form a fitting introduction to the narratives which Messrs. Shaw and Hayward will soon, we trust, be setting forth in their turn. They carry us back to 1866, when Mr. T. D. Forsyth, then Commissioner of Jalundhur, followed up Mr. Davies's Report of 1864 by a review of the information subsequently gathered under his directions. He himself travelled in 1864 into Russia, visited the great fair of Nijni Novgorod, and gathered in conversation with many British and Russian merchants, as well as from the lips of the Secretary to the English Embassy at St. Petersburg, that Russia, with her hands then full of domestic business, was "not to be so much dreaded as a rival in commerce." Our merchants were already "spoiling" Russian trade by entering Asia from the Black Sea. Once before indeed, soon after our occupation of Kabul in 1838, British goods drove Russian trade out of the Central-Asian market, but as the quality of our wares fell off, Russia in time regained her old footing. We hope that our traders will take this lesson to heart in their future proceedings.

In a subsequent journey through Lahoul and Spiti, districts lying between the Simla range of hills and the southern border of Ladakh, Mr. Forsyth learned that the better class of English goods were in great demand further north, in Khotan and Yarkand, countries but lately freed from Chinese rule. Russian traders were sure to step in with cheap imitations of such goods, but these were only purchased when the others could not be had. The people of Yarkand and Khotan were eager to trade with us; they had already given a warm welcome to one English traveller, Mr. Johnson; and their ruler had sent an envoy in quest of British aid against the Russians on the one hand and the Chinese on the other. Of the two great roads to Yarkand from Northern India that which leads through Srinuggur and Ladakh is at present the most generally used, but the one through Kulu and Lahoul to Ladakh is the oldest and most direct. A third route across Spiti passes through the Chinese frontier, but for British purposes it is not to be recommended. Mr. Forsyth is all for the Lahoul route which goes through British territory as far as twenty-three marches from Khotan, is quite easy for beasts of burden as far as Lingti on the British frontier, and up to that point could be made one broad highway at little cost. Even over the Rotang Pass there is now an excellent riding-road, while a stout wooden bridge now spans the Chandra or Chenab. From thence through the Lahoul Valley to the top of the Baralacha Pass the way is safe and easy. It is beyond the frontier that difficulties begin. All foreign goods passing through Ladakh by Lahoul are very heavily taxed by a ruler notoriously unfriendly to the Lahoul route. In spite of remonstrances on our part the dues levied in 1866 on goods from Lahoul varied from fourteen to twenty-five per cent. Small native merchants were driven out of the field, but the English traders who replaced them were not to be easily baffled, and their appeals to the Indian Government were strengthened by the tenor of Mr. Forsyth's reports. The Indian Government in September, 1866, desires the Punjab Government to remind the ruler of Cashmere of his promise to levy no more than five per cent. on goods intended for Yarkand and Turkestan, and to insist on his keeping the demands of the Ladakh officials within the prescribed bounds. He is also warned against the renewal of his attempts to exact tribute from the Negu of Lahoul, who owns no sort of allegiance to Cashmere, and whose people are British subjects.

In his despatch of March 7, 1867, Lord Cranborne approves of the tone thus adopted towards the Maharajah of Cashmere, praises Mr. Forsyth's "zeal and ability," refers to Mr. Johnson's explorations as having been highly commended by the Royal Geographical Society, and hints a hope that neither Mr. Forsyth nor any other British officer will undertake the hazardous journey to Khotan without special leave from his Government. In January, 1868, the Punjab Government, writing to that of India, traced the course of its dealings with Cashmere from Sir R. Montgomery's visit in 1863 to the first-fruits of Dr. Cayley's official connection with Ladakh between June, 1867, and the beginning of the following year. Dr. Cayley had been sent to Leh for the purpose of holding the Maharajah of Cashmere as far as he could to his formal pledges in respect of the tariff, and of gaining all possible information as to the best way of developing trade with Central Asia. After giving the Doctor all praise for the spirit in which he had carried out his instructions, the despatch accredits the Maharajah with "the greatest readiness to meet the wishes of Government, to assist Dr. Cayley, and to adopt measures for the improvement of trade, &c." It would therefore, thinks the Lieutenant-governor, be as well not to dishearten him by at once suggesting a further reduction of transit-dues from 5 to 2½ per cent. His Highness seems to have made some stand on behalf of the fine Turfani wool; but the Indian Government would not hear of any attempt to shirk the bargain already made, and desired the Punjab Government to press this point also "firmly but courteously." Sir D. Macleod further promises to urge on the Maharajah at all fitting seasons the necessity of opening out the Changchenmo route, and of taking a lesson from his English neighbours in all that tends to encourage trade.

In noticing this despatch, the Indian Government seems to differ somewhat from that of the Punjab in its estimate of Dr. Cayley, who comes in for a gentle lecture on his neglect of those very courtesies for which his own Government had just given him all credit. Something too much of the Briton's tendency to high-handed measures seems to have marked his dealings with the Lord of Cashmere. The Home Government concurs in the "caution" thus administered to him "as to the importance of moderation" in those dealings. His own report however may be accepted as his best vindication. He succeeded in balking the rapacity of the Ladakh officials, and in converting the reforms to which the Maharajah had pledged himself in 1864 from an utter mockery into an accomplished fact. But for his firmness with the officials at Leh a party of Yarkandi merchants would have paid Rs. 800 instead of Rs. 55 for transit duties, and their goods would never have got further south than Leh. He was also strenuous in pointing out the greater advantages of the road across the Changchenmo Valley, with its easier gradients, its freedom from glaciers and hardened snow, and the absence of those large dangerous streams that hinder progress on the Leh route. Fear of the Ladakh officials had hitherto kept the Turkoman traders from trying the easier journey. Dr. Cayley speaks with the highest confidence of the future trade between India and Turkistan. The demand for Indian and English goods in and beyond Yarkand is said to be enormous, and those northern countries can supply India with any amount of Shawl-wool, silk, bhang, gold and silver, and precious stones. Any number of traders would come south from Yarkand if they were only "sure of fair treatment" and a market for their goods. The vigorous ruler of Yarkand "does all he can" to help trade, and Ladakh will prove no hindrance so long as a British officer is present to enforce fair dealing from the officials of Leh.

Tea being an important item in the list of future exports from India to Central Asia, Mr. Forsyth's report on the progress of tea culture in the Kangra Valley turns up not unseasonably among these papers. It bears date the 1st February, 1868. No great increase in the acreage planted had taken place in the past four years. Out of nearly 9,000 acres taken up for tea, chiefly by European planters, less than 4,000 had so far been actually planted. No fault in this connection is to be found with the English settlers, who have won the goodwill and often the hearty attachment of the zemindars around them. But hardly anything can tempt these latter to part with an acre of their land, however ready they are to help the planters in finding manure, workmen, and other necessities. The Kangra Rajpoots too, however averse from tilling the land themselves, make capital overseers and factory-foremen, besides bringing a good many labourers into the tea-gardens. The planters have suffered most from the competition of the Public Works Department, which has sometimes quadrupled the price and absorbed an undue supply of labour in a district where labour is always scarce. This grievance has since been allayed by the discontinuance of forced labour for repairs of roads, and by greater deference on the part of Government officers to the special needs of the planters. A new and convenient market has been opened for the tea-planters at Palampore; good roads now connect the tea-gardens with the highways of the Punjab; while the presence of Dr. Cayley at Leh, combined with the influx of foreigners to the Palampore Fair, has already given a new spirit to the demand for Kangra teas. With regard to the planters' grievance against the Public Works Department, the Supreme Government appears to differ from the rulers of the Punjab. At any rate, in August, 1868, Sir John Lawrence reminded the Punjab Government that "the labourer has the right to expect the best price he can obtain for his work, and that nothing should be done to prevent the rise of wages in the natural way according to the supply and demand of the market,"—a remark which Sir S. Northcote formally endorsed.

In forwarding Mr. Forsyth's report on Kangra Tea, the Lieutenant-governor makes special mention of some engineering triumphs achieved by Lieutenant James Browne, the officer who has planned and built the new road through the Kangra Valley. He has already thrown over the Niggall a brick-arch bridge of 140 feet span, the broadest masonry span in India, and last year he was building another bridge of the same span over the Barao. We may also note Sir D. Macleod's surprise at finding in Palampore "a large and busy bazaar established at a spot which, five years ago, was under forest," a spot which already seems destined to become the seat of a permanent trade.

The indefatigable Mr. Forsyth again turns up with a memorandum, dated Sept. 21, 1868. Protesting against Sir R. Murchison's reference to the "impassable bulwark of the Himalyas," he proceeds to show what has been and should be done to improve the roads from Hindustan into Central Asia. The Rotang Pass is now in good order; the Palampore road will probably be completed as far as the salt mines of Gumar in a few years; a new road has been made from Gumar, over the Bulboo Pass, to Sultanpore; and the roads through Lahoul are being improved. But there is one bit of road from the Rotang to the Lingti, our northernmost boundary, which might, he says, be made as passable as the Hindustan and Tibet Road for not more than half a lakh of rupees (£5,000). Mr. Forsyth goes on to demonstrate, from his own and Dr. Cayley's personal experience, the special advantages of the road or roads from Lingti through the Changchenmo Valley to Yarkand, as compared with the ordinary route by the Karakorum. The route thus steadily advocated proves to be identical with the one indicated twenty-one years earlier by General Cunningham. With regard to the development of a steady trade by any of these routes Mr. Forsyth would clench his case by a telling presentment of the far greater difficulties which Russian caravans have to encounter in their long toilsome marches from Kiachta on the Chinese frontier to Moscow. Dr. Cayley himself gives a detailed report of his journey from Leh to the Karakash river, about twelve marches from Khotan. He got over the ground in sixteen stages, but merchants travelling with their laden horses could easily do the distance in twelve or thirteen days. It took him only thirteen days, walking the whole distance, to return to Leh. A comparison of the Karakorum with the Changchenmo route ends at all points in favour of the latter. Dr. Cayley's actual experience of it amply bears out his previous descriptions, founded as they were on hearsay. There is but one very high pass, and that is quite free from snow in summer, and it rises by very gradual slopes on either side. The rivers to cross are neither broad, nor deep, nor dangerously swift. From the Changchenmo to the Karakash the stages are very easy, water and fuel everywhere plentiful, and only three stages are without grass. For horses the whole road is perfectly easy, and a very little outlay would make it everywhere good for camels, especially of the shortlegged breed that climbs the rugged slopes of the Pamir and already abounds in Yarkand.

A final memorandum from Mr. Forsyth brings together the fruits of his latest inquiries touching the character of the trade with Central Asia, the cost and mode of its conveyance, the details of traffic, the opinions of the traders themselves, the position and sentiments of the Khush Beghi, and the prospect of extending our trade and influence in Central Asia. But any further remarks on this paper must be reserved for another article.

EDUCATION FOR THE MILLION.—V. INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In my last letter I described the efforts made by Lord W. Bentinck to establish a medical college at Calcutta, and its extension to the other Presidencies and Dependencies. Little attention however was paid to education through the several vernacular languages till the government of the Marquis Dalhousie, who, as we have seen, entertaining the same views as the Hon. Mount-Stuart Elphinstone in Bombay, Sir Thomas Munro in Madras, and Sir James Thomason in the North-Western Provinces, had directed his attention to the same object. The success with which this measure has been attended will be seen by the state of education in the official reports of 1856-7, as compared with that of 1867-8, comprised in the document headed "The Moral and Material Progress of India," lately submitted to Parliament, which includes an abstract on the subject of educational progress. From these documents I shall show how greatly that progress has been effected in the several Presidencies and Dependencies directly under British rule.

From these reports it appears that the increase of schools and pupils in the Lower Province of Bengal rose from 17 to 19 per cent. between the years 1867 and 1868 respectively. About 40 per cent. of the expense was borne by private contributors, the whole cost amounting to £274,212, supporting 5,607 schools and 210,354 pupils, at the rate of about £1. 2s. 10d. In the North-Western Provinces there attended on the 1st February, 1868, in the Government District Schools, between the ages below and above twelve years of age, 112,267 pupils, which would give one pupil in every 100 boys of an age to be at school, of whom 2,500 were studying English. The aggregate expenditure in 1867-8 amounted to £57,787.

In the province of Oudh the general expenditure on education amounted to £18,678 from Imperial funds, and £11,068 from local funds; the number of pupils increased within the year 1867-8 from 16,265 to 24,305, or at the rate of 49 per cent.

In the Punjab during the year 1867-8 there were 1,912 Government and 801 grant-in-aid institutions, independent of 4,888 indigenous schools, in which 129,869 pupils attended, being equivalent to  $\frac{1}{35}$  of the population. The amount expended was £91,306, of which 10 per cent. was derived from private contributions.

The Central Provinces, extending from Jubalpoor to the Eastern Coast, occupy a surface of 114,318 square miles, containing a population of 9,104,511, giving about 97 to the square mile. It consists of 6,864,770 Hindus, 237 Mahomedans of Gonda, and hill tribes of Aborigines, 1,995,663, besides 6,026 English, Eurasian, and Parsees. The most striking instance of the progress of education in this new acquisition of territory is shown among the Chamars, an Aboriginal race, following the trade of tanners and workers of leather in all shapes. This population does not exceed 400,000, among whom in 1868 there were 1,678 schools and 44,000 pupils, a larger proportion than is found in any other part of India. The expense of the schools in the Central Provinces increased in the last year from £39,073 to £44,112, of which £26,761 was obtained from local funds, and each pupil only cost 13s. 6d.

The Presidency of Madras has not been backward in its desire for education, as has been before shown in the time of Sir Thomas Munro, between 1819 and 1826. Its progress in a superior system has not been less conspicuous than in the other Presidencies. The number of colleges and schools had increased between 1867 and 1868 from 1,356 to 1,687, and the number of pupils from 51,118 to 62,973. The aggregate expenditure amounted to £84,340, of which £70,755 was disbursed for instruction alone, independent of charges for direction and inspection. Thus deducting the amount of fees and the sale of books, which came to £5,970, the net expenditure for 1867-8 was £78,370, gives an average of £1. 4s. 10d. for each pupil.

Bombay—which first set the example of the system of vernacular education, the institution of Normal Colleges, and the translation of European literature into the native languages—has continued to exist and expand till the present period. The number of schools had extended in 1867-8 to 2,089, with 137,587 pupils. The expenditure by Government amounted to £167,073, being £1. 8s. per head. Adverting to collegiate education, excluding the Normal Schools established for testing the qualities of candidates as tutors and admission into the superior Colleges at the three Presidencies, we find it reported that those of Bengal and Bombay have been framed, the former on the model of Cambridge and the latter of Oxford, while that of Madras more assumes that of the London University.

The following abstract from the official report of 1866-7 exhibits the result of the University examinations for matriculation or entrances:—

Colleges.		Calcutta.		Madras.		Bombay.
Government	...	...	19	...	6	...	5
Independent	...	...	22	...	13	...	1
Total	...	...	41	...	19	...	6

Calcutta.		Madras.		Bombay.
Years ended April 30.	Candidates.	Passed.	Candidates.	Passed.	Candidates.
1858	464	111	79	18	not stated.
1867 (12 months)	1507	814	895	366	456

DEGREES.		Calcutta.		Madras.		Bombay.
1858 to 1867	...	977	255	179	164	85	62

Thus a review of the state of education in 1856, contrasted with that of 1866, has been fully stated, but it remains to show how that has been sustained. In the former year, though considerable progress had been made, the amount subscribed by Government extended to 39,710 pupils, and amounted to £98,721, out of a revenue of £29,702,834, whereas in 1866 the sum of £478,300 was paid out of a revenue of £46,752,800. The expense was extensively increased by private contributions and fees, which reduces the expense of each pupil, on an average, to about £1. 4s. 6d.

Having exhausted the subject of Education for the Million in India, I reserve for a future letter the efforts made to extend education to the female population. I. B.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

IS IT A TRUE DEFICIT.

The Times of India asks what is "ordinary expenditure" as the term is understood "in the money markets of the world?" Whilst we are publishing to the four winds the woful state of our impecuniosity, and proclaiming that our financiers are not to be trusted, what is the actual state of things? How do the Indian finances compare with those of countries which are in favour in the money markets of the world—with the balance-sheets of England or the United States, or with those of France or Russia? We observe that the actual net Indian revenue of 1868-9 was 48½ millions, deducting the receipts from public works. This is an increase of income of about four millions in six years. And what was the actual expenditure—if we deduct public works, as must be done if we are to do justice to India in "the money markets of the world?" We find that the ordinary expenditure of the Indian Government—for all the expenses of regular administration, including perhaps the most costly military establishment in the world,—was barely 43½ millions, showing a "surplus" in the European sense of the word of five millions sterling, even in this extravagant year of the budget break-down. We are quite aware that this public-works expenditure has become part of the system of Indian Government, that, except in a revolutionary time like the Mutiny, it cannot be stopped, and that the works cannot be sold off and turned into money. Neither can the public works in England, the result of the private enterprise or the efforts of municipalities, be turned to account on behalf of the Imperial exchequer; but they form part of the tangible resources of the nation, and as such go to sustain its public credit. It is only reasonable that these resources should be taken some account of in Indian finance, and that when reference is made to "the money markets of the world," this enormous current outlay in improving our estate should be remembered by the guardians of our credit. In France and Russia many public works are undertaken by the State; but their financiers take good care to let the world know it.

THE DEFICIT.

The Pioneer is disposed to fear that it may have spoken a little too harshly of Sir Richard Temple's personal share in the great discredit which rests on his department. He inherited a bad system and mediocre subordinates. He did not invent the one, or appoint the others, but he seems cordially to have adopted both. For all that is known, Sir Richard Temple went to England in a state of perfect complacency as to his financial performances; and even now we owe the discovery of the abyss which was yawning for us, not to him at all, but to Lord Mayo. Though Sir Richard Temple's shortcomings may be described as chiefly negative—that he did not exhibit the eminent vigilance and penetration which the country would like in its Finance Minister—they are not entirely so. Many of the errors in the estimates are due to mere blunders, such, for instance, as the omission to include in the expenditure £105,230 on account of interest on the loans raised this year. Such an oversight as this ought to be impossible.

The Mofussilite, as one of the sanguine, considers that the financial measures now being instituted will, by the close of the official year on the 31st March, have caused the disappearance of the deficit altogether. The reductions and new taxation will by then, it is thought, have improved the position by at least a million and a-half sterling. As to Sir Richard Temple, we are afraid his reign as Financial Minister is at end. He let slip, indeed, failed to recognise—the great opportunity that lay before him, and which Mr. John Strachey has seized, and promises to turn to immense national advantage. Sir Richard Temple's estimates have all been rose-coloured, and—though we congratulate the services on having got such boons—the Financial Minister should have strenuously opposed, or at least made a semblance of opposing, the Civil and Military Leave and Furlough Rules of last year. He did not do so, and in other important financial matters showed himself inclined to be sensational and popularity-seeking rather than safe and sound. He would have tampered with Mr. Wilson's paper currency system, and seemed inclined, in relation to the gold currency, to inflict on this country the evil of a double standard. It is not easy to perceive how he can be permitted to resume charge of the finances, nor do we think he will desire to do so. He is cut out for an active stimulating provincial administrator, and it would be a great thing if he would or could remain absent on leave, until, without injustice to the superior claims of others, he could be nominated to such a post.

The Friend of India asks who is to blame for all this, and why has it only now been discovered? Increased taxation, always unpalatable, is intolerable in time of peace, is irritating in the middle of a year of depressed trade and shattered incomes. Whoever may be to blame, all who value the prosperity and credit of the empire will thank Lord Mayo's Government and the Financial Secretary for so promptly discovering and unreservedly publishing the truth. For some years the financial authorities seem to have been satisfied with an annual review of the position, for the Budget, but Lord Mayo has insisted on the same quarterly returns of revenue and expenditure which are made in England. Hence the discovery. So far as the deficit is due to drought there is not a word to be said, except that the estimates for the current year, made in the face of the scarcity, betrayed sanguine inexperience. As to the home charges, it is possible that Parliament may be roused next session to give the tax-payers and officials in India an opportunity of criticising, if not controlling them, every year. For the rest, although we have always lamented that Sir Richard Temple was removed from purely administrative work, in which he excels, and have expressed regret that he went on leave this year, when his health did not demand the change, that official is not so much to blame as his predecessors, and he has yet to be heard in his own defence. The evil goes back to the abandonment of Mr. Wilson's policy, and the entrusting of a revenue of some fifty millions sterling to mere amateurs. Sir C. Trevelyan, Mr. Massey, and Sir R. Temple were good in their own way, but that way was not finance. They were set to play with edge tools, and the Empire suffers. The first, like Sir C. Beadon in Orissa, was allowed to take his own way, in opposition to Lord Lawrence's better judgment. The second was forced by Lord Lawrence to do something to remedy the error of his predecessor, by taxing the wealthy, and produced two miserable abortions, which did more to make direct taxation unpopular and unfruitful than the really severe impost of Mr. Wilson. Sir R. Temple deserves the credit of having learned a lesson from their experience. But not one of these so-called Finance Ministers had financial training, grasp, or instinct—not one, for instance, would have been trusted to manage a bank. And so, because England has not another James Wilson to send us, or will not send him, the Government of India is forced to do over again in 1869 what would have been completed in 1861, but for Mr. Wilson's death.

WRONGS OF BRITISH MEDICAL OFFICERS.

The Madras Times can see no limit to the amount of extra work which British medical officers may be called upon to perform in addition to their own specific duties, and that without extra remuneration; whereas the officers of the Indian Medical Department claim and receive separate charge pay, when occupying separate charges. A case of recent occurrence will exemplify this point. A medical officer of a British regiment had the care of a wing of his own corps, a troop of horse artillery, and a battery of garrison artillery, for a time. He submitted a request for extra pay for additional and onerous responsibilities, and it was based on the precedent of the rule existing in the Indian service; but the claim was objected to and disallowed. Now if only on the principle of the labourer being worthy of his hire, this disadvantage of the British medical officer should meet, we think, with consideration and redress. But where the shoe most pinches the British medical officer—he at least who is under the rank of surgeon—is, that he sees his brother assistant of the Indian Department getting his step of promotion—vacancy or no vacancy—after twelve years' service, and without examination, in contradistinction to which he, the assistant surgeon of the European army, has to wait on for opportunities, by the removal of his seniors, and consequently for an indefinite period, before gaining the superior grade, to which moreover he cannot attain until he shall have satisfactorily undergone a very extended and rigorous examination. The effect of this promotion of the Indian officer presses painfully and hardly upon the British assistant surgeon, who happens to find himself above twelve years in that rank, for, not very unfrequently, on those committees where, for the interests of the service the two departments are combined, he, although senior in years and length of time in the army, has to sit as junior to the Indian surgeon beside him—that officer, mind you, not having been promoted for merit or speciality, but simply from having completed the stated number of years which qualify him for advancement. We know that it may be argued that the tables may be turned, and the Indian man see himself in the position just described of the British; but according to the present rate and chance of promotion it is almost an impossibility that this can occur, the Army List for August showing some assistant-surgeons of fourteen years', many of thirteen, and a host of twelve years' service in that grade. We think that we have the remedy at hand for removing this invidious distinction; and costing nothing, as it will, it is, of course, all the more feasible. The combatant officers of the British service have brevet rank of captain, major, and lieutenant-colonel accorded to them in this country after certain periods of service, and these local promotions are specially bestowed to avoid supersession by the officers of the Indian forces. Why not extend the same boon to the assistant-surgeons, and gazette them local surgeons after twelve years? They would gladly accept it, consider it a gracious concession, and it would induce a happier and less envious feeling than now exists between the two medical services.

STATION TALK.

ALLAHABAD, Oct. 6.—The rains, instead of having given over, are continuing, and last night (Tuesday) and this morning we had a heavy downpour, accompanied with terrible claps of thunder and flashes of lightning. In fact, as I write it is drizzling, and the clouds portend another shower. Up to six o'clock this morning and from twelve last night we had about 2 min. 7 sec., and I should say since then about another inch must have fallen. The average quantity of rain for the season for this place is thirty inches or thereabouts, but we had that much more than a fortnight ago, and up to date the total fall is very nearly forty inches. It is apparent that this excessive rain will prove injurious to the crops, and already cries of distress are heard in the city. The khurreef crops about this time are commencing to ripen, and the cuttings are carried on on a small scale, but all the standing cereals will be materially injured by the rain we are now having. Instead of water the sun is required to shine forth in all his glory, and secure to the poor a return of plenty. At the last meeting of the Famine Committee one of the members, Lalla Gya Pershad, stated that the houses of all the wealthy natives in the city were daily crowded with numbers of starving poor, and that it was absolutely necessary, in order to alleviate their sufferings in any sensible degree, to raise funds by appealing to the charity of the residents, European and native. This proposal, as will be found from the published proceedings in the Government Gazette, was carried nem. con., and a subscription list was opened at the same time, and a sum of Rs. 827 subscribed. It is the intention of the committee to appeal to public sympathy, and I doubt not that the appeal will be cheerfully responded to by one and all, for human nature is such as not to admit of our beholding numbers around brought to the brink of death for want of food and to withhold in uniting to afford relief according to each one's means. These are indeed very hard times, when wheat is selling at nine seers for the rupee, and a man with a wife and say three or four children to support on an income of four rupees per month. The health of the station is from all accounts good. No disease of any virulent type is raging either among the European or native community. The funds at the disposal of the Central Committee have all been expended, the Government has resolved to take on itself the support of the several relief-houses in the province. It is anticipated that at the end of this month the necessity of maintaining relief-houses will no longer exist, but should it go on raining in other places as it has done here, I very much fear the distress will not be mitigated to such an extent as is expected. The balance in the Committee's hands was Rs. 14,000 on the 1st October, as will be seen from a statement of receipts and disbursements published in the last Gazette.

BHURTPORE, Oct. 8.—During the past few months, amidst general want and famine, there was scarcity of news in this station, except the wistful looking for rains, which have at last appeared with heavy downpours, and the bright prospects of a plentiful harvest have given strength to the sinking hearts of the poor zemindars. Hundreds of carts laden with corn are passing this way to Jeypore, to relieve the famine-stricken districts of Marwar and Ajmere, and hence very little reduction has been observed in the price of cereals in this part of the country. His Highness the Maharajah, since the date of his assuming the reins of Government, has been conducting business very diligently, on the same principles as observed during his minority. He seems to be willing to follow the example of his guardian the Political Agent, whose salutary advice and timely instructions seem deeply impressed on his mind. It is hoped that Bhurtpore under his reign will prosper and improve in the same way as all other countries do when governed by a good ruler. No doubt his Highness will be an exceptional chief amongst those in Rajpootana. I cannot express what amount of painful feeling is excited by the approaching departure of our kind and amiable Political Agent, Captain Walter, to England for two years. This officer's just and benevolent career throughout the whole of his incumbency at Bhurtpore requires an abler pen than mine to describe. Like a true Christian he has performed his part conscientiously, and everything under his management has attained the height of prosperity. The benefits which a country might expect while under the tutelage of the British Government have been realised at Bhurtpore by the zeal and energy of Captain Walter. The Chief was carefully brought up, educated and invested with power; the Sirdars were patronised and retained in the enjoyment of their hereditary posts and emoluments; and the people in general were brought to such a prosperous condition that during the last famine the zemindars supported themselves out of their own resources and willingly paid the Government revenue without a single blade of grass being produced in some of their fields. These blessings have been conferred by the wise administration of Captain Walter. I am sure the Bhurtpore people should, if allowed, present him on his departure with an address as a memento of their gratitude, wishing him God-speed and health. Captain Blair, it is reported will officiate for him during his absence.

CENTRAL PROVINCES, Oct. 8.—The office of Conservator of Forests has once more changed its incumbent. Captain Cox is now officiating for Mr. Jacob, proceeding on leave, who was officiating for Captain Doveton. There are no less than three Deputy Commissioners going on privilege leave simultaneously, Captains Broomfield, Loch and Grace, so that three more officiating appointments will have to be made. No one has as yet been gazetted to officiate for Dr. Townsend, the Sanitary Commissioner; and Dr. Law, the Superintendent of the Nagpore Central Jail, is still officiating for the Inspector General of Jails, besides doing his own work. Mr. Biss, Deputy Accountant General, has returned to "Somerset House" [all official letters written by the Nagpore Accountant were for some time dated from "Somerset House,"] and resumed charge of his office from Dr. Cline, who has shown marked efficiency and aptitude for such duties during even the very short time that he officiated as Deputy Accountant General. There was a courteous tone in every letter which issued from this office during Dr. Cline's incumbency, and it may usefully be maintained. All the expected "big men" have passed through the provinces, but others are almost immediately expected, and amongst them the undeservedly abused Sir Richard Temple. If any one is responsible for the deficit which has become the hobgoblin of the hour it is the Hon. Mr. Massey, who by his indolent habits permitted the Financial Department to raise a chaos of accounts, and let confusion reign supreme. It is only since Sir Richard and Mr. Strachey have handled the Exchequer papers that the department has been got into order; and it would be difficult to find two men in the whole of India who are better fitted to systematise the financial operations of the country and to ensure trustworthy returns being obtained from the department in future. But to return to "big men's" movements. Mr. Morris had to leave service sharp, in order to be present at Nagpore on the arrival of the Hon. Sumner Maine from Jubbulpore, en route for England. Suleyman Effendi, the Envoy from Turkey to Bokhara, has been got rid of. Any of your readers who may expect to find in him a Turk with tight pants, in other words, Young Turk, will be much disappointed. Not that I believe any one will go any distance to see Effendi, but their case may be similar to mine. I went to the Jubbulpore station to see a friend off by train, and could not help seeing the Envoy in propria persona, with his twenty or thirty followers, including some wretched looking Turkish soldiers and a few women; they may have been Turkish ladies, but having been put into a second-class carriage I should say not bloated aristocrats. Their raiment consisted of pure white, and as no portion of their faces was exposed I cannot indulge in a description of them. The Envoy, with his son, occupied a first-class carriage, of course, and but for his green velvet choja embroidered with gold might have been mistaken for an intruder, looking, as he does, like any ordinary Mahomedan. But his easy dignified manners were very different from the sycophantic deportment of the Hindoostani. He had the good taste to present a handsome bouquet to the deputy commissioner, Mr. Jones, when the train was starting, as a token, I suppose, of gratitude for all the attention shown him at Jubbulpore. I may take leave of Suleyman Effendi after telling your readers that he and his suite are travelling at the expense of Indian taxpayers, who have, therefore, every right to know all they can about him, and we may thereby also infer that his mission to Bokhara is intimately connected with the welfare of India. I very much fear that we are having too much rain in the Nerbudda districts, where there is much paddy and cotton sown. The rice crop is now ready to cut, and by all accounts the harvest will be a splendid one, if we do not have excessive rain. The cotton crop has been injured somewhat by the October showers, which have knocked the cotton on the ground and wetted and dirtied it. All that has fallen will hardly be marketable, and every day's rain will do more injury. There are still "kungals" about at Jubbulpore and Dumoh. The other day I saw one of these famine-stricken people race after a youth who was carrying food to his father, employed on some railway work; he grabbed the food out of the boy's hand and immediately began to devour it; but a peeler coming up at the time seized the culprit and walked him off for trial. He tried to persuade the youth to let the man finish the repast, as it was of no use to him or his father, but the boy indignantly refused, adding that it would answer for his dog's daily ration,—characteristic, eh! The party of topographical surveyors which has recessed at Jubbulpore, for the first time this year, will recess at Mussoorie next year, though their work in the following year will still be in the Central Provinces. Mr. Ricketts, Judge of Allahabad, has returned from England, and must be now at Allahabad.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE VICEROY.—Lord Mayo was to reach Nynce Tal on Oct. 18, and start for Calcutta, accompanied by Sir William Muir, on Oct. 25.

SIR D. MACLEOD.—The Lieut.-Governor's camp left the hills about Oct. 20 or 22, and was expected to reach Allahabad by Nov. 1.

MR. AITCHISON.—His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General, as Grand Master, has nominated Mr. C. U. Aitchison to be the Secretary of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICES.—We hear that Mr. Thomas Jones is to return to India in November next, and assume charge of his new appointment as director of Government printing offices in this Presidency.—Indian Daily News.

CASHMERE.—Orders have been issued by the Government of India to pay to the Maharajah of Cashmere the sum of Rs. 39,371, from the proceeds of the articles contributed by his Highness to the late Paris Exhibition.—Indian Daily News.

FOREST DEPARTMENT.—We now learn that it is Captain Jarrett, Deputy Conservator of Forests, who will officiate as Conservator of Forests while Mr. Jacob is on leave, and not Captain Fox.—Central India Times.

MEDICAL.—We hear that Dr. H. Daly, who has officiated for some time as garrison surgeon, Fort William, has been confirmed in that appointment. Dr. Daly is well known for his services both in China and during the late Abyssinian campaign.—Englishman.

DEATH OF MRS. OSBORN.—Hills North of Dehra, Oct. 4.—It is with extreme regret I have to announce the death on Saturday of Mrs. Osborn, wife of Captain Osborn, H. M.'s 55th, after a few days' illness. Her remains were interred at Landour yesterday morning.—Delhi Gazette.

CHUTTESGURH.—We understand that Major Cumberlege, Deputy Commissioner of Sumbulpore, has been told to hold himself in readiness to assume charge of the Chuttesgurh division from Colonel Balmain, whose retirement from the Central Provinces Commission is shortly expected.—Central India Times.

A PERILOUS INNOVATION.—The Udula Bandhub, or the Woman's Friend, sees the greatest possible danger in Lady Mayo's dancing with native chiefs, and hopes she will not do so again; "for if she does, then all the rajahs and chieftains in the country will in turn give invitations to balls, and there will be much waste of money."

UNEMPLOYED FIELD OFFICERS.—We have heard, says the Mofussilite, "that the battle of the schemes for inducing the retirement of the supernumerary field officers is not yet at an end. Those of our military readers interested are, however, cautioned against entertaining hopes which may prove to have been fallacious."

THE SON OF KING THEODORE.—It is probable, says a Calcutta contemporary, that Alamayoo of Abyssinia will, at least for the present, remain in Lucknow. The Accountant-General of the N. W. Provinces has enquired of Government from what Treasury the allowance to the lad is to be drawn. The answer has been a reference to the Chief Commissioner of Oude.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The disintegration of the Central Provinces, which has so much engrossed the attention of our local public of late, may now be looked upon (says the Central India Times) as certain, and we learn on the very highest authority that it will have become a fait accompli before the 1st of April next, the commencement of the official year.

PROPOSED CAMP IN HONOUR OF THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH.—The Mofussilite confidently states that there will be a camp at Meeran Meer, near Lahore, in honour of the Duke of Edinburgh, during the first week in February. The following regiments and batteries will be present:—Five batteries of artillery, two European regiments of cavalry, two Native regiments of cavalry, three European regiments of infantry, two Native regiments of infantry.

LOST IN THE "CAENATIC."—A Bengal journal mentions two important despatches that are believed to have gone down in the Caenatic. In one the Secretary of State is said to have intimated his determination to leave the Punjab Tenancy Act to operate under certain instructions from himself. The other despatch sanctioned the employment of three men of-war in the Persian Gulf on Lord Mayo's earnest representations. The vessels are to be entirely under the control of the Government of India.

EFFECTS OF IMAGINATION.—Dr. Fayer, well known for his experiments in the use of antidotes to snake poison, tells an amusing story. A harmless snake bit a man in the dark. He was brought to the hospital in a dying state from mental prostration; fortunately his friends had brought the snake in a bottle. On explaining to the man and his friends that it was harmless, and with some difficulty making them believe it, the symptoms of poisoning rapidly disappeared, and in a few hours the man left the hospital as well as ever he was in his life.

INDIAN MISSIONS.—The Missionary Conference of Calcutta has resolved to take a very detailed and elaborate census of Protestant missions in India at the same time as the ordinary census is made. It would be well if the Roman Catholic authorities would do the same for their missions. Very interesting information would thus be obtained, and it would be easy to check the general results by means of the Government tables, which will state the sect to which each Christian belongs, as well as the various castes and divisions of Hindoos and Mussulmans. How little reliable Roman Catholic statistics on this subject are may be imagined from the fact that their ecclesiastical returns show 544,558 Christians in the Madras Presidency, or 130,462 more than all the Christians of every sect and race as given in the unbiassed Government census. Authorities like Bishop Tissot, of Vizagapatam, admit that their figures are not to be trusted.—Friend of India.

CHINESE TURKISTAN.—The Peking Gazette of July 13 contains a public admission by the Chinese Government of the loss of its hold over the provinces of Chinese Turkistan.

OCTROI DUTIES ABOLISHED.—From October next octroi duty on raw cotton is to be abolished in all towns in the Nagpore, Wurdah, and Chanda district.

A SHORT WAY WITH SCHOOLMASTERS.—The Garrow lads, says the Pioneer, have a good way of getting rid of an obnoxious schoolmaster. According to the Bungudoot, they recently killed and devoured their pedagogue.

OPIMUM.—It is satisfactory to find that the latest statistics of Malwa opium are highly favourable, and if the increase continue the Bengal deficiency will not be so severely felt. In the three months of April, May and June the revenue derived from the opium pass-fees exceeded by twenty-seven lakhs the corresponding amount for the same months of the preceding year. The increase is set down to the Imperial edict prohibiting the growth of the poppy in China.

AFGHANISTAN.—Matters are assuming a different aspect in Afghanistan. We (Delhi Gazette) learn by our Cabul correspondent's letter, which brings advices up to 27th September, too late to give in our present issue, that there has been a rebellion in Khelat, and that the Taulkhee tribe, under their chief, had taken possession of Khelat. Sirdar Mohamed Yakoub Ali Khan, with troops, had been ordered by Amir Shere Ali Khan to march for Khelat without delay. Sirdar Mohamed Ibraheem Khan, the late governor of Herat, had returned from Hazara to Madan, and was preparing to leave for Turkistan, where news had been received that the Russians were going to march against that place.

CHOLERA AT UMRITSUR.—We understand that the Government of India has appointed a commission to inquire into the causes of the outbreak of cholera at Umritsur this hot season. Colonel Young, R.E., has been nominated as president; Mr. Palmer, C.E., and the Sanitary Commissioner of the Punjab as members. We shall be astonished if we do not hear a good deal about the very faulty drainage of the city; and, although lacs of rupees have been spent on it, a rumour is prevailing that an entirely new system of drainage will have to be laid down. The D.P.W. will most probably have a good deal to account for to the commission; besides, possibly, being called upon to show how it happens that the system of drainage, which is of recent construction, is so pre-eminently defective.—Delhi Gazette.

THE SAILORS' HOME.—Can any one inform us what is the matter with that new and magnificent building on the Strand opened two years ago with eclat by Sir John Lawrence—we mean the Sailors' Home? We are aware that it was built without closets, bath-rooms, cook-houses, &c., but it was esteemed a wonderful structure—one of the triumphs of the D.P.W. If report speaks truly, there is need for a squirt in the building already. It is said that the roof has to be propped up for fear, like Paddy, "it 'ud be fallin' down." It would be an interesting inquiry for Colonel Strachy and the Viceroy to ascertain whether there was any dustoorie in connection with the building; and they might perhaps discover how it is that new buildings of the "magnificent" order of D.P.W. architecture, only two years old, have to figure in the estimates for repairs, or, failing that, how long they will be ere they fall down.—Indian Daily News.

A DIVORCE SUIT.—The Lahore paper, in the following paragraph, alludes to a divorce case that will interest English readers:—We hear that an important case, by no means devoid of interest, is at present pending in the Court of the Additional Commissioner of Umballa. The plaintiff, an officer of high standing in the army, seeks the assistance of the Court to annul the holy tie of matrimony which the Church contracted for him some years ago, and the co-respondent is a nobleman who was formerly well known at Simla, and is at present a member of the House of Commons. We need hardly say that Lord William Hay, late Deputy Commissioner of Simla, is the gentleman to whom we allude. The plaintiff is Lieut.-Colonel Gordon, who charges his wife with having committed adultery with the co-respondent and "divers other persons on divers other occasions."

LOSS OF THE SHIP "ORIENT."—The Calcutta papers record the loss of another vessel in the Hooghly. On Saturday evening, the 9th Oct., about five o'clock, the ship Orient, when turning round to the tide to anchor for the night at Mud Point, took the ground, and capsized in less than a minute. Three of the crew were drowned, so sudden was the loss of the vessel. The Challenge, steam-tug, brought up the rest of the crew to town on Monday. It is said that the weather out at the Sandheads was very bad on the night of Thursday, when the tail end of a cyclone just whisked past Calcutta. Beyond the general fact that the weather was very severe, we are not in a position to speak, no particulars having reached us. It is to be hoped that there is no disaster to chronicle in addition to the one above noted, which, however, is in no way attributable to the weather. The Orient cleared on the morning of the 9th, with a cargo of about 270 tons of linseed, 700 tons of cotton, 250 tons of jute, and some small quantity of general cargo. Her registered tonnage was 974 tons; she was commanded by Captain J. Hamilton, and her crew consisted of about twenty-five men. She carried no passengers.

A WARNING.—The Indian Medical Gazette anticipates, from the course of its ravages this year, that cholera will pass into Egypt, Turkey, and Russia in 1870. "A new and most dangerous passage will, after the close of this year, be open to cholera through the Suez Canal, which will become a great curse to Europe if cholera infecting crews, merchandise, and vessels pass over its water, to be taken into the docks of the crowded, low-lying, and filthy seaport towns of Europe."

AN INDIAN ASSURANCE COMPANY.—We observe that the projected Bengal and Upper India Life Assurance Company is to be established. Almost all the shares have been subscribed for, and a meeting is to be convened at Meerut on the 16th October to organise the company. In the present distrust of Home boards, the company, confining its business to India, and being managed entirely in India, will be likely to secure the confidence and support of Anglo-Indians, especially as the whole of its capital will be invested in Government securities. A clause to this effect will, we presume, be embodied in the articles of association. This is the distinctive feature of the new company, that which has procured for it the large measure of support it has already received even in this time of panic and suspicion. We would recommend that the head office should be at Allahabad for two reasons, i.e., it is the most important city in Northern India, and it is also the most central.—Pioneer, Oct. 8.

TIME-EXPIRED MEN.—The movements of time-expired men to Bombay and Calcutta are about to commence. There are to be two parties; and both will proceed in the first instance to Allahabad, there to take their orders from Major-General Travers, commanding the Allahabad Division. The following officers, ordered to their depots, or proceeding on leave to England, will accompany the time-expired men to the port of embarkation, and take charge of troops if their services should be required on arrival:—Captain E. H. Dyke, R.A., to command the first party; and Captain R. Hoskins, H.M.'s 77th Foot, and Lieutenant J. W. Darvill, H.M.'s 105th Light Infantry, to do duty. Captain W. Balfe, H.M.'s 11th Hussars, to command the second party; and Captain J. F. Hosken, H.M.'s 105th Light Infantry, and Lieutenant H. Willins, H.M.'s 105th Light Infantry, to do duty. Captains Dyke, Hoskins, and Hosken proceed on private affairs. Their services in command of troops from the port of embarkation may or may not be required.

COL. ROTHNEY, C.S.I.—We (Delhi Gazette) regret to hear that in consequence of some mistake made at the Horse Guards in giving brevet rank to Col. Rothney, C.S.I., commanding the 5th Goorkhas at Abbottabad, he will revert from his rank of colonel to that of lieutenant-colonel. The gallant colonel's case is really a very hard one, as he is now placed below men who have recently received brevets, and so becomes effectually shut out of the command of the frontier force. If this officer had been merely a lieutenant-colonel instead of a full colonel at the Agror business, he would have received a brevet with other officers. He was undoubtedly more deserving of a brevet and a C.B. than any of the "lucky five," for it is well known that Col. Rothney and his brave little Goorkhas were the only men who really did any fighting in that inglorious campaign. When the raid was made upon Agror, the 5th Goorkhas were surrounded, and would have been cut up but for the colonel's coolness and pluck. Col. Rothney also distinguished himself before Delhi and in the frontier campaign against the Wazeeris. There is perhaps not a more deserving officer on the frontier. We hope still to hear that his case has received the full attention of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

CHOLERA AT PESHAWUR.—We regret to learn that cholera is still at Peshawur. Up to Oct. 3 there had been cases daily in most of the native regiments. Nor were the European corps quite clear of the pestilence. Two officers, Dr. Bell, of H.M.'s 36th Regiment, and Capt. Chalmers, of the 19th B.C., have succumbed to the epidemic. The former, well known for his kindly manners and courteous bearing, says the Delhi Gazette, died at his post in the discharge of his onerous duties, in the very prime of life, and amid the tears and regrets of all who knew him; and it is painful to hear that his wife and family are said to be on their way out from England to rejoin him in this country. The latter is said to have contracted the disease while attending on a boy whom he had brought with him from Abyssinia, and who, having survived his master, died of the same complaint, and both lie buried in one of the teeming cemeteries of that "white man's grave" of the frontier. The disease was said to be in abeyance or declining, and not a day too soon, if all we hear of its ravages be true. It is said that the 36th alone has lost upwards of 120 men, and that the 104th lost 75, besides a number of women and children, amounting in all, we hear, to some 95 or 100 souls. Our correspondent did not know the numbers who had succumbed in the Artillery, but if they are in any proportion with the losses just referred to, they must be considerable; and we do not think we are at all overstating the figures when we say that some 250 Europeans have died under the influence of the terrible scourge with which that station has been recently visited.—Delhi Gazette.

MILITARY.—It is said by the Punjab journal that the 23rd Punjab Pioneers, and not the 24th Light Infantry, are to go to Hazara. As the 23rd is Colonel Chamberlain's well-known Musbees, we think it most probable that our contemporary is right. A squadron of the 16th Bengal Cavalry and Major Hughes' European Mountain Battery will make up the garrison.—The 38th Regiment leave Sealkote for Peshawur on the 15th October; Colonel Willis is about to proceed to England, and Major Vance will take command of the regiment.—Indian Public Opinion, Oct. 5.—We hear from Meerut that on Oct. 2 Ensign Maltby, of H.M.'s 105th L.I., in the delirium of fever, attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat. The fact was discovered in time, and under the care of Dr. Anderson, one of the surgeons attached to the regiment, the case is progressing favourably. Mr. Maltby had been preparing for the "higher standard" examination, and his fever is attributed in part to over study.—Drunkenness in the army is to be put down with a strong hand. Even the allowance of beer is to be limited in future to one quart per day from the canteen. The only exceptions are for the players in cricket matches and other amusements, who, provided the sanction of the commanding officer of the regiment is obtained, may be indulged with an extra pint. The Englishman asks:—"Have the authorities considered that in thus 'robbing the poor man of his beer' they will drive him to consume much more injurious stuff in the shape of country liquor, for if a soldier is determined to go on the spree he will obtain drink in spite of all the regulations ever printed."

LIFE IN BENGAL A CENTURY AGO.—Extracted from the fifth volume of the series of Selections from the Records of the Indian Government, by Mr. Hugh Sandeman:—"To J—M—, Esq., London. Calcutta, 23rd December, 1779. I am now to fulfil my promise, to give you a particular account of the day, as it is commonly spent by an Englishman in Bengal. About the hour of seven in the morning, his durwan (porter or door-keeper) opens the gate, and the veranda (gallery) is free to his circa, peons (footman) harcarrahs (messengers or spies) chubdars (a kind of constables) houccabadars and consumahs (or steward and butler) writers and solicitors. The head-bearer and jemadar enter the hall, and his bedroom at eight o'clock. A lady quits his side, and is conducted by a private staircase, either to her own apartment, or out of the yard. The moment the master throws his legs out of bed, the whole posse in waiting rush into his room, each making three salams, by bending the body and head very low, and touching the forehead with the inside of the fingers, and the floor with the back part. He condescends, perhaps, to nod or cast an eye towards the solicitors of his favour and protection. In about half an hour, after undoing and taking off his long drawers, a clean shirt, breeches, stockings, and slippers, are put upon his body, thighs, legs, and feet, without any greater exertion on his own part than if he was a statue. The barber enters, shaves him, cuts his nails, and cleans his ears. The chillumjee and ewer are brought by a servant, whose duty it is, who pours water on his hands to wash his hands and face, and presents a towel. The superior then walks in state to his breakfasting parlour in his waistcoat, is seated; the consumah makes and pours out his tea, and presents him with a plate of bread or toast. The hairdresser comes behind and begins his operation, while the houccabadar softly slips the upper end of the snake or tube of the houcca into his hand. While the hairdresser is doing his duty the gentleman is eating, sipping, and smoking by turns. By-and-by his bannian presents himself with humble salams, and advances somewhat more forward than the other attendants. If any of the solicitors are of eminence they are honoured with chairs. These ceremonies are continued perhaps till ten o'clock, when, attended by his cavalcade, he is conducted to his palanquin, and preceded by eight or twelve chubdars, harcarrahs, and peons, with the insignia of their professions, and their livery distinguished by the colour of their turbans and cummerbands (a long muslin belt wrapped round the waist), they move off at a quick amble; the set of bearers, consisting of eight generally, relieve each other with alertness, and without incommoding the master. If he has visits to make his peons lead and direct the bearers; and if business renders his presence only necessary, he shows himself, and pursues his other engagements until two o'clock, when he and his company sit down, perfectly at ease in point of dress and address, to a good dinner, each attended by his own servant. And the moment the glasses are introduced, regardless of the company of ladies, the houccabadars enter, each with a houcca, and presents the tube to his master, watching behind and blowing the fire the whole time. As it is expected that they shall return to supper, at four o'clock they begin to withdraw without ceremony, and step into their palanquins; so that in a few minutes the master is left to go into his bedroom, when he is instantly undressed to his shirt, and has long drawers put on; and he lies down on his bed, where he sleeps till about seven or eight o'clock; then the former ceremony is repeated, and clean linen of every kind, as in the morning, is administered; his houccabadar presents the tube to his hand, he is placed at the tea-table, and the hairdresser performs his duty as before. After tea he puts on a handsome coat, and pays visits of ceremony to the ladies; returns a little before ten o'clock, supper being ordered at ten. The company keep together till between twelve and one in the morning, preserving great sobriety and decency; and when they depart our hero is conducted to his bedroom. With no greater exertions than these do the Company's servants amass the most splendid fortunes."

Madras.

OOTACAMUND.—We learn by telegram that the Exhibition at Ootacamund was opened most successfully yesterday.—Madras Times, Oct. 8.

THE MADRAS BANK.—At a meeting held on Friday, October 8, Colonel Carpendale was elected a director of the Bank, in succession to Mr. A. J. Byard, returned to Europe.

DEATH OF MR. S. PERKES.—Many will be sorry to notice in the list of deaths the name of Mr. Samuel Perkes, whose plan for a harbour at Madras recently brought him rather prominently into public notice.—Madras Times, Oct. 7.

DEFALCATIONS.—In the Deputy Town Collector's Office at Madras serious defalcations have been discovered. An investigation is going on, and the amount of the defalcations, as at present known, is over Rs. 14,000.

MILITARY.—The Bangalore Herald has been informed, "on reliable authority," that the contemplated change of quarters of the Lancers and Hussars has been negatived for the present. The health of the latter at Secunderabad has been so much improved that the proposed expense to the State has been adjourned sine die. We hear that Colonel Puckle is about to proceed on eighteen months' sick leave to England.—Bangalore Herald, Oct. 5.

CAPTAIN COLE.—"Our friends the Coorgs," says the Bangalore Herald, "will doubtless be very glad to hear of Captain R. A. Cole's safety. When the news of the wreck of the Carnatic was received by them we are informed that they were plunged into the deepest grief at the probability of the death of their superintendent. He appears to be extremely popular with them, and we expect to hear that when he returns to Mercara he will receive quite an ovation. We need scarcely say that he is equally as much liked in Bangalore."

ITEMS FROM MADRAS.—We learn that some of the letters saved from the wreck of the Carnatic have turned up at Bangalore, but we have not heard of any of the five hundred being for Madras. The loss of the Carnatic is a subject of endless opinions here; but every one agrees as to the folly of having left the passengers and mails on board when they could so easily have been landed safely, and if the steamer had been got off, taking them on board again would not have caused much loss of time. English telegrams have come through very irregularly again, and have taken a very long time to come by way of Russia. The latest telegram received is only dated 27th Sept. The terrific storm which we were to have had on the 5th of this month did not come off. Amongst the natives here there was a good deal of fear, and at Masulipatam the inhabitants in a body moved inland, but there was a good excuse for the Masulipatamites, as it is only a few years ago that thirty thousand people were drowned by a storm wave. So far the weather here continues most unpleasant, as it is very hot and close, so that it seems as if our uncommonly hot season was going to turn out uncommonly long as well, for there are no signs of the Monsoon yet; but we ought to be having a change soon now, and the heat is more easily borne when we know the rain may come any day.—Athenæum, Oct. 11.

THE NEW COLLEGE AT TRIVANDRUM.—The ceremony of laying the first stone for the foundation of the new college took place at five o'clock on the evening of 30th September. Tents were pitched for the accommodation of the company invited on the occasion. The police were in attendance to preserve order amongst the large concourse of people who were assembled to witness the ceremony. The Nair Brigade with its band paraded on the ground, under the command of Major Lennox. The Resident's escort was also in attendance. At five P.M. his Highness the Maharajah arrived on the ground, and was received by the Resident—the troops paying due honours. Their Highnesses the junior Princes followed the Maharajah. The party then sat down for a while in the tents, inspecting the plan of the building prepared by the Civil Engineer. Everything being announced ready, his Highness rose and proceeded to the spot where the stone was to be laid, accompanied by the Resident, and followed by the Dewan and other officers. At his Highness' desire the Dewan then read an address in his Highness' name, which was listened to with great attention. At its conclusion his Highness descended into the excavation, and deposited in a receptacle prepared for the purpose a number of current coins, together with a plate bearing the following inscription:—

The first stone of the foundation of this College was laid on the

His Highness Rama Vurmah, G.C.S.I., Maharajah of Travancore.

His Highness Rama Vurmah, F.M.V., being First Prince.

G. A. Ballard, Esq., M.C.S., British Resident.

Sir T. Madava Row, K.C.S.I., Dewan.

J. Ross, Esq., M.A., Principal H.H.'s College.

W. C. Barton, Esq., M.I.C.E., Chief Engineer—Architect.

The stone was then lowered by his Highness, assisted by the civil engineer, when a salute of twenty-one guns was fired.

STATION TALK.

MAHABLESHWAR, Oct. 8.—Many in Bombay may like to know how we are getting on upon these beautiful mountains. We had rain very heavy up till the morning of yesterday, when the sun made his appearance, and shone out in all his glory nearly all day. To-day the weather is again promising. We have several visitors already, and are expecting many more. We hope to be fuller on the 15th than we have been for some years at so early a date. Those who came up not very well have experienced a beneficial change already. As the travellers' bungalow is not open, I would recommend people to make arrangements for accommodation before they come up. The road is good for conveyances of all kinds, except one place between Konta and Wae. With a little care, no difficulty need be feared. Many buildings have fallen down with the late heavy rains. H.E. the Governor, Commander-in-Chief, and heads of departments, &c., are expected on the 15th. The place is now grand beyond description.

BROACH, Oct. 10.—Most seasonable weather prevailed in this collectorate during the first week of the current month, and the farmers were in hopes of a splendid harvest; but, unfortunately, on Thursday and Friday last about three inches of rain fell, accompanied by high winds, effecting considerable damage. The cotton, bajree, and rice crops have suffered most, but as yet no proper estimate of the mischief has been arrived at. Yesterday, however, a favourable change in the weather occurred, and if it continues dry the plants will doubtless recover themselves; if any more rain falls serious injury to the crops may result. The last season was a very early one, the cotton being brought into the market here in the latter part of December, and the gin-factories commenced working from the beginning of January; but, owing to the late rain this year the present season is not expected to open until the latter part of January next. The stock of old cotton remaining here does not now exceed 250 bales. The quantity of grain of all sorts exported to Ahmedabad from here during the past fortnight exceeds 9,10,000 lbs., and prices have risen in consequence. The rates ruling in the market this morning are as follows:—Bajree, Rs. 33 to Rs. 35; jowaree, Rs. 30 to Rs. 32; rice, Rs. 35 to Rs. 45; and wheat, Rs. 40 to Rs. 43 per kulsee of 660 lbs.

NAGPORE, Oct. 10.—The cold season may now be said to have set in: the nights are very dewy, and the mornings very chill, so that warm clothing is in requisition. The amateur theatrical performance at the Residency was a great success, and every one left well pleased with what they saw and heard. The Chief Commissioner and Commissioner of the Nagpore Division are out on tour just now, and in a few days more Nagpore will be quite emptied of all its European residents; all who can will go to the grand railway ball, which is to be given at Bhosawul next week; from thence many of the heads of offices will proceed on their annual tours into the districts. A case of some interest is shortly to be tried in the Deputy Commissioner's Court at Nagpore, in which a gentleman in Bombay is the plaintiff, and a well-known character in this station is the defendant. I am told that some ugly revelations will come out during the investigation. The want of a European regiment at Kamptee is much felt since the 90th left; every one is anxiously looking for the speedy arrival of the 79th Highlanders. The health of the residents is good, crops in the districts flourishing, prices of grain falling. The Nagpore eleven beat the Kamptee team at cricket last week in the first innings, but were unable to play out the second, in consequence of a very heavy shower.

KURRACHEE, Oct. 6.—The state of the public health in Kurrachee may now be regarded as satisfactory, though cholera has not quite disappeared from the city as yet. There were five cases there yesterday, but not of a severe type. The Collector and Magistrate of Kurrachee, aided by the Municipal Commissioners, is doing all he can to maintain cleanliness both in camp and town, and the arrangements effected by him to secure this object are, without exaggeration, admirable and deserving of commendation. At a special general meeting of the Municipal Commissioners, held in Frere Hall last Wednesday, the Local Funds Engineer at Shikarpore, Mr. R. Gompertz, was selected, from among eleven candidates, for the office of secretary to the Kurrachee Municipality, on a salary of Rs. 750 per month, which will be raised by an annual increment of Rs. 50 until it reaches the full amount of Rs. 1,000, which was drawn by Mr. Gompertz's predecessor. The undermentioned gentlemen proceeded to Bombay by this day's mail steamer:—Lieut. Robert Vaughan Milden, of the Bombay Staff Corps, and second in command 1st Sind Horse, who has been recommended by the local medical board to go home on two years' furlough; Cornet Cecil L. Reade, of the 7th Hussars, who is bound to England for the purpose of appearing before a medical board; and Mr. James Bryce, the worthy apothecary of the 18th Brigade Royal Artillery, who, under instructions received from the Inspector-General, has been ordered to proceed to Deesa to assume subordinate medical charge of the 8th Foot.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MAHABLESHWUR.—Mahableshwur is already thickly tenanted. His Excellency the Governor of Bombay, the Commander-in-Chief, and their staffs, are expected there daily.

MILITARY.—Major-General H. Forster, who has been relieved by Major-General Tapp, c.b., of the command of the northern division of the army, was expected to arrive at Kirkee.

CIVIL.—The Poona Observer understands that Mr. Charles Gonne, C.S., Secretary to Government in the Political, Secret, Judicial, Educational, and Persian Departments, will shortly proceed to England on six months' leave of absence.

CHIEF OFFICER OF THE "CARNATIC."—A letter has been written by Major Champain, R.E., at the instance of several of his fellow-passengers by the Carnatic, speaking in high terms of the conduct of the chief officer of that vessel on the occasion of her wreck.

KOTREE.—From Kotree we have good news. That station is now free from cholera, and people are again following their usual avocations, although many are still suffering from fever. The traffic by rail is still very inconsiderable.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—We learn that on Wednesday morning Mr. A. E. Taylor, Inspector of Health Department, Municipality, was handling a loaded pistol, when it suddenly went off, and the bullet passed through his cheek, disfiguring him a good deal for the present. Mr. Taylor was removed to the European General Hospital for immediate treatment.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 16.

KURRACHEE FAIR.—The Kurrachee Fair and Exhibition, we observe, has again been postponed, and it is again intended to make it a Christmas Fair, the opening day being fixed for 23rd December. The reason for this postponement is that, disease being rife in the province, it is believed the congregation of a large body of people might be attended with fatal results. The Exhibition will still have the honour of being opened by Sir W. Merewether, Commissioner in Sind.

KURRACHEE.—The mail steamer of Wednesday next will convey from Kurrachee Colonel William Rathborne Lambert, Bombay Staff Corps, Collector and Magistrate of Kurrachee, who is proceeding to England on two years' furlough. Colonel Lambert is one of the few remaining officers who can claim to be styled as old Sindees, having now been connected with the province for upwards of twenty-two years.—Sindian, Oct. 7.

THE HARVEST PROSPECTS.—Notwithstanding the rather heavy and continuous showers of late, the prospects of the season throughout the whole of the Bombay presidency are most cheering. Such smiling fields, so laden with their rich barden, we have not been blessed with for many years past. It is truly sorrowful that this bliss should not be unalloyed. Ahmedabad has been devastated by locusts, whose march through Goojerat is very greatly feared.—Indu Prakash, Oct. 11.

RAJCOTE.—We learn from Rajcote that the myriads of locusts which appeared a few days ago in the northern districts of Kattywar have destroyed most of the standing crops, and that consequently there has been a sudden rise in the price of all descriptions of cereals. In the other districts of that province, bajree, the staple food of the high and middle classes of natives, sells at Rs. 80 the khulsee of sixteen pukka maunds.

THE LOCUSTS.—Locusts made their appearance in great numbers in the Broach districts on the 14th Oct. Great fears are entertained for the crops. The locusts are travelling towards Surat. In consequence of the ravages of locusts in Marwar, emigration from that country towards Sind has again set in. Up to the 10th Oct. locusts had not visited the Dholera district, so the cotton and grain crops there are considered safe from that plague. The ravages of locusts in Marwar are calculated at 50 per cent., in Tonk at 10 per cent., and in Jeypore at 7 per cent.

THE TESTIMONIAL TO SIR A. GRANT.—We are requested by the Secretary of the Grant Testimonial Fund to intimate to the subscribers of the fund that rupees three thousand one hundred and odd have been remitted to Sir Alexander Grant, who has kindly consented to look after the execution of the life-size portrait. The balance is in the Bombay Bank, and remains undisposed of, pending negotiations with the committee at Poona, who have collected a separate fund, a part of which also remains undisposed of.—Indu Prakash.

MR. T. C. HOPE.—For some time past a report has been in circulation to the effect that Mr. Crawford, Municipal Commissioner, is about to resign the office, and that it is the intention of Government to nominate Mr. T. C. Hope, the well-known Collector of Surat, in his place. Enquiries made by us in reliable quarters have elicited the following explanation on the subject. It seems that the Cotton Frauds Department is to be reorganised on the introduction of the new Act, and that Mr. Crawford is to get a high office in that department. It is believed that Mr. Crawford's office as Municipal Commissioner was offered to Mr. Hope, who, however, according to our informant, has no wish at present to leave Surat, and intends to remain two or three years more in that city.—Rust Gofar.

THE COTTON FRAUDS BILL.—A special general meeting of the members of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce was held on Wednesday, Oct. 13th, to consider the Cotton Frauds Bill, now before the Bombay Legislative Council. There was a good attendance of members, presided over by Mr. H. E. Astley, Chairman of the Chamber. Mr. G. A. Kittredge, in a lengthy speech, proposed, "That this Chamber considers the Bill of 1869, as amended in Council, Oct. 4, on the subject of Cotton Frauds, unnecessary, and calculated to injure the interests of trade." The motion was seconded by Mr. Donald Graham. Mr. W. Nicol proposed, and Mr. C. Macdonald seconded, "That the Cotton Bill, which has been under the consideration of this Chamber, though more stringent in several of its provisions than appears to be desirable, yet having regard to the serious evils of fraud and adulteration prevailing in the cotton trade, with which the existing Cotton Frauds Act has been found powerless to cope, the Chamber is of opinion that, judging from the experience of the past, only a stringent Act will suppress the evils so much complained of, and hereby resolves to memorialise the Legislative Council to pass the Bill." The following motion was then proposed by Mr. R. E. Bickerdike, and seconded by Mr. W. F. Peel:—"That the Chamber recognises the advisability of passing a new Cotton Bill, but cannot approve of the Bill now before the Council in all its details; and that a special committee of the Chamber be appointed to revise it with a view to a relaxation of some of the more objectionable clauses." After some discussion Mr. Nicol withdrew his motion, and Mr. Bickerdike's was carried by the chairman's casting vote, eleven votes having been given for and eleven against it. The following gentlemen were then, on the motion of Mr. Macdonald, appointed a select committee to carry out the wishes of the Chamber as expressed in the resolution agreed to:—Messrs. H. E. Astley, Bickerdike, W. Nicol, D. Graham, and Bythell.

THE DISTRESS IN MARWAR.—The following deeply interesting letter was addressed by Colonel Keatinge to the Secretary of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce from Jessowrie, in Marwar, Oct. 6.—"My dear Sir, I have now made several marches through Marwar and to-morrow ascend the pass into Meywar. I have found matters very much as I stated in my letter from Aboo. Present distress terrible, many people actually dying of starvation in each village. At the same time prospects for the cold season crop (far the most important here) better than they have been for years. Very little rain crop was sown this year, and what was raised has nearly all been eaten by locusts. Yesterday a large flight passed, going a few degrees west of south. I have never seen the country looking more beautiful. The grass, where eaten by locusts, has sprung up again sufficiently to clothe the ground. The streams are running full, and cultivation employed in preparing the land for the cold weather crop. It is very difficult to say what class it is that is suffering so terribly. Probably the lowest stratum in each caste. At Erinpoora I found 1,400 people receiving food through Major Cornell and the officers of the Erinpoora Irregular Force. From the Bombay subscriptions the amount given is necessarily small to each. The funds in hand were about Rs. 4,000, which we calculated would be sufficient to continue relief on the same scale for all October and November. There were however a number of people, mostly young, who would certainly die if not specially provided for—people who had lost all health and strength before getting assistance; we therefore decided to select four hundred, and bring them through at any price. These poor wretches are living skeletons, miserable to look at. We have decided to get tents for them from the regimental store, to separate them absolutely from all others, and to do all we can to bring them into health again. This will cost a considerable sum of money. Major Cornell will send me an estimate in a few days. I have however guaranteed him against loss, and trust that you will be able, if not to provide the whole sum, at least to raise the greater portion of it by subscription in Bombay. In the cities of Joudpoor and Pullé the want of grain is producing a state of matters bordering on social disorganisation. People of large means, it is stated, buy grain. I have met numbers of highly respectable tradesmen and artisans emigrating into Guzerat. At Erinpoora I assembled a number of grain dealers and endeavoured to elicit their opinion as to the prospects of grain falling materially in price. They insisted that no great change could be expected until the cold weather crop was reaped in May, but it was evident that they spoke with fear and reserve. They are so accustomed to see prices fixed by authority that they could not divest themselves of the idea that I might some day call on them to sell at the prices

THE FURLOUGH RULES.—LIEUT. COLONELS.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have had under my consideration in Council your lordship's letter, dated June 3 last, No. 171, regarding a decision on the question raised by the Govt. of Madras—whether lieut. cols. of the local service, who have elected the Furlough Rules of 1793, are entitled to resume the command of their regiments on their return to India from leave of absence.

2. According to the custom in the Indian army under the former organisation, a lieut. col. commanding a regiment when going on furlough under the regulations of 1793 resigned his command; but, as a matter of course, on his return he was appointed to the command either of that corps or of another to which he had been transferred in his absence.

3. By the new organisation, however, if he were to resign the command of his regiment, another officer would be appointed thereto; and on the return of the lieut. col. it might probably happen that there would be no vacancy to which he could be appointed.

4. To permit a local officer, under the Furlough Rules of 1793, to retain his command as if he were an officer of the staff corps, is no doubt open to the objection raised by the C. in C., that it is giving him the benefit of both sets of Furlough Rules. It must, however, be borne in mind that two different matters are bound up in the choice of Furlough Rules, namely the mode of computing furlough and pay while on leave, and the mode of reckoning service for pension. An officer who has elected the Rule of 1793 might be willing to come under the Regulations of 1868, so far as his furlough is concerned, and yet might be loath to do so, on account of the benefits as regards his service for pension, which he would forfeit by giving up the Rules of 1796.

5. Bearing in mind the difficulty in which such officers may thus be placed, and considering the comparatively small number to whom the Rules of 1796 are now applicable, I have no objection to permit an exception to be made, so far as to permit officers of the local service, appointed to be commandants of regiments, who have chosen to abide by the Furlough Rules of 1796, to retain their appointments during the period of furlough, and on the rates of pay sanctioned by those rules.—I have, &c.,

BANDS AND MESSES.

Simla, Sept. 28.—No. 278.—To obviate misconception on the subject, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to notify that an unseconded officer of H.M.'s British service on staff employ is required to pay [G.O. No. 33 of 1867] subscription to the mess and band of his corps until seconded and replaced in his regiment by an additional officer paying mess and band subscriptions.

PAY ON RETIREMENT.

No. 280.—In continuation of G.O. No. 357 of Nov. 20, 1868, the following letter from the military department, No. 624, dated Feb. 19, 1864, to the military finance department, is published for general information and guidance:—

With reference to your letter 1,539r, of the 26th ult., submitting a question raised by the Controller of Military Finance at Madras as to the date up to which an officer of H.M.'s British service in India is entitled to Indian allowances, in the event of his being on leave when his resignation is accepted, I am directed to acquaint you that an officer (of a British regiment) permitted to resign, except as the alternative of trial by a court-martial, will continue to receive Indian allowances to the date of quitting his corps, and British pay until the acceptance of his resignation by her Majesty, and, if given leave pending a decision, British pay only from the date he ceases to perform regimental duty.

REDUCTION OF REGIMENTS.

No. 1,007.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published for general information:—

Military—No. 224.

India-office, London, Aug. 25, 1869.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—I transmit, for the information of your Lordship, a copy of a correspondence—[from Horse-guards, April 14, 1869; to ditto, May 18 (323 H); to War-office, May 18 (195 W); from ditto, July 24 (No. 5,076)]—which has taken place respecting the measures about to be adopted for the reduction of the establishment of the non-purchase regiments of the line whilst serving in this country.

2. Your Lordship will observe that it has been decided that, whether there may be supernumeraries or not, promotion shall be given in the room of every officer who may retire, when the interests of any officers, late of the Indian Army, would suffer by absorption. But in the case of a death, or a casualty such as that caused by the supersession of an officer, the rule of allowing only one vacancy in two to go in the corps, which is adopted in the reduction of purchase regiments, will be applied also to the new line regiments.—I have, &c., (Signed) ARGILL.

(Signed) H. W. NORMAN, Major gen., Sec. to Govt. of India.

No. 707.—The following letter from the officiating Secretary to the Government of India, dated Sept. 9, No. 261, to the Secretary to the Government of Bombay, with accompaniments, is published for information and guidance:—

"Sir,—In reply to your letter, No. 2,498, dated June 8, having reference to an inquiry whether the grain compensation hitherto allowed to pensioners should be discontinued to those whose pensions have been increased under recent orders, I am directed to forward, for the information of the Right Hon. the Governor in Council, the annexed copy of a memorandum by the Controller General of Military Expenditure, No. 205v, dated Aug. 9, and to state that the Government of India entirely concurs in the views therein expressed, and accordingly request that the compensation be not allowed except in the two cases named therein, if any instances occur during the period such compensation is allowed.

(Signed) H. K. BURNE, Colonel,

"Fort William, Sept. 9."

Memorandum No. 205v.

Papers received with case 2 of schedule No. 46, dated June 22 last, are herewith returned:—

2. The question under reference is, whether the grain compensation hitherto allowed in the Bombay Presidency to pensioners of the army, warrant, and subordinate medical department should be discontinued to those whose pensions have been increased under the operation of recent orders (G.O. No. 69 of Jan. 22, 1868; No. 550 of June 5, 1868; No. 358 of March 23, 1869).

3. This compensation, which was solely allowed on account of the enhanced cost of food, was intended to lighten the pressure from that cause, which was more particularly felt by those on limited means; but the undersigned considers that the concession ought to, and he understood that it would, cease with the grant of increased allowances exceeding or equalling the amount of their former aggregate receipts, including grain compensation.

4. This is precisely the principle on which grain compensation given to establishments has been gradually absorbed in the amount of increased salaries subsequently allowed to them, and as the recent increased rates of salaries and pensions to the Army, Warrant, and Medical Subordinate Departments were sanctioned with due regard to one and the same object, viz., the increased expense of living generally, the undersigned is of opinion that there is no valid reason why pensioners should be treated differently from establishments in the matter of compensation, which was granted to both, under precisely similar circumstances, and according to a uniform scale of percentages on the amounts at the time of their salaries and pensions.

5. In annexing a statement showing the aggregate receipts of the several Warrant grades under the present and former rates of invalid and widows' pensions with the addition to the previous rates of grain compensation, the undersigned would invite attention to the fact that the present rates of pensions are generally considerably in excess of the previous aggregate receipts, including grain compensation, except in the cases of the invalid pension of assistant and 2nd class apothecaries, the differences in these exceptional instances being, for facility of reference, subjoined. Retiring pensions being drawn at home are not included:—

Pensions and grades.	Amount of pension.	Grain compensation.	Total.	Former aggregate receipts.		Present rates of pension.	Excess of former aggregate receipts over present rates per mensem.
Invalid pension of 2nd class apothecary...	80	7 2 ... 8 0	83-5 ... 88	7 10 3-5 ... 85	0 0 ... 3	7 10 3-5
Invalid pension of assistant apothecary...	40	0 0 ... 6 0	46 0 0 ... 40	0 0 ... 6	0 0 ... 0

6. It may, however, be observed that in almost every case the retiring pensions would be payable at home, and would not, therefore, be affected by the question of grain compensation; but in the two instances of invalid pension the difference between the present rates and the aggregate receipts under the old rates, with the addition of grain compensation, would be admissible; if any instances of such pension should occur during the period, the grain compensation is allowed. (Signed)

A. BROOME, Col., Controller gen. of Military Expenditure.

Military Dept., Account Branch, Simla, Aug. 9.

FURLOUGHS ON PRIVATE AFFAIRS.—With a view to regulating the grant of furlough under the Regulations of 1868, as published in G.O. No. 1,061, dated Nov. 10, 1868, the Right Hon. the Governor general in Council is pleased to direct that officers obtaining furlough on private affairs are to understand that the grant of the furlough only holds good for three months from the date of the G.O. notifying it. This period of three months is inclusive of the thirty days' preparatory leave allowed to reach the port of embarkation. In the case of an officer not embarking within the prescribed period, the order granting it will cease to have effect.

EUROPEAN VAGRANCY IN INDIA.

The importance of the new Act, which has passed with a view to checking a growing evil in India, induces us to publish the chief sections:

AN ACT TO PROVIDE AGAINST EUROPEAN VAGRANCY.

Whereas numerous persons of European extraction are at present wandering in a destitute condition throughout India, and whereas such conduct is prejudicial to public order, and it is expedient to prevent the same; it is hereby enacted as follows:—

PART I.—PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The European Vagrancy Act, 1869."
2. Sections three, seventeen, eighteen, twenty-one, twenty-two, twenty-three, twenty-seven, twenty-eight, thirty, thirty-two, thirty-three, and thirty-four shall come into operation at once, and shall extend to the whole of British India and to the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with her Majesty:
 Sections twenty-five, twenty-six, and thirty-one shall come into operation on the first day of January, 1870, and shall extend to the whole of British India and to the said dominions:
 And the rest of this Act shall come into operation in such parts of British India and of the said dominions and on such day or respective days as the Governor general of India in Council shall from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India appoint in this behalf.
3. In this Act "persons of European extraction" includes Americans and Australasians:
 "Vagrant" means a person of European extraction found asking for alms, or wandering about without any employment or visible means of subsistence.

PART II.—PROCEDURE.

4. Any police officer may, within the limits of the towns of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, require any person who is apparently a vagrant to accompany him or any other police officer to and to appear before the nearest magistrate of police, and may, without those limits, require any such person to accompany him or any other police officer to and to appear before the nearest justice of the peace exercising the full powers of a magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure.
5. The magistrate of police or justice shall make a summary inquiry into the circumstances and character of the alleged vagrant; and if he is satisfied that such person is a vagrant, he shall record in his office a declaration to that effect.
 If he is further of opinion that the vagrant is not likely to obtain employment at once, or if he has reason to believe that a declaration of vagrancy has on any former occasion been recorded in respect of such vagrant, he shall require the vagrant to go to a Government work-house and shall draw out an order to that effect.
 The vagrant shall then be placed in charge of the police for the purpose of being forwarded to the work-house, and the said order shall be a sufficient authority to the police for retaining him in their charge while he is on his way to the work-house, and to the governor of the work-house for receiving and detaining such vagrant.

6. Where the officer making the inquiry mentioned in section five is of opinion that the vagrant is likely to obtain employment in any place subject to the Local Government or (when the vagrant is in any part of the said dominions) in any place subject to the nearest Local Government, such officer may in his discretion forward the vagrant to such place in charge of the police, and draw up an order to that effect.

Such order shall be a sufficient authority to the police for retaining the vagrant in their charge while he is on his way to such place of employment.

7. Upon his arrival at the place of employment the vagrant shall be taken before the nearest magistrate of police or justice of the peace exercising full powers as aforesaid, to whom the order for transmission shall be delivered.

Such officer shall thereupon, to the best of his ability, assist the vagrant in seeking employment, and may in the meantime, if he think fit, keep the vagrant in the charge of the police.

Should the vagrant fail to obtain suitable employment within a reasonable time, not exceeding fifteen days from such arrival, such officer shall forward him to a Government workhouse in the manner provided by section five.

8. Every person while in charge of the police, whether before inquiry as to his vagrancy, or while he is on his way, under section six, to a place of employment, shall be entitled to an allowance for his subsistence at the rate of eight annas per diem.

The magistrate of police or justice, before whom any vagrant is taken under section seven, may, if he think fit, order the vagrant to receive a similar allowance while he is seeking employment.

The Local Government shall cause such allowance to be paid out of such funds at its disposal and in such manner as it may from time to time direct.

9. Any magistrate of police or justice of the peace exercising full powers as aforesaid may, on being satisfied that any person of European extraction is not likely to become a vagrant, give such person a certificate under his hand stating that for a certain time (mentioning it) not exceeding six months from the date of the certificate, and within certain limits (mentioning them), nothing in sections four, five, six, and seven shall apply to the holder of such certificate; and thereupon (subject to the provisions contained in sections twenty-three and twenty-four) nothing in sections four, five, six, and seven shall apply to such person for such time and within such limits as aforesaid. Every such certificate shall be in the form set forth in the first schedule to this Act annexed, or as near thereto as circumstances will admit.

PART III.—GOVERNMENT WORKHOUSES.

11. The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor general of India in Council, may provide workhouses, with their necessary furniture and establishment, at such places as it may think proper, for the temporary reception of vagrants, or may by writing, under the hand of a secretary to such Government, certify any building, or part of a building, not provided as a workhouse under the former part of this section, to be fit for a workhouse for the purposes of this Act. Every such certificate shall be published in the local official Gazette, and thereupon such building or part of a building shall, until the Local Government otherwise orders, be deemed a Government workhouse under this Act.

The Local Government shall allow the same scale of diet for the support of vagrants received in such workhouses as is for the time being allowed for Europeans confined in the local prisons or penitentiaries.

12. Every such workhouse shall be under the immediate charge of a governor, who shall be appointed and may be suspended or removed by the Local Government.

13. Every such governor may order that any vagrant admitted to the workhouse under his charge shall be searched, and that the vagrant's bundles, packages, and other effects shall be inspected; and may direct that any money then found with or on the vagrant shall be applied (subject to the orders of the Local Government) towards the expense of carrying this Act into execution, and may order that all or any of the effects shall be sold, and that the produce of the sale be applied as aforesaid, but subject to the like orders.

14. The governor and the committee of management (if any) of every such workhouse shall use his and their best endeavours to obtain outside the workhouse suitable employment for the vagrants admitted thereto.

When such employment is obtained, any such vagrant refusing or neglecting to avail himself thereof, shall, on conviction before a magistrate, be punishable with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month.

PART IV.—REMOVAL FROM INDIA.

16. If, after the lapse of a reasonable time, no suitable employment is obtainable for any such vagrant, the Local Government may either (when he shall have entered into such agreement as hereinafter mentioned) cause him to be removed from British India in manner hereinafter provided, the cost of such removal being paid by Government; or it may cause Sections 23 and 30 to be read to him, and may then release him.

17. Any vagrant or other person of European extraction may enter into an agreement in writing with the Secretary of State for India in Council, binding himself—

(a.) To proceed to such port in British India as shall be mentioned in the agreement;

(b.) There to embark on board such ship and at such time as shall be directed by an officer appointed in this behalf by the Local Government of the territories in which such port is situate, for the purpose of being removed from India at the expense of the said Secretary of State in Council;

(c.) To remain on board such ship until she shall have arrived at her port of destination; and

12. Salt.—As already explained in paragraph 54 of our regular Estimate Despatch, the failure of the estimate by more than £400,000 is due to its having been overlooked that in Bengal the stock of Government salt was exhausted; and that a large tract of country, formerly supplied from Madras, would, in consequence of the extension of the railway from Bombay, draw its supplies thence. It is not yet known why the Bombay revenue did not expand to the same extent that the Madras revenue contracted, the rate of duty levied being, in effect, the same in both presidencies.

13. Opium.—The failure of the regular estimate is due to a mistake, which ought not to have been made, in the estimate of revenue from Malwa opium. The decrease is entirely in the Malwa duty.

14. Stamps.—It was not possible very accurately to estimate the effect of Act XXVI. of 1867. That there should be a variation from the estimate of £65,829 is not surprising.

15. Mint.—Nor is it possible ever to know beforehand, with any precise accuracy, the receipts from this head.

16. Law and Justice.—The failure of both estimates is due, in large part, to the balances of some of the process funds not having been carried to credit as was expected; the measure of which these expected credits was one part not having been everywhere completed. In Bombay alone the fund remaining to be thus transferred is £91,000.

17. Marine and Miscellaneous.—The large unexpected receipts under these heads are, to a great extent, nominal; for surplus stores of the Abyssinian Expedition; rebel securities now cancelled and brought to account; unclaimed deposits credited; military funds adjusted; and such like. There are considerable per contra nominal charges of a like character, under these two heads, on the debit side.

18. Army.—The large increase in receipts here also is nominal, for surplus stores of the Abyssinian Expedition.

19. Public Works.—The receipts were erroneously estimated in the Regular Estimate, to the extent of £100,000; and Orissa, which was estimated to give £10,000, has yielded only £441.

CHARGES, 1868-69.

20.—Interest.—The increase, as compared with both estimates, is due, first, to the usual amount of dividends not being left unclaimed; and, secondly, to much larger payments being made on March 31, on account of the dividend which falls due on that day, than were provided for. As to the first error, it may be remarked that, while £100,000, which was allowed for unclaimed dividends in 1867-68, did not prove too much, £50,000, which was deducted in the Budget of 1868-69, exceeded the actual amount unclaimed by £10,000.

21. Interest on Service Funds and other Accounts.—The increase is due to about £51,000 paid to the Banks of Bengal and Bombay for short loans and on deficient balances, and to considerably larger amounts being paid as interest on Savings Banks' deposits and Service Funds (especially the Bengal Civil Fund) than was expected.

22. Allowances, Refunds, &c.—£200,000 of the increase is the Berar surplus paid to the Nizam, as explained in paragraph 45 of the Regular Estimate Despatch. The rest is owing to no provision having been made for refunds of assessed taxes, under the erroneous impression that the revenue had been estimated net; and to insufficient provision having been made for refunds and drawbacks generally.

23. Land Revenue.—The increase as compared with both estimates is due, apparently, to the improvement in the pay of Ministerial Officers, and in the acting allowances of the Civil Service having proved more costly than was expected.

24. Excise on Spirit and Drugs.—The excess is due to the increased demand for opium for home consumption, the increased revenue from which appears on the credit side.

25. Salt.—The decrease is much less than was anticipated in the Regular Estimate, and is due to the cause stated in paragraph 47 of our Regular Estimate Despatch, viz., smaller purchases in Madras.

26. Opium.—The decrease, which is also much less than was expected in the Regular Estimate, is due to the cause stated in paragraph 48 of the same despatch, viz., the shortness of the crop of 1867-68.

27. Telegraph.—The decrease is due to the non-execution of works provided for in the estimate.

28. Allowances to District and Village Officers.—The decrease has occurred in the Bombay Presidency, and, judging from past years' figures, is probably formal only.

29. Administration and Public Departments, and Law and Justice.—The increase must be attributed to the causes stated in paragraph 23, under land revenue.

30. Police.—The full savings expected in the regular estimate were not realised.

31. Marine.—As stated on the revenue side, the excess shown here is largely nominal, and is balanced by excess receipts of the same character. Stores were purchased for the Abyssinian Expedition, and re-sold, and vice versa.

32. Education.—The decrease is not particularly accounted for; it is generally distributed.

33. Medical Services.—The increase is due to the operation of the new medical warrant.

34. Stationery and Printing.—We refer to this increase only to say that it has attracted our attention. There is much room for economy under this head.

35. Political Agencies and other Foreign Services.—The increase is on account of half the subsidy to the Amir of Afghanistan (£60,000), and to the portion of the expenses of his reception, which was paid in this year.

36. Allowances and Assignments under Treaties and Engagements.—The decrease is chiefly owing to the £150,000 provided for the payment of Prince Azim Jah's debts at Madras not having been taken up during the year.

37. Miscellaneous.—£151,330 of the excess is loss by exchange on transactions with England; £20,333 is on account of the charge of two-thirds freight on stores from England now, for the first time, charged under this head. The rest is owing to sundry causes which are not important enough to particularise.

38. Superannuation Allowances, &c.—The increase, as explained in paragraph 54 of the Regular Estimate Despatch, is due partly to adjustments of certain military fund accounts, which are, to some extent, balanced by receipts under XVIII., miscellaneous; and partly to a payment of £90,338 in excess of the estimated donation to the Bengal Civil Service Annuity Fund.

39. The Army.—The slight increase over the estimates is due to the Hazara campaign, which cost about £80,000. On the whole, the army contributes a large saving to the account.

40. Public Works.—The enormous increase of £841,434 is covered to the extent of £510,130, by grants made subsequently to the Budget. No less a sum than £331,304 (net) has been spent without authority from us. This unauthorised departure from Budget limits has been very general in this department, and will receive our immediate and most serious attention. There is reason to believe that a large portion of it will be found to be expenditure for the relief of famine. The Post-Budget grants of £510,130 were partly explained in paragraph 56 of the Regular Estimate Despatch, and may be recapitulated, exactly, as follows:—

Military works (additional grant) ... ..	£250,000
Madras gaols ... ..	50,000
Famine relief ... ..	101,200
Agra Bank building in Calcutta ... ..	45,000
Improvement of port of Calcutta ... ..	30,000
Cyclone repairs ... ..	2,000
Other items ... ..	39,130
Total ... ..	£517,630
Deduct grants withdrawn ... ..	7,500

Remains ... .. £510,130

41. Net Expenditure in England.—It is needless for us to make any remarks under this head, the causes of the very large increase on the Budget of £856,276 having been already, for the most part, recounted by your Grace in paragraph 22 of your despatch No. 252, or appearing in the account that we have just received.

42. Interest on Railway Capital, less net traffic receipts.—This head contributes £197,470 to our deficit from estimate, to which must be added a loss of £21,709 in working the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway. The amount is reduced to £156,643 by improvements in the other two heads—"Land and Supervision" and "Exchange." There is some reason to believe that the real result is rather more favourable than that exhibited in the accounts, which are based upon the actual cash paid into, and out from, our treasuries, and not upon the earnings of the two half-years as calculated by the railway companies, and which form the basis of our contracts with them. We are considering the expediency of altering the accounts, so as to show, in future years, the proper figures; but any such alteration cannot be applied to the past year's accounts at present. Probably a complete adjustment of the entire account from beginning to end will be indispensable. The general causes of the unexpected decrease of railway receipts are known to your Grace, and need not be repeated here.

43. Upon the whole account we have to remark that, disastrous as the result appears, we feel some relief in the consideration that so large a portion of the deficit is due to public works, the expenditure in which department is, undoubtedly, very largely, within our control.

44. The Civil deficit in India is £711,617, and may be attributed, prominently, to the failure of the land and salt estimates, and to the payment of £200,000 to the Nizam. These causes of the unfavourable out-turn are not, we hope, permanent. Nor need we anticipate that the depression of railway traffic will continue; although it is probable that the charge for interest on the capital expended in the construction of new railways must, for a long time to come, grow at least as fast as the traffic receipts. The formidable increase of the home charges will doubtless receive your Grace's attention. There are, no doubt, some extraordinary items among them; but, on the whole, there appears little reason to hope that, unless stringent measures of economy be adopted, the home charges in 1869-70 will be much less than those of 1868-9.

REVISED ESTIMATE, 1869-70.

45. We have now to invite your Grace to consider, with us, the position of our finances at the present moment.

46. The extremely unfavourable result of the actual account of 1868-69, coupled with the knowledge of many circumstances which have, in fact, already invalidated our estimates for the current year, has induced us to take the very unusual course of revising the estimates at once, in order to ascertain, if we may, our true financial condition.

47. The extent to which we think it absolutely necessary to alter the estimates made in March is shown in the accompanying Abstract (B) [abstract omitted] which brings out an expected deficit in the current year of £1,727,402, instead of a surplus of £32,650, as brought out in the original estimates.

48. We proceed to explain the grounds upon which, in each instance, we think an amendment of the estimates required.

RECEIPTS, 1869-70.

49. Land Revenue.—We reduce this head by £183,100, leaving our estimate still £311,763 in excess of the highest revenue ever obtained from this source. The justification for the higher estimate first made was the progress of the settlements in Oude and elsewhere, and this is our only ground for maintaining our revised estimate at so high a figure. At the same time, we cannot but observe that the figures for past years do not favour the expectation of so large a revenue; and, were we now making the estimate for the first time, we should certainly assess our expenditure as are necessary for meeting the expected deficiency of income for the current financial year, the Gov. General in Council now desires to notify to the different Governments and Administrations the share in those reductions which has to be carried out in the Public Works Department.

2. As regards, in the first place, the general question of Public Works expenditure, a detailed examination into the facts of the case has satisfied the Government of India that it may be possible to effect a permanent and very large diminution in the annual expenditure for this branch of the administration without causing that permanent interruption in the progress of improvement which would be greatly to be deprecated, while the urgency of the case demands that the reduction of this class of outlay should be commenced upon at once.

3. In considering the measures which are thus imposed upon the Government of India by paramount reasons of public economy, it is at the outset necessary to review the general incidence of the Public Works expenditure, so that the grant for the coming and subsequent years may be fixed on a scale which shall be duly proportioned to the public services to be provided for, and at the same time within the limits which a prudent administration of the finances dictates. The estimated expenditure for the current year on ordinary public works, excluding all charges for railways and irrigation works with which it is not proposed to interfere, was £5,064,000. The Governor-General in Council is of opinion that it will be practicable to reduce this outlay by about one-fourth, so that the total ordinary grant in future years may be brought to about 3½ millions sterling. The ordinary grant from the revenues for irrigation and railways would be in addition to this sum.

4. It does not appear practicable to look for any diminution of that part of the expenditure under the heads of Railway and Irrigation, which is charged against the revenues of the year, and is classed as ordinary. With the extraordinary outlay, or that which is met from funds raised by loan, there is no intention of interfering at all. The ordinary railway expenditure is occasioned by the provision of land for the guaranteed companies, by the salaries of the supervising staff of the Consulting Engineer's Department, and by the loss by exchange, none of which items are susceptible of present or arbitrary diminution. The ordinary expenditure under Irrigation is for the maintenance of existing irrigation works, and the construction of the works of the class that cannot properly be carried out from borrowed funds. From this head also deduction cannot be made. On the contrary, the charge shown in the public accounts for these purposes must increase as new irrigation works are brought into operation, or extensions are made, though at the same time more than equivalent set-off may be looked for from the increase of the revenue obtained by the spread of irrigation.

5. The first head under which the expenditure is capable of being reduced is that on military works and buildings, with which is classed the outlay on Government dockyards. The estimate for 1869-70 was £1,800,000. It is proposed for the future to fix the grant for all military purposes at 1½ millions. The experience of the last few years shows that the necessary outlay on repairs for this class of work is about one-fourth of a million, so that there will remain about one million for carrying out new works. The reduction in the estimate of 1870-71 on the grant of the current year will be £550,000.

6. It is therefore the intention of the Government of India to fix the military grant for the present at the sum above-named, and to let it be understood that this may be regarded as the normal expenditure, which the Government of India will sanction year by year until the great works of construction now in hand are completed.

7. Further, the Government of India entertain hopes that it may yet be found possible, by certain modifications of the designs and arrangements of the barrack and other military buildings, which have been adopted for general use, to secure in the future increased economy of construction, without sacrificing any substantial advantage. If this expectation be realised, the result will be not only a saving of expense, but even the earlier completion of the work which still has to be executed to place the barrack accommodation of the British force quartered in India on a thoroughly satisfactory basis.

8. The Governor General in Council has no intention of permitting any diminution of the care required for meeting all really important sanitary conditions, or any reduction of the extent of accommodation that experience shows to be necessary for the true comfort and health of the soldier. But in the light of the knowledge that has now been obtained of the new style of construction, both as regards its financial consequences and its sanitary results, his Excellency in Council has little difficulty in adopting the conclusion that some costly superfluities may be rejected in the future without any loss of comfort to the soldier, and that by more closely limiting the accommodation to what is really necessary much economy could be effected, and real convenience in no way sacrificed.

9. Having these opinions the Government of India are not without hopes that it may be found that the reduced grant which is proposed for this class of work will in actual efficiency not greatly fall short of the larger sums that have been laid out in past years, and that the final result may be to expedite, and not to delay, the complete housing of the British force in India.

10. The next main head of expenditure to be dealt with is that of communications and roads. The grant for the present year is £1,200,000. The Governor General in Council considers that henceforth the sum allowed may be reduced to one million, and that eventually a still greater reduction may be found possible.

11. In determining to enforce economy in this direction, so far as regards the charges to be borne by the Imperial finances, the Government of India have been in no small degree influenced by the conviction that the time has come when a first step must be taken towards transferring a part of the charge for the construction and maintenance of roads in all parts of India from the general revenues to funds locally raised. The Government of India have for some years been satisfied that to attempt to provide and maintain all the roads required for the inter-communications of so vast a territory from the ordinary revenues, would be to enter on an altogether impracticable task. The matter has been before this Government on several occasions since 1862, and the view now taken of it has already received in general terms the approval of the Secretary of State.* It is only by a judicious system of local assessment and control that what is needed can be accomplished, and towards the establishment of such a system the policy of the Government of India will continue to be directed.

12. The duty of the Central Government in respect to the extension of roads must be distinctly understood to be limited by its means to supply funds from the ordinary revenues, and beyond the amount that can thus be furnished no claims can be entertained. If the money is not forthcoming, it cannot be granted. In fixing for the present one million as a suitable allowance for these purposes the Governor-General in Council has of course had to consider the demands upon the revenues for other objects, and his Excellency in Council is of opinion that no larger grant can possibly be made. It must be borne in mind that in fact the sum paid as interest on the guaranteed railway capital, amounting to not less than 1½ million yearly, is a contribution from the general revenues for the provision of the best possible means of communication, railroads, so that in truth the total annual charge for works of this class will amount, even when diminished as now proposed, to the very large sum of 2½ millions.

13. The determination that has been come to that railways shall be extended as rapidly as the finances will admit, and that the prosecution of irrigation canals shall be pushed on in like manner, will lead to the continued addition of new lines of land and water communication, and as the capital for the construction of these works will be applied by borrowed money, a heavy charge on account of interest must temporarily fall on the general revenues. Due regard must be had to this fact in reckoning the extent of the assistance which the Government of India is affording to the improvement of the facilities of internal transport. There is, of course, a natural limit to the power of any Government to develop and stimulate the construction of useful works; and when all the efforts that are now being made for the improvement and extension of railways, roads, navigable canals and rivers, are duly considered, the necessary conclusion must be that the Government of India has not in any way under-valued the importance of such works, or failed to take all measures that could be taken for their being carried out.

14. The Governor General in Council feels satisfaction in being able to add that the principle of local assessments to provide for road construction and maintenance has already been fully accepted in almost all provinces of India. In Madras a road cess has been established for some years, and now yields a large income. In Bombay a similar local rate has more recently been generally introduced. The Government of Bengal has just declared its readiness to adopt a like course, and to introduce into its Legislature a Bill for raising a local rate for roads. In the provinces of Upper India a road cess has long been levied, though its amount is small, and no doubt inadequate to the wants of the country. The Government of India are satisfied that it will be found possible to give such an expansion to the road cess in these provinces also as will admit of its providing fairly for all the real wants of the country in excess of what can be met from the grants from the general revenues.

15. On the whole, the Government of India anticipate that, notwithstanding the proposed present reduction of the Imperial grant for roads, the aggregate outlay for these works will in a very short time not only not be diminished, but be actually increased; and it may reasonably be hoped that progress in its most satisfactory form—that, namely, which depends on local effort and local direction, will be stimulated by the course contemplated, and a great and permanent step made towards placing the extension and maintenance of the provincial and district roads of India on a sound basis.

16. The next head of the public works expenditure calling for attention is that for civil buildings, the estimate for which in the current year is £852,000. The sum to be allowed for the future will have to be reduced to about £600,000. The Government of India have lately had under consideration the heavy demands that arise for the provision of additional or improved accommodation, of the various departments of the civil administration, and fully recognise the multitude of useful objects to be met, and the importance of improving the public buildings of the country, and thus giving additional facilities for improved administration. But the financial necessity of restricting expenditure cannot be set aside, and it becomes unavoidable that the annual expenditure of this description should be limited in amount, and the operation of providing greater or better accommodation for the public establishments spread over a longer period of time.

17. Contingent on the above reductions of expenditure, it will be proper to reckon on some corresponding diminution of charge under the head of establishments, which from the current year were estimated to cost £1,037,000. The probable reduction under this head may be taken at about £200,000, leaving the future charge at about £800,000.

18. For the remaining heads, miscellaneous, and tools and plant, a * Extract from Resolution by the Government of India, dated July 31, 1869, paras. 18.

"The gradual growth of roads over the British Provinces, leading as it must do of necessity to the improvement of a country, the means of which are not at present well supplied, will, on demand from the Government of India, some arrangements be made which will allow of the funds available for such purposes being more systematically administered, and so as to ensure a distribution of the same to the most needy and deserving localities in a way that will be most beneficial to the provinces, and in the same measure beneficial to the general administration of the country. The subject is one which will demand mature consideration, but the general direction in which the Government of India is disposed to move has been indicated in the statement made on the publication of the Budget of India for 1870-71, viz., that the Imperial Government should gradually disengage itself of the burden of supplying the means of internal communication for the needs of the roads of the country, and that some means of local taxation and administration should be resorted to for supplementing, and perhaps eventually superseding, the present more centralised system."

Extract from a Despatch from the Secretary of State, No. 42, dated December 10, 1869, para. 3.

"One question of more than ordinary moment raised in the Resolution is that which relates to the reimbursement by Government of the fraction of the supply of capital for the roads of India, which is to be met by the local authorities, and to the extent to which the plan of local taxation and administration, which will be substituted for the present more centralised system, will be able to supply the requirements of the country, but, in any case, it could not fail to be productive of a great saving of both direct and indirect."

small reduction may be enforced, so that the charge may be lowered from £138,000, as it now stands, to say £100,000.

19. The general result of these arrangements will be to fix the public works grant for next year as follows:—

Military	...	...	...	...	£1,250,000
Civil Buildings	...	...	...	...	600,000
Communications	...	...	...	...	1,000,000
Miscellaneous	...	...	...	...	} 100,000
Tools and Plant	...	...	...	...
Establishment	...	...	...	...	800,000

Total ... £3,750,000

To this may be added £600,000 as in the current year, for agricultural works, and perhaps £200,000 for railway charges against the revenues, making in all, say 4½ millions as the Public Works charge to be borne by the revenues of the year 1870-71, as against 5½ millions for the current year, being, as before mentioned, a diminution of 1½ million.

20. If to the outlay provided from the revenues there be added the sums which it is proposed to lay out from borrowed funds upon new irrigation works and railways, which it is estimated will before long amount to about four or five millions annually, the total amount directly applied by the Government to Public Works will reach more than eight millions sterling yearly. Nor does this properly complete the statement of the contributions of the Government of India to works of internal improvement. It has already been noticed that the charge for guaranteed railway interest is virtually incurred for Public Works. This adds at least 1½ million to the effective expenditure of the year, so that in fact not less than ten millions will be spent from Imperial sources for these objects, even after the reductions determined upon. The Government of India believe it may be affirmed that such a position has scarcely ever before been assumed by any other country in the world.

21. Having thus explained for general information what is proposed for the coming year, and what may be regarded as the probable future normal outlay on Public Works, the Governor-General in Council further desires to announce the reductions which it has been determined to make in the grant of the present year. This reduction is to amount to £792,500, distributed as follows under the main heads of charge before enumerated:—

Military	...	...	...	...	£300,000
Civil Buildings	...	...	...	...	220,000
Communications	...	...	...	...	137,000
Miscellaneous	...	...	...	...	22,500
Repairs	...	...	...	...	77,500
Establishment	...	...	...	...	35,500

Total ... £792,500

22. The quota of this aggregate to be surrendered by each province will be as follows:—

	Lakhs.
Madras	14½
Bombay	12½
Bengal	14½
North-Western Provinces	10
Punjab	9½
Central Provinces	7½
British Burmah	1
Oudh	3½
Hyderabad and Rajpootana	2
Central India	3½
Coorg	½

Total ... 79½ or £792,500

23. In notifying this measure, the Governor-General in Council desires to express the great regret felt by his Excellency in Council in making so large a reduction in public works expenditure during the present year. His Excellency in Council is sensible of the disappointment which may be caused to the different executive administrations, as well as to the zealous officers of the department, by this check to the progress of the different public works under their management, and his Excellency in Council is aware that a sudden reduction in the rate of expenditure, to which all the departmental arrangements have been carefully adapted, must need be attended with great inconvenience, and possibly in some cases with a sacrifice of economy in the first instance; and the different Governments and administrations may be assured that this measure was not determined upon until the Governor-General in Council had fully satisfied himself that it was necessary in the interests of the country, and was calculated to create a less degree of embarrassment than would be brought about eventually by maintaining the present rate of public expenditure. But this determination having been arrived at, the Government of India rely confidently on the thorough and loyal co-operation of the different governments and administrations to give effect to the measure. The Gov.-Gen. in Council requests that each will at once issue the needful orders for carrying out its share of the reduction to be made during the current year, and will take such steps as may be necessary to ensure that those orders shall be promptly and completely acted on by all concerned.

24. The distribution of the total reduction to be made in each province during the current year over the various heads of service is given in the accompanying table; but this may be regarded merely as a provisional distribution. It will be for each local Government to arrange the details of the reduction to the best of its judgment, according to the present state and progress of the work in hand, so that it may be attended with as little loss and inconvenience as possible. Under the very exceptional circumstances of the present time, this redistribution may, if thought essential, extend to the ordinary agricultural grant which has not been interfered with in the provisional scheme contained in the statement, excepting in respect to the embankment works of Bengal.

By Order of his Excellency the Governor-General of India in Council.
R. STRACHEY, Colonel, R.E., Officiating to the Government of India.

Home.

MILITARY.—Major H. C. Roberts, Madras Staff Corps, has been permitted to retire.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY COMPANY.—A general meeting of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company is convened for the 24th inst.

MARRIAGE.—The Rajah of Sarawak was married on October 28 to Miss de Windt, of Warneford-place, Sevenhampton, Wilts, in Highworth Church. The Bishop of Sarawak performed the ceremony.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £200,000 in bills on India were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday, and were entirely allotted to Calcutta. The minimum was fixed, as before, at 1s. 11d. Tenders at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 26 per cent.

SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS.—At the ordinary meeting of the Society of Engineers, on November 1, the following candidates for election were balloted for and duly elected, viz.:—As member, Edward V. O. Haldane, late assistant-engineer, Hyderabad, Deccan; as a foreign member, Lieutenant John Grierson, Bombay Staff Corps, late R.A.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Serapis, three, Indian screw relief troop ship, Captain John C. Soady, has arrived at Spithead from Alexandria, having on board the 90th (Perthshire Volunteers) Regiment, which was brought from India to Alexandria in the Junna, and there transferred to the Serapis. The troops were transferred to the Orontes, two, iron screw ship, for conveyance to Scotland.

MEDALS FOR ABYSSINIA.—The issue of the medals for the campaign in Abyssinia has been considerably delayed by the death of the late Master of the Mint, and by the necessity of having the name of each individual officer or soldier engraved on the medal to be given to him. Many of them have, however, now been distributed, and the remainder will soon be delivered. The medals for the campaign in New Zealand will, we understand, be ready for distribution in a week or two.

OPENING OF THE SUEZ CANAL.—Mr. Pender, chairman of the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company, and chairman also of the Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta and of the Anglo-Mediterranean lines, has been requested to attend the opening of the Suez Canal as the representative of the most important recent telegraphic enterprises. His acquaintance with and support of these undertakings will doubtless invest his mission with no ordinary commercial and scientific importance.

THE SUPRESESSION COMMITTEE.—The labours of the Committee on the Supersession of Colonels have at least been productive of one important result. In the course of their investigations, the curious fact cropped out that three generals who ought to have been added to the unattached list of the British Army, under the Amalgamation Warrant of 1862, were not so dealt with. The departments are now considering how to arrange the removal of the lapse. Under the warrant in question, the transfer should have taken place in 1863.—Broad Arrow.

ALBERT ASSURANCE COMPANY.—The official liquidators of the Albert Life Assurance Company have convened a meeting of the representative policy-holders committees for Monday, the 8th Nov., for the purpose of considering a scheme which has been prepared, and has received the approval of the board of an old-established life assurance society, under which holders of Albert policies on lives now assurable will be granted new policies upon equitable and advantageous terms. This arrangement, if adopted by the policy-holders, will, in the opinion of the liquidators, considerably reduce the liabilities of the Albert Company.

MR. COWASJEE JAHANGIR, C.S.I.—This well-known liberal Parsee gentleman of Bombay has made donations of £5 each to the following London charities, besides the £1,350 given by him for the beautiful fountain lately erected by the Metropolitan Drinking Fountain Association in Regent's-park:—Alexandra Institution for the Blind, British Home for Incurables, Refuges for Homeless and Destitute Children, Asylum for the Support and Education of Deaf and Dumb Children, Society for the Relief of Distress, Mrs. Gladstone's Free Convalescent Home, London Philanthropic Society, Metropolitan Free Hospital, Nightingale Fund for Training Nurses, Royal Albert Orphan Asylum, Royal Humane Society, and the Royal National Lifeboat Institution.

COLONEL E. B. JOHNSON.—It is no secret that Colonel E. B. Johnson, C.B., Royal Artillery, Assistant Military-Secretary at the Horse Guards, is anxious to retire at the termination of the present year from employment on the staff at head-quarters, and return to India. Should Colonel Johnson finally determine to solicit his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief to accept his resignation of the post of Assistant Military-Secretary, he will depart from the Horse Guards deservedly regretted by all those who have ever had occasion to visit him on matters of business, as none have ever left his office without experiencing both his amiability and ability. It is to be hoped, however, in the interest of the service at large, that Colonel Johnson may yet reconsider his determination.—Army and Navy Gazette.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.—The will of Major-General Robert Guthrie McGregor, Bengal Army (retired), was proved in London under £60,000 personalty.—The will of Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Alexander Atchison, of H.M. Army, late of Rose-hill, Dorking, was proved in London under £25,000 personalty in this country. The executors and trustees appointed for England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales are John Boustead, Esq., army agent; Lieutenant-Colonel Jonathan Forbes Leslie, Captain Thomas Eardley Hodges, and Richard Jefferson, Esq., of the Albany, testator's partner in his estates at Ceylon. The will is dated Sept. 8, 1863, and a codicil Dec. 10, 1866. The gallant colonel died at his residence, Rose-hill, Sept. 25 last. The testator has bequeathed a large portion of his shares in railway and other public companies to his daughter Ann; the remaining portion he leaves to his wife for her life, and afterwards amongst all his children equally, and appoints his wife residuary legatee.

THE FRAUDS IN INDIA.—At Bow-street, on October 29, Thomas Nash Turnbull, an overseer in the Forest Department at Wynad, in the Presidency of Madras, was charged on remand with embezzling various sums amounting to £3,431. 5s., the property of the Indian Government. Mr. Vaughan said since the last occasion he had had the opportunity of reading over the depositions, so that, unless it was the prisoner's desire, there would be no necessity to read them over now. The prisoner replied that he did not wish to have them read to him. Mr. Vaughan said, that being the case, he had come to the conclusion that the prima facie case made by Mr. Poland was completely established. He (Mr. Vaughan) should therefore commit the prisoner on the charge of embezzling certain moneys received by him which it was his duty to pay to the Treasury while in his office. He will have to remain in prison until he can be sent to that part of her Majesty's dominions where the offence was committed to take his trial.

COTTON SUPPLY ASSOCIATION.—The annual meeting of the Cotton Supply Association was held on Tuesday, Nov. 2, at the Manchester Town hall. Mr. J. Cheetham, the President, in the course of his address, said that until America sent us a three million crop of cotton the cotton trade of this country would have no relief. Under present circumstances it behoved them to look for other sources of supply than the United States. Referring to India, he pointed to the fact that during the last eight years our annual imports of cotton from that country had gradually risen threefold, and he reviewed the various proposals which had been made for increasing that supply. He gave figures to show that the cotton manufacture had not been, except in the minutest degree, transferred to the Continent, but contended that the trade could never be remunerative as long as cotton was 1s. a pound. As to the Revivers, he challenged them to prove their sincerity by finding some member of Parliament with the courage to propose a duty of 20 or 40 per cent. on cotton from the United States, because there were heavy duties on English imports into that country. Sir Thomas Bazley followed, and said that nothing but a larger supply of cotton at a reasonable rate could restore a healthy condition to the trade.

COLONEL MACKENZIE.—Colonel K. D. Mackenzie, C.B., half-pay, 92nd Highlanders, and late Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General in Ireland, has been appointed Deputy Quartermaster-General, vice Colonel the Hon. H. H. Clifford, v.c., C.B., appointed Aide-de-Camp to his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief. Colonel Mackenzie, according to "Hart," when attached to General Macdonald's flying column during the Irish rebellion of 1848, was mainly instrumental in capturing Smith O'Brien and forwarding him to Dublin. Immediately after the capture he stopped a railway engine at Thurles, by placing a loaded pistol at the driver's head, he having refused to halt, and the engine at once conveyed Smith O'Brien to Dublin. He served throughout the Eastern campaign of 1854-55, as Brigade Major of the Light Division and as Assistant-Quartermaster-General; was present at the battles of Alma and Inkerman, and siege and fall of Sebastopol; for which services he received the war medal with three clasps, a Knightsip of the Legion of Honour, the Fifth Class of the Medjidie, the Sardinian and Turkish medals, and the brevets of Major and Lieutenant-Colonel. He proceeded to India in January, 1858, with the Gordon Highlanders, and served in Central India; was subsequently appointed Assistant Adjutant-General and Deputy Adjutant-General in Bengal. In June, 1859, he was selected by the Governor-General to quell the mutiny of the 5th Bengal European Regiment at Barrackpore, for which he received the thanks of the Governor-General in Council and the Secretary of State for India. He proceeded in January, 1860, to China, as Deputy Quartermaster-General and head of the department.

EAST INDIA INVESTMENTS.—The Pall Mall Gazette in examining East India Stocks draws the following deductions from the calculations made:—The reason why the price of East India 5 per cent. stock is high—that is, higher than its real value, or, to put it more clearly, why it is a dear stock for investment—is because this loan is repayable in 1880 at par; or, in other words, £100 money will be given for every £100 stock in eleven years from the present time. It is not absolutely certain that this will be done, but the Government have the option of doing so; and if their credit continues as good as it is at present, there is very little doubt but that it will be done, because they would in that case be able to pay off the Five per Cent. Loan and borrow again at 4 per cent. The fact that the Five per Cent. Government Loan is repayable at par in 1880 is without a doubt not generally known amongst the holders of this stock, otherwise the price would not continue to be quoted at 114, at which price it pays less than Consols. Supposing that the loan were not repayable, the stock at the present price would yield interest to the investor at the rate of £4. 7s. 8d. per cent.; but as the loan is payable off at par (100) in eleven years the investor at the end of that time, if he pays £114 for every £100 stock, clearly loses £14 for every £100 stock he buys, and therefore that amount must be deducted from the interest he has received in the meantime. If £14 be divided amongst eleven years it will give £1. 5s. 5d. for each year; and as the interest yielded at 114 is £4. 7s. 8d., if £1. 5s. 5d. is deducted it leaves £3. 2s. 3d., which is the real interest that this stock pays. Some investors may hold this stock only for a year or two, but the price ought to decline every year until the year 1880, when it will be worth only 100, and therefore there will be a proportionate loss, and the interest received will still be the same.

Drill and habits of discipline are common to both, and to learn these the ensign is gazetted to a European regiment, and employs his spare time in the study of the native languages, taking no interest in men or officer from whom he will be shortly permanently separated. Many parents and guardians are frightened from allowing their sons and wards to join the Indian Local Army, owing to the preliminary time which has to be passed in a Queen's regiment, and the attendant expenses of uniform, &c. It would, we think, be more to the advantage of all concerned if officers of the native army were to obtain their appointments direct without using Queen's regiments as stepping-stones, and, if necessary, the year of probation were passed with a European regiment after qualification in the native languages, reversing the present method of first joining a Queen's regiment and after a certain time serving on probation with a native one. A young officer joining a native regiment would have greater facilities than he now has for learning the language, and would, as a first lesson, learn the administration of the interior economy of the native army. Once qualified in the native languages, and before posting him to charge of a wing, he should be attached to a European regiment; he would then, with his experience of a native corps, see any blots in its drill or management, and be far more useful as an officer on his return than he would have been by learning as little as he can under the present regime, and forgetting that little as soon as other duties drive it out of his head.

INDIAN FINANCE.

The Saturday Review, putting it briefly, says that what the Indian Government ask is to be allowed to spend a million and a quarter less. The first head under which the expenditure, they think, is capable of being reduced is that on military works and buildings, with which is classed the outlay on Government dockyards. The estimate for 1869-70 was £1,800,000. It is proposed for the future to fix the grant for all military purposes at a million and a quarter. The experience of the last few years shows that the necessary outlay on repairs for this class of work is about one-fourth of a million, so that there will remain about one million for carrying out new works. The Government think that the barracks, to which the bulk of the outlay is devoted, may be built more cheaply. Some costly superfluities, it is said, may be rejected in the future without any loss of comfort to the soldier; and that there may be no doubt as to what is meant as the great secret of reduction, it is expressly stated that by more closely limiting the accommodation to what is really necessary, much economy could be effected, and real convenience in no way sacrificed. This statement will of course provoke much discussion, and in many quarters it will be said that the vessel is going to be spoiled to save a ha'porth of tar, and that the British soldier is to suffer in order that a little less may be spent in properly housing him. Still, if the Governor-General is convinced, and he is supported by competent military authorities in his opinion that everything necessary will be provided by the expenditure of a smaller sum than that originally contemplated, he is quite right to disregard any possible outcry from the warmer and more enthusiastic friends of the soldier. The next item of expenditure in which a reduction is to be made is that of communications and roads. About a quarter of a million less is to be spent on this head; and it is explained that this reduction marks, and is intended to mark, the beginning of a new policy. The Government has for some years been satisfied that to attempt, from ordinary revenues, to provide and maintain all the roads required for the intercommunications of so vast a territory would be to enter on an altogether impracticable task. What is wanted is that the districts requiring the roads should make them for themselves, and that the cost of the construction of the means of communication ancillary to railroads should be defrayed by local assessments. The Government would like to contribute more than a million in aid of local assessments, if it had more than a million to spare for the purpose. But it cannot honestly and properly contribute more than a million, and so the districts requiring roads must do the best they can with the help afforded them. In the same way the Government proposes to spend a quarter of a million less on Civil buildings, and the reduction of operations in public works will permit a considerable reduction under the head of Establishments and in miscellaneous outlays, which reduction, again, will amount to about a quarter of a million. Thus the total reduction of a million and a quarter is made up. But the Government point out that even after this reduction has been made, a vast sum will be annually laid out on the public works of India. Borrowing for railways and irrigation works will still go on, and something more than four million a-year will be expended from this source. The Indian Government will furnish from revenue, even after all reductions have been made, little short of four millions more; and when to these sums there is added what will be paid out of revenue for guaranteed interest on railways, the total amount of annual outlay on Indian public works will reach the respectable figure of ten millions. No one can doubt that it is far better for India that ten millions should be laid out on public works with the finances in a thoroughly healthy state, than that eleven millions and a quarter should be spent under a system of perpetual deficits. The Indian Government, therefore, will do all it can to put things straight, but there is much that does not lie in its power, and as to which it can

THE NATIVE INDIAN ARMY.

The Army and Navy Gazette maintains that the training undergone by a young officer in a Line regiment is not that which best fits him for service with native troops. The thousand and one petits soins paid by an officer to the British soldier as regards his rations, meals, daily pay, necessaries, barrack-room, &c., &c., are "more honoured in the breach than in the observance" as regards native troops; while, on the other hand, the system of summary trials, &c., in force with the Native Army are quite foreign to European regi-only implore the Home Government to do its share in reducing the expenditure. There are, first, the home charges, in which the Indian authorities evidently believe, rightly or wrongly, that reductions could be made, but which they refrain from examining in detail because it is not for them to criticise the conduct of their masters. Far more important, however, is the military expenditure, in which the Indian Government are confident that very large reductions are feasible. Measures might, they think, be adopted, which, while they would lead to an immense saving of money, would not in the least diminish the real military strength of the Government. Such measures are, to a great extent, beyond the control of anyone in India. The Home Government must come to the rescue.

Mails to India, &c.

The Mails to all parts of India, via SOUTHAMPTON, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those via MARSEILLES every Friday, at 6 P.M.

For Ceylon, China, Straits Settlements, &c., the dates of despatch up to the end of December will be as follows, viz.:

Via SOUTHAMPTON, at 8 A.M., on the Saturdays, October 2, 16, and 30, November 6 and 20, and December 4 and 18.

Via MARSEILLES, at 6 P.M., on the Fridays, October 8 and 22, November 5 and 19, and December 3, 17, and 31.

The postage on letters may either be paid in advance or left to be paid on delivery, at the option of the sender; but in all cases where the postage is not fully pre-paid, the Letters will be charged, on delivery, with one additional rate of Ninepence, besides the usual postage.

This increase of postage will not affect the Letters of Officers of the Army and Navy serving in India and Ceylon; such Letters will continue to enjoy the privilege of transmission at the reduced postage of Sixpence the half-ounce, via Southampton, and Tenpence the half-ounce via Marseilles.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth.

A French line of Mail Packets leaves Marseilles every fourth Saturday. Postage for Letters and Papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English Mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these Packets must be specially addressed—"By French Mail Packet from Marseilles."

Up to the end of December the dates of despatch from London will be the Thursday evenings, September 30th, October 25th, November 25th, and December 23rd, and by Supplementary Mails on the morning following.

Supplementary Mails will also be made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday morning, via France and Italy to Brindisi, and thence by Italian packet to Alexandria, but should they not reach the latter place in time, the departure of the regular Mails for Suez will not be delayed. The postage of letters will be at the rate of 1s. 4d. for each half-ounce, and of newspapers 1d. for each four ounces.

DEATH OF AZIM KHAN.—Mahomed Azim Khan is reported to have died at Shahrood, midway between Meshed and Teheran, on the 6th inst. This event, if it has really happened, is an important one to the Afghans. It was he, as our readers are aware, whom Shere Ali Khan supplanted on the throne of Cabul. As Ameer he was an example of the worst class of Afghan rulers—cruel, tyrannical, and licentious. There was no love lost between him and his subjects, and no grief shown when he was obliged to flee from his capital. Since that event his life has been chequered and miserable. Along with the young, able, and active Abdool Rahman Khan, his nephew, who had established a quasi-independent rule in Afghan-Turkistan, which disappeared when Shere Ali became Ameer, he did what he could to regain what he had lost, but only experienced bitter misfortune. Poor, exiled, and hunted down, he and his companion became suppliants for protection in every neighbouring country, and suffered the treatment proverbially shown to poor relations who come to beg. Southern Turkistan offered them no refuge, and a visit was paid to India; but, getting wind there of certain troublesome conditions they would be asked to submit to if they wanted the protection of the British Government, they left the country suddenly. They then went to Persia, where they expected probably to find a ruler disposed to encourage them secretly to injure a common rival, but all they got was a pecuniary allowance and an intimation that their future movements were to depend on the will of the Shah. At one time also, we should add, an effort was made by Abdool Rahman Khan to interest the Russians in their favour, but of course without success. The news of Mahomed Azim's death must have afforded a grim satisfaction to Shere Ali, who will no longer have any need to trouble himself about the designs and whereabouts of his deposed rival, or to scold and punish his servants for failing to catch him. Two sons of Mahomed Azim have made abortive attempts lately, in Southern Turkistan, to win back a little of what their father lost, but they have not as yet shown any special ability, or become popular and powerful leaders.—Bombay Gazette.

THE DEATH RATE IN THE N.W. PROVINCES IN AUGUST.—The return of deaths in the North-West Provinces for the month of August is really appalling. In August last year the deaths were 25,265, but in August of the present year they rose to 51,542. Cholera and fever are the principal causes of the increase, as from the former the deaths rose from 1,926 to 18,501, and from the latter from 13,000 to 19,000. No doubt the debility of the people caused by the scarcity has rendered them more liable to disease.—Englishman.

Advertisements.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That, in conformity with the intention announced of sending to India annually a certain number of YOUNG MEN, Trained and Educated for ultimate Employment in the Higher Branches of the Department for the Conservation and Management of the FORESTS under the Government of India, ELEVEN Young Men will be selected in DECEMBER next to go to India at the end of 1872, if so many are found duly qualified.

The salary will be at first £300 a-year, and the salaries of the appointments in the three Presidencies range between that sum and £1,900 a-year. Promotions will depend upon efficiency, and the occurrence of vacancies in the higher grades.

Applicants must be British subjects, above seventeen and under twenty-five years of age, and unmarried.

As active habits and a strong constitution are most important, Candidates will have to undergo a strict medical examination.

They must send to the Revenue Department of the India Office, on or before the 25th of November next, a statement of their names and parentage, with a certificate of birth, and of being possessed of a competent knowledge of the following subjects, and they must be prepared to undergo an examination in them:—

1. English writing from dictation and English composition.
2. Arithmetic in all its branches.
3. Algebra, elementary principles, simple and quadratic equations, ratios and proportions, logarithms, arithmetical and geometrical progression.
4. Geometry (1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 6th Books of Euclid and plane trigonometry).
5. Free hand-drawing.
6. A good colloquial knowledge of either French or German, with the facility to read and translate the works of some classical writer in the language.

A preference will be given to those Candidates who show proficiency in—

1. Surveying and land measuring.
Geology and mineralogy.
2. The elements of any of the following subjects:—
Plan-drawing.
Botany.
Mechanical and natural philosophy.
Chemistry.

If selected, they will be further required to go through a course of training and instruction in Forestry and cognate Sciences for two years and a-half, in France or Germany, previous to their departure for India, and the Secretary of State will contribute £50 at the end of each half-year, towards the expenses of their training, in the case of such Candidates as are favourably reported on by their instructors. In addition to this, the young men will be required to pass some weeks under one or more approved Foresters in Scotland before they go out to India.

More detailed information as to these appointments may be had on application to the Assistant Secretary, Revenue (Forests) Department, India Office, Westminster.

(Signed) HERMAN MERIVALE.

THE PEOPLE OF INDIA:

A SERIES OF
PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSTRATIONS OF
THE RACES AND TRIBES OF HINDUSTAN,
ORIGINALLY PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF
THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,
AND REPRODUCED AT THE INDIA MUSEUM
BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

EDITED BY

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorised the publication of an edition for sale.

The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super-royal 4to., and it will be issued at £2. 5s. per volume. The First and Second Volumes are still on hand.

PREFACE.

During the administration of Lord Canning, from 1856 to 1863, the interest which had been created in Europe by the remarkable development of the Photographic Art communicated itself to India, and originated the desire to turn it to account in the illustration of the topography, architecture, and ethnology of that country.

There were none, perhaps, in whom this interest was awakened more strongly than in Lord and Lady Canning. It was their wish to carry home with them, at the end of their sojourn in India, a collection, obtained by private means, of photographic illustrations, which might recall to their memory the peculiarities of Indian life.

The great convulsion of 1857-59, while it necessarily retarded for a time all scientific and artistic operations, imparted a new interest to the country which had been the scene of, and to the people who had been the actors in these remarkable events. When, therefore, the pacification of India had been accomplished, the officers of the Indian Services, who had made themselves acquainted with the principles and practice of photography, encouraged and patronised by the Governor-General, went forth, and traversed the land in search of interesting subjects.

In this way the design soon exceeded the dimensions of a more private collection; but Lord Canning felt that its importance was sufficient to warrant official sanction and development, and, therefore, placed the matter in the hands of Mr. Olive Bayley, his Home Secretary. Some of the more important results appear in the present work.

The photographs were produced without any definite plan, according to local and personal circumstances, by different officers; and copies of each plate were sent home to the Secretary of State for India in Council.

After a time, it appeared that a sufficient number of illustrations had been received from various parts of India, fairly to represent the different varieties of the Indian races. The negatives remained in India; but from the plates sent home it was easy to produce fresh negatives, the prints of which might be multiplied to any extent. The Secretary of State in Council sanctioned this operation, and the work was executed by Mr. W. Griggs, at the India Museum, under the superintendence of Dr. Forbes Watson.

In many cases some descriptive account of the tribes represented accompanied the photographs sent from India. These varied greatly in amplitude and value. But, on the whole, it may be said that they were sufficient to constitute the basis of the sketches contributed by Mr. John R. Melville, Colonel Meadows Taylor, Mr. Kaye, Dr. Forbes Watson, and others. These sketches do not profess to be more than mere rough notes, suggestive rather than exhaustive, and they make no claim to scientific research or philosophic investigation. But although the work does not aspire to scientific eminence, it is hoped that, in an ethnological point of view, it will not be without interest and value.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 23; Agra and Calcutta, October 19; Madras, October 18.

The chief news of the week is the progress made by Colonel Rothney's column up the Black Mountain, in requital of the recent Hassanzai raid into Agror. He has already darted across the frontier against a large Hassanzai village, which was burnt by his Sikhs, the crops destroyed, and 150 head of cattle brought into camp. By the last accounts the force was more than half way up the Black Mountain. Whatever Colonel Rothney has to do, is sure to be done thoroughly, with all speed. His many services in Burmah, before Delhi, and last year in these very hills of Hazara, have hitherto been rewarded only by a companionship of the Star of India, and by actual loss, through a blunder in the Indian War Office, of many steps of brevet rank. His selection however by Lord Mayo for the command of the troops designed to watch, and at need to punish the marauders of the Black Mountain, augurs well, we trust, for his future prospects.

CENTRAL ASIA figures largely in the pages of the Indian papers. A skirmish between Russian and Yarkandi outposts on the Narain River has led to the death of Mohammed Nyaz, shot by order of his master, the Khush-Beghi, or Atalik Ghazi of Yarkand, for disobeying his orders, so as to bring on an untoward collision, in other words, perhaps for being defeated. Anyhow, Yakoob Beg has no idea of giving way at present before the Russians; for he at once ordered strong reinforcements off to his frontier, under the command of his own son, and has set about building new forts on the road from the Narain. Kabul is alive with rumours of Russian troops being on their way to Bokhara, nominally, we suppose, to help the Ameer against his son and his son's allies in Kokand. Shere Ali's ablest enemy, Abdurrahman Khan, is said to have returned to Teheran since Azim Khan's death. But the Kabul horizon is not quite cloudless. The Ghilzyes about Kandahar kick against the new taxes, and Badakshan is stirred by the outer waves of the struggle lately raging in Bokhara. East of Yarkand there was war between the people and their Chinese neighbours. Meanwhile trade in Ladakh was steadily increasing. A large body of wealthy pilgrims had reached Leh from Kashgar on their way to Mecca, and a caravan of traders from Kokand was reported to be marching towards Leh. Merchants coming down by the Changchenmoo Passes speak most favourably of that route.

ARCHDEACON PRATT has been to Mandalay, charged to congratulate the King of Burmah in her Majesty's name, on the encouragement he has given to education by founding schools, and to religion by building an English church at his own expense, and showing much favour to the missionaries in Burmah. The Queen is to contribute a font to the new church.

WHETHER English engineers are wont to receive commissions on their work or no, whether those commissions are within or in breach of professional usage, it seems certain that the Indian Government meant to cast no sort of slur on the profession itself. In an explanatory circular just issued it disclaims all reference to "any illicit receipt of gratuities." What it does maintain is that "civil engineers in England are at times remunerated by commission on work done under their supervision," which commission is held "to be a part of their legitimate remuneration." Thinking such a practice incompatible with the principles on which a public service ought to be conducted, the Viceroy in Council was impelled "to declare this in a formal manner, in order that no doubt might exist on the subject." The reference to the profession at home was meant to "indicate more exactly the scope of the order." As for the civil engineers in its own service, the Government is so far from distrusting or disparaging them that it hopes to give early effect to some proposals lately submitted to it "for improving their position generally, and placing them, in respect to their emoluments, on precisely the same footing as all other officers employed on the same duties."

FROM the second number of the Academy we learn that Drs. Bühler and Kielhorn, of the Elphinstone and Deccan Colleges at Bombay and Poonah, have been very successful in their search after Sanskrit MSS. In going through the chief towns remarkable for Sanskrit culture in the Northern Division, Dr. Bühler found the Brahmans and Shastris everywhere ready to discuss questions bearing on their ancient literature and philosophy. In two or three places they held regular meetings for that purpose. Lists of libraries to which access had been gained were drawn up. A great many Vedic MSS. hitherto unknown have been brought to light. Dr. Kielhorn was not quite so fortunate in his month's tour through Dharwar, Belgaum, and Canara, many owners of MSS. having declined to open their libraries to strangers. His purchases however include some documents of no small value for Sanskrit scholars.

WE believe that the nominal strength of the Artillery in India is to be reduced by two brigades of horse and as many of foot artillery, on the same principle which is to mark the reduction in the Infantry, as reported by us last week—namely, by increasing the strength of the privates in the remaining troops and batteries. The thirteen brigades now in India would thus be apparently reduced to nine. Due care we hope will be taken not to cut down the strength of the Artillery in officers too much. In such a service the proportion of officers to men should always be larger than what is needed for the Infantry.

THE arrangement lately made for maintaining a British squadron in the Persian Gulf is purely provisional. The Home authorities are even now considering some later proposals forwarded by the Indian Government. For the present however it has been determined to keep six men-of-war in the Indian seas at the cost of the Indian Treasury; three of these to be placed under the sole orders of the Indian Government for employment in the Persian Gulf.

THE presence of British men-of-war seems specially needed there just now, if the last accounts from Bombay are at all trustworthy. Not only have British subjects been outraged in the ceaseless quarrels between tribe and tribe along the coast, but a gunboat of the Bombay Marine was actually fired upon for nearly half-an-hour from a port adjacent to Muscat. Colonel Pelly has had orders to make strict inquiry into the circumstances of so wanton an attack, and to vindicate, if needful, the honour of the British flag. The admiral on the station pleaded that he had no ships to spare; but the Governor of Bombay, after taking counsel with the Viceroy, seems to have ordered the immediate despatch of H.M.S. Daphne to the scene of commotion; her commander, Captain Douglas, having readily accepted his share of responsibility for such a move. There has been fresh fighting at Bahrein and Bunder Abbas, which latter place has been reconquered from the present ruler of Muscat by means of Persian aid. The troublous state of things for some years past in those waters furnishes a strong argument for the revival of the old Indian navy in one form or another. A sufficient fleet for the maintenance of British-Indian empire in the Indian seas is quite as necessary as a sufficient land-force for the defence of our Punjab Frontier.

It was mentioned some time ago that the Indian Government had at last sent home a despatch recommending the issue of a medal for Bhotan. In answer to the queries of correspondents on this subject, all we can now say is—that the recommendations have since been forwarded to the War-office and the Horse Guards for their final verdict. What that will be ought not to appear a doubtful matter, in view of the manifest claim which the troops engaged in Bhotan possess to an honour enjoyed by so many victors in far easier and smaller fields. If medals are given for Abyssinia, the men who saw harder service under far more trying conditions have a tenfold right to the decoration. While the authorities are about it, they may as well consider the claims of the field force which captured Kangra a few weeks only after Sobraon. It was surely a mere oversight which excluded these troops from their share of the rewards that fell to the heroes of the Sutlej Campaign.

ACCORDING to the Delhi Gazette Captain Ross of the Artillery has patented a discovery which will ensure iron, steel, and other metals from all danger of rusting. It is a composition which somehow chemically combines with the iron steeped in it, over which it forms a coating of iron so changed in character that it will not rust, even after lying in water a whole week. This composition, which is so thin that it can bear applying to the finest needles and the smallest clock-work, which does no harm to the most delicate watch-springs, and improves, if anything, the temper of a sword-blade, is said to turn the surface of steel implements whitish grey, leaving it still capable of receiving a very high polish. The Deputy Adjutant-general of Artillery himself experimented on some steel things prepared by Captain Ross. They were put out in the rain for some time and then left all night on the wet grass, without showing a speck of rust afterwards. If the invention stands the ordeal of a rainy season at Maulmain or Mussoorie, its author will deserve to be assailed with a shower of good offers from all the ironmasters and cutlers in this country—unless indeed they find their profit in the ravages of rust.

THAT the native regiments in India will in due time be armed with rifles of the newest pattern we have every reason still to believe. But of course they will have to wait their turn for a weapon not yet issued to their white comrades.

Meanwhile however an offer of some twenty thousand Sniders has been made, we believe, to the Indian Government, for distribution among the sepoys. We can only hope that the offer will be accepted, and the bulk of the breechloaders given out to that splendid body of picked troops which guards our North-Western Frontier, and whose idiosyncrasy has been so graphically drawn in the last number of the Cornhill Magazine. No plea of possible danger to our rule in the future should stand for a moment against the expediency as well as justice of arming the sepoy with weapons equal to those of his actual comrades in the present. If we cannot do without these men, we are bound in our own defence to make them as effective as possible against all opponents. And the obligation has two-fold force with respect to the defenders of our North-Western Frontier, "the steel head of the lance that guards India."

WE are glad to see that Lieutenant Nolan's instrument for finding the range of guns in the field has come so triumphantly out of many severe ordeals. At Dartmoor its performances were highly lauded by the Committee. The most trying test of all awaited it at Aldershot, where it was made over to a battery of artillery for regular use, the inventor himself being absent throughout the trials. In spite of unfavourable ground and weather the range-finder seems to have made excellent practice, under every condition of its employment. In slow judging of distances it was only thirty-eight yards wrong at a range of 2,470 yards, while the two non-commissioned officers at the guns were as much as 570 and 1,270 yards out in their reckoning by the eye. At 1,180 yards the range-finder was only fifteen yards short, against an excess of 120 and 320 yards on the part of unaided human eyes. In this case the range was given in two-and-a-half minutes. In rapid firing the experiments were even more successful. At 2,350 yards there was an error of only thirteen yards, the time taken being 1-20 minutes, and the eye-reckonings being 150 and 1,150 yards out. Over rising ground a range of 3,655 was missed by only five yards on the part of the range-finder, whereas the non-commissioned officers guessed wrong, the one by 2,346 too many, the other by 1,565 yards too few. Twice over at 2,350 did the instrument make a mistake of only one yard. At 1,450 yards, against a waggon moving at a trot, the range-finder missed by forty-five yards, and only by two against the same waggon at a range of 797. At 780 yards it exactly hit the range of the same waggon moving at a walk. The mean error in thirty calculations was only twenty-two yards; and only once was the range-finder out by so much as 150 yards at a distance of 4,100—about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles. The average error with the human eye may be gathered from the instances already given. After all deductions for the slower process of reckoning with the range-finder, its immense superiority to the best-trained human eye can hardly be questioned. The few seconds of time lost in judging the distance count for nothing, we should imagine, against the infinitely greater certainty of getting the true range, and further practice with the instrument might lead to greater quickness as well as accuracy in its use.

THE new Lord Mayor had better refer to his "Anabasis"—in the English version, if he has forgotten his Greek. Having duly compared Xenophon's story with the latest narrative of the Abyssinian War, he will hardly venture to repeat what he said on the evening of his installation, that the Retreat of the Ten Thousand was a "quite insignificant feat" compared with Lord Napier's march upon Magdala. Let us discriminate a little even in after-dinner eulogies.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We find ourselves with much regret compelled to let "I. B.'s" Sixth Letter on Education stand over till next week.

All Letters for insertion in Allen's Indian Mail should be legibly written on one side of the paper only, and accompanied with the real name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Anonymous letters will not be inserted. The columns of the Indian Mail are open for free, but temperate discussion on all Indian topics of public interest, and especially all matters regarding the Services, Civil, Military, or Uncovenanted. The Proprietors and Editor wish it to be distinctly understood that they do not hold themselves in any way responsible for the opinions that may be expressed in the Correspondence Columns.

Allen's Indian Mail is now published every WEDNESDAY. To insure punctuality in the delivery of the Paper, Subscriptions, as below (which are payable in advance), should be sent to Messrs. Wm. H. ALLEN and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, S.W., London.

TERMS (INCLUDING INLAND POSTAGE):—

RUSSIA AND AFGHANISTAN.

If the Army and Navy Gazette is rightly informed, proposals for neutralising Afghanistan were actually made some months ago by the Cabinet of St. James's to that of St. Petersburg. This then was the object of the negotiations to which reference was made by Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons last July. We are sorry to hear it. Any movement on our part in this direction was almost sure to prove a mistake. It looks in the first place as if we were afraid of Russia, who will hardly care to further our desires unless she in her turn is horribly afraid of us. Besides we could never feel sure that if Russian interests were to urge her forward, the guarantee once given would keep her back; and if in such case her troops crossed the Afghan frontier, would it be possible for England to avoid the challenge?

The proposal however seems to have been made. It has even, we are told, been formally accepted "in the abstract" by the Russian Ministry. But the abstract and the concrete are very different things. To pass from generals to particulars is often like the passage from midsea into a rock-strewn channel. Love-making may go on smoothly enough until you come to the settlements. When the discussion of details began between our Cabinet and that of St. Petersburg, a hitch very soon turned up. What is meant by Afghanistan? Do we mean to comprise in that word the provinces of Balkh, Kulum, and Kunduz, which belonged to Bokhara before the days of Dost Mohammed, or districts like Maimanah, which still form a bone of quarrel between the two countries? Russia for her part declines to recognise Shere Ali's title to the possession of Balkh. The British Government, in its turn, affirms that Dost Mohammed merely won back from Bokhara a province which had always been accounted part of Afghanistan. What answer the Russian Minister has made to this we have yet to learn. It seems pretty clear however that Russia has no wish to bind herself by inconvenient pledges. Looking to the future of the Eastern Question on its European side, she would naturally like to keep her hands free for possible complications in the East. There is not much chance therefore of winning her adhesion to any definite adjustment of a question which it might serve her purpose to keep indefinitely open; and the adjustment of it will not be hastened by any proofs of our own anxiety to exchange a troublesome uncertainty for a comfortable illusion.

THE FUTURE OF THE CIVIL SERVICE.

THE author of a little pamphlet printed lately at Allahabad has chosen for his theme the "Disestablishment of the Indian Civil Service." Like the Irish Church Establishment this Service also is condemned, he thinks, by the spirit of the day. It has done its work, outlived its usefulness, and now craves decent burial at the hands of its present masters. Its death-knell indeed appears to have been sounded as far back as 1858, when the government of India was formally handed over to the Crown. Up to that time, for a space of eighty-five years from its first conception, its life had been on the whole a blessing to the natives and a source of equal pride and advantage to the friends and members of the East India Company. A berth in the Covenanted Civil Service was a kind of heirloom in the family of an East India Director. The youths set apart for Indian service were "reared, one may say, on curry and rice." Their boyhood was passed among old Indians at Cheltenham or Portland-place, with things Indian ever before their eyes. A brief spell of work or idling at Haileybury prepared the young civilian for a meeting with old friends in Calcutta, followed in due course by a trip up-country, "to the old district where his father's name was a household word." It was not a bad system while it lasted, that "curious mixture of nepotism and enthusiasm which bore fruit in the deeds of heroes." Even if it "gave India a precious lot of hard bargains," it was anyhow "natural, spontaneous, and 'understanded of the people.'"

But alas! those halcyon days are wellnigh departed. The "close corps of favoured officers" no longer in fact exists. Its privileges have been invaded on all sides. Its best places have become a prize for "ambitious schoolboys." Outsiders have made their way into the departments of Justice and Finance. The inevitable "Dowb" too is carrying off the children's bread. In the Non-regulation Provinces of the Punjab and Central India not even the highest posts are sacred from attack, and "the Ensign and the Extra are spread over the face of the land." The very strongholds of the Covenanted in the Regulation Provinces are no longer safe, for numberless tehsildars and talookdars have been brought by the need of the moment into the ranks of the magistracy. And now, to complete the change thus yearly developed, Natives may henceforth enter the Service without competition, a rule which "not only takes away the last shred" of privilege reserved for the Covenanted Civilian, but threatens the very existence of those Funds which "have hitherto formed the Charter of the Service as a corporate body."

Of the danger to the Civil Service Funds and therefore to the Service itself, we for one would like to see further evidence. The Funds in question, having been established after the beginning of this century—one of them more than twenty years after—can hardly be viewed as the charters of a service embodied thirty years before. Nor would their existence be necessarily endangered by an influx of outside natives into covenanted posts. The pensions granted to widows and to retired civilians are granted without respect to the number of subscribers, and would still continue to be a charge on the State Treasury so long as any Covenanted civilian continued to subscribe his regulated share, in accordance with the terms on which he entered the service. Nor is the threatened influx of natives under the late concession likely to affect the numbers of the Civil Service for many years to come. The Indian Government, which has always lagged some way behind the popular home demand for more native judges and collectors, is sure to give a pretty wide latitude to the instructions sent out from Downing-street on this head. Here and there some native gentleman of high standing or prominent capacity will be allowed to overleap the stages by which an ordinary competitor has to climb upwards to the prizes of the service. But we might almost safely predict that the number of these favoured beings will long continue to be very small indeed, so strong a prejudice still rules the Anglo-Indian mind, fairly or unfairly, against too ready a resort to native agency in the higher spheres of Indian government. Much of this feeling may no doubt spring from class jealousy or pride of race; but it can also in some measure be justified on grounds of statesmanlike forecast.

Nevertheless there is no disputing the writer's main premiss. The loaves and fishes set apart for the Covenanted Service have decreased and are yearly decreasing. More and more of them are passing into the hands of outsiders dark and white. Every year tends to narrow the field of distinction open to the Covenanted Servant, while new careers are continually turning up for his uncovenanted rival. At this moment the Secretary of State is advertising for a batch of recruits for the new Forest Department, the salaries in which range from three hundred to nineteen hundred a-year. The other day there was a like demand for a fresh supply of civil engineers. To the Covenanted Servant few, if any, new appointments have lately offered themselves in the place of those he has lost or is fast losing. In view of these things, the writer in question would put the dying institution out of its misery at once. Of what use, he argues, to keep up the shadow of a select service, when the substance of it is already gone? Why keep up the farce of competitive examinations in England, if middle-aged natives of India, with "no tincture of European feeling," are free to carry off some of the prizes which competitioners had fondly deemed their special property? We have shown how unlikely these middle-aged natives are to disturb the dreams of the Covenanted for many years to come, and we decline to adopt the writer's sentiments touching the injustice of an arrangement, which will enable an Indian viceroy to offer now and then to some native of tried ability a short cut to the goal of his just ambition. Nor is it easy to see what great harm befalls the Covenanted Servant, so long as a due proportion of the best things in the service remain within his reach. As the number of these grows smaller, a proportional reduction in the yearly supply of recruits for the Covenanted Service will of course take place. To cut off the supply altogether from this moment would to our thinking be a serious mistake. It may sound very well to talk of employing "picked men from the native and European bar, and from the lower ranks of the judiciary" for all judicial purposes, and distributing the administrative work among military officers. The bar might prove in India, as it has been in England, the fittest school for the Bench; and the names of Indian officers who have shone as administrators could hardly be counted on one's fingers. But how many good English barristers would find their way to the East; and how many Nicholsons, Lawrences, or Keatinges will henceforth answer our call, from the ranks of an army whose officers cannot be tempted to qualify themselves for the Indian Staff Corps? Meanwhile the competitive system, with all its practical shortcomings, has not hitherto been found a failure, and does anyhow furnish India with a continuous stream of young men specially trained for administrative work in the land where their best days are to be passed.

THE REJECTED RETIREMENT SCHEMES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your issue of the 10th inst. you have a paragraph from the Mojussilite, "the battle of the schemes for inducing the retirement of the supernumerary field officers is not yet at an end." The "caution" to its military readers not to place any faith in the above is well timed; but on reading the paragraph I am led to consider and ask why should there be an end to the battle. The obvious answer is, because both the schemes propounded by Colonels Norman and Broome ask too much. The bargain is not sufficiently good for the State, and, I think, on the other hand, the arrangements proposed are not in many respects good for the officers.

There is not an officer in the Service who will not I fancy smile at the conclusions come to by the officer on whose calculations the India-office has rejected the schemes of Colonels Norman and Broome. General Hannington's calculations as an actuary may look exceedingly well upon paper, but "the proof of the pudding, &c., &c." and I believe if we were to place ourselves as private individuals in the room of the Indian Home Government, and were required to reduce our expenditure, we should look rather to plain facts than to abstruse calculations. All I know and am certain of is this—that, given twenty lieutenant-colonels on £1,000 a-year in India, each requiring seven years to complete his period of service to enable him to claim £1,120 a-year—on which he will retire and live in England for the rest of his days with increased comfort and peace of mind to lengthen them out beyond the threescore-and-ten—and twenty lieutenant-colonels for those seven years in England on £500 a-year, to wait for the £1,120, there will be a saving by those lieutenant-colonels living in England of £70,000 in seven years, and this for twenty lieutenant-colonels only. Of course we know the objection; that, by remaining in India those seven years instead of in England, sundry casualties by death will save several of the yearly incomes of £1,000 present and the £1,120 in future; and those seven years in India will also tell on the constitution of those who live, so as to considerably shorten the period during which the £1,120 will be enjoyed in the future. Yes, but is this so? do statistics prove the truth of it? My experience, extending over thirty-two years, says no, not among the older officers. I can recal to memory one regiment in which there were but six casualties by death in thirty years, and four of those were ensigns, one lieutenant, and one captain; but, for argument sake, we will concede that of the twenty lieutenant-colonels five become casualties by death in the seven years; there is still the saving of £52,500 in the seven years. But I calculate that, if an offer were made to as many lieutenant-colonels as chose to reside in England (their services to be available if required) on £500 till they were entitled to their colonel's allowances—add, if you like, one or, at most, two years to the period—which would otherwise so entitle them—and I doubt not that, at the smallest computation, there will be a saving to the State in seven years of more than half a million of money by the temporary retirement, on half Indian pay and allowances, of at least one hundred and fifty lieutenant-colonels in the three Presidencies. If you add two years to the time (if passed in England) entitling to colonel's allowances, the saving of Indian pay and the non-payment of colonels' allowances for two years, will effect a saving of nearly a million in nine years.

There are other schemes which could be propounded with advantage to the State in more ways than one. One I should recommend would be to allow so many lieutenant-colonels and majors as desired it, and could be spared from their respective Presidencies, to reside in England on certain allowances—their services to be available in India whenever required—according to length of service; the major's pay being computed from twenty years to twenty-six, and the lieutenant-colonel's from twenty-six to thirty-two. Many would avail themselves of the offer, and, in the event of necessity, there would always be a body of old and experienced officers set up by residing in a cold climate, ready for work, instead of the entire body as now, being enervated by the constant heat, and disgusted with the country and the Service. It may be obtuseness on my part, but it does and always has seemed inexplicable to me that with so many plans of saving money to the State none should be adopted, the only reason apparent being that a number of officers would live more comfortably, and perhaps a little longer, by admitting any of the schemes proposed. It does seem a "cut off nose to spite face," and "dog in the manger" business that they should all be rejected.

I have made a little calculation. I happen to have only one Army List before me, that of Madras, corrected to June 30, 1869. I find by it that there are, or will be by the end of this year, 189 lieutenant-colonels; I should say that 89 of these would willingly reside in England on £500 per annum. Their Indian pay is in round figures £1,000; this would be a saving to the State of say  $90 \times 500$ , or £45,000 per annum for Madras alone. I think we may put down Bengal lieutenant-colonels at 120; Bombay at 60, who would accept the offer. Then we have an immediate annual saving:—

Bengal—£120 × £500 = £60,000 per annum.
 Madras—£90 × £500 = £45,000 do.
 Bombay—£60 × £500 = £30,000 do.

or an immediate actual saving of £135,000 per annum. Allow for not so many accepting the offer as computed, and we will deduct £35,000, which will leave a clear saving of £100,000 per annum, by allowing these officers to live in England counting service for colonel's allowances, which period may be lengthened, to give further advantage to the State, to fourteen years, or rateably according to that portion of the twelve years spent in England. Thus for many lieutenant-colonels who would accept the offer, and who would have ten or twelve years, or even the whole fourteen, to wait for their colonel's allowances, in the course of eleven years, there would be in one officer's pay alone a saving of £5,500 to the State before he could claim colonel's allowances. He must then be at least forty-two—i.e., if he accept the offer immediately on promotion; add fourteen years to this, he will be then fifty-six before he can claim colonel's allowance.

It cannot for a moment be seriously argued, I should imagine, that the gain to the State by deaths or the breaking up of officers' constitutions can possibly in any way balance the enormous saving which I have shown must accrue to the Government if they offered, as I before stated, £500 a-year to so many lieutenant-colonels as chose to remain in England; and the offer might be extended to majors with £300 per annum while in England, by which a further saving to the State would be effected.—I am, Sir, your most obedient servant,

Notices of Books.

First Book of Indian Botany. By D. Oliver, F.R.S., F.L.S., &c. With numerous illustrations. London: Macmillan and Co. 1869.

The want of a useful handbook of Indian Botany has led the Professor of Botany in the London University to reproduce in a separate volume the greater part of his work on "Elementary Botany," altered and accompanied by several new chapters specially devoted to Indian plants. The stout little volume thus compiled will enable the learner at once to master the elements of his study, and to apply his new knowledge to a practical examination of the plants and flowers that meet his eye in any part of India. Professor Oliver has never been in India himself; but the help he has received from so experienced a master of Indian Botany as Dr. Hooker furnishes strong justification for the work before us. It was under Dr. Hooker's direction that he, as keeper of the Kew Herbarium, helped to arrange and classify some fourteen waggon-loads of dried Indian plants, which had been rescued from the cellars of the East India Company. From Dr. Thompson also he has obtained many useful hints. The illustrations—some of which, as in the case of the Lotus, are unnecessarily repeated—form, as they should, a conspicuous feature of the book. The promise suggested by the author's name among botanists seems to be fully realised in his latest work, which, so far as we can discover, contains a well-digested summary of all essential knowledge pertaining to Indian botany, wrought out in accordance with the best principles of scientific arrangement. As a book for the student, who cares to pluck flowers of knowledge from out of a cactus hedge of hard botanic nomenclature, it seems to us very complete. But why should botany, which might be made the most attractive of studies, revel evermore in hard names?

A Manual of the Ancient History of the East, to the Commencement of the Median Wars. By F. Lenormant and E. Chevallier. Vol. I. London: Asher and Co. 1869.

This is the first of two volumes which are now being offered in an English dress by the translator of M. Lenormant's comprehensive Manual. That work, published in Paris a year ago, ran through two editions in a few months, and was further honoured by a prize from the French Academy. Its author has since supervised the present translation, to which he has added so much of new matter that it might almost be regarded as a new work. In many parts it has been rewritten, while to the second volume have been added two new books on the Ancient History of Arabia and India. It thus forms a complete handbook of ancient history, with the one exception of China, an omission defended by the author on the twofold plea of personal incompetency to deal with the subject, and of China's utter isolation from the rest of the world. Against the former plea we say nothing, but with regard to the latter, it might well be argued that the early history of the great Turanian Empire could hardly help throwing some light on "the civilisations which have influenced, even indirectly, our own." Be that as it may however, and incomplete as the book may therefore be from the scientific point of view, what we have is certainly a vast improvement on general histories of an older date. Printed in small but clear type, the five hundred pages of the first volume condense into a readable whole the results of accumulated research into the early history of the Hebrews, Egyptians, Assyrians, and Chaldeans. If the author has not altogether freed himself from the trammels of the old Biblical school of historians, he at any rate pays all proper homage to the discoveries of modern science. The chapters on Assyria and Egypt, for instance, contain the pith of all the new matter contributed by such men as Champollion, Bunsen, Lepsius, Botta, Layard, De Sauley, Rawlinson, Oppert, and M. Lenormant himself. In his renderings of the Mosaic narrative also he gives some play to fair criticism, as when, in treating of the Flood, he transfers the true Ararat from Armenia to "the mountain mass of Little Bokhara and Western Tibet," which culminates in the Belurtagh and the Pamir plateau. Altogether we may hail it as a useful book of reference for "teachers, for senior pupils, and for men of education who desire to keep pace with the advance of European studies." We shall be glad to see the second volume.

Speeches on India. By the Right Hon. J. Bright, M.P., &c. London: Macmillan and Co. 1869.

Five speeches by the greatest of living English orators are sure to be worth reading, as samples of clear, pure, nervous English, glowing with a steady blaze of moral enthusiasm, and pointed with frequent sprits of the raciest humour; whatever the reader may think of the speaker's special fitness to be heard on questions concerning India. The speeches range from June, 1853, to March, 1861. Not a few of the arguments and criticisms contained in them have, at any rate, been justified by the changes which have since taken place in the process of governing India. If some of the speaker's invective bore too hard on the Government of the day, his love of justice showed itself in his avowed refusal to join in turning out Lord Derby's Government on account of Lord Ellenborough's too famous despatch, and in his powerful assault on Lord Palmerston with regard to the mutilated despatches of Sir A. Burnes.

Speech of E. B. Eastwick, Esq., M.P., delivered in the House of Commons, July 9, 1869, on the State of Affairs in Central Asia. London: C. Buck. 1869.

The reprinting of Mr. Eastwick's well-informed speech on Russian progress in Turkistan has taken place almost simultaneously with the disclosure of Russia's alleged views regarding Shere Ali's hereditary claim to the Turkoman province of Balkh. Mr. Eastwick foresees trouble in Kabul from the fact that till thirty years ago Balkh belonged to Bokhara. But that is no reason, he thinks, for a closer alliance on our part with Shere Ali, or for underrating the strength of our position at Peshawar.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

LORD MAYO AND THE CIVIL ENGINEERS.

The Englishman is glad to observe that the Government has taken action with reference to its order on the subject of the Civil Engineers. It remarked the other day, that "it is a case in which Government would act both wisely and generously in explaining its intentions;" and we think that the circular in question is the more creditable to the Governor-General, from the somewhat intemperate manner in which it is understood the Civil Engineers have attempted to extort redress. The circular only states the truth, when it says a commission on work, done or ordered, is considered a legitimate remuneration amongst the profession in England; and that no rule has hitherto existed in the Public Works Code against the receipt of such commission in India. Curiously enough at the very moment that Civil Engineers have been making so loud a clamour at the bare idea of the previous circular being considered necessary, we happen to have learned that a commission of five per cent. has been offered in writing by the manufacturer who is making the iron-work for the Lahore and Jhelum Railway. Of course the honorable and skilful engineer who is at the head of the works has declined such an offer, and no doubt requested that the sum should be deducted from the bills sent in to Government; but the very fact of such an offer having been made is the strongest argument that could have come before the public for the necessity of the Circular. We are certain that the public will be glad to support the Civil Engineers in all legitimate claims. It is a branch of the profession we should like to see extended, and it may be sure that we shall not stand by and see any injustice done to it in favour of officers of the Royal Engineers. But, at the same time, we are equally determined to assist, to the utmost of our ability, in putting down that universal system of corruption which is the bane of the Public Works Department. Again, while we cannot help thinking that the Government order was injudiciously or incautiously worded, we cannot refrain from adding that the Civil Engineers have but little consulted the honour of their profession by the violent opposition they have made to it. Nothing could be more disgraceful than the disclosures made during the inquest on the men killed by the falling of one of the arches at the new High Court. These works are conducted and supervised, not by Royal Engineers, but by members of the Civil branch of the profession. It is not too much to say that the disclosures then made destroyed whatever little confidence the public ever had in the present contract system.

TRADE WITH YARKUND.

The Friend of India thinks that at so early a period only an imperfect estimate can be formed of the dimensions which the trade will assume during the next few months before winter sets in and the mountain roads are closed, but the reports that reach us of the whole road between Yarkund and Kooloo being one continuous line of merchants and their laden beasts of burden, point to an enormous proportionate increase on former years. Up to the beginning of September some Rs. 90,000 worth of goods had been imported into Ladakh from Yarkund, and from the Punjab nearly Rs. 200,000 worth, which was being fast sent on. The merchandise from British territory consisted of English manufactures and Indian produce for Yarkund. The productions of the latter country by the Kooloo route were intended for the Palampore Fair and the Punjab. Besides the ordinary merchandise some six hundred horses and mules have been brought over from Yarkund for sale, and a very large amount of gold and silver. The Yarkundi merchants, and many also of the Hindustanis, are little disposed for traffic in Ladakh itself. The former are nearly all determined to try their luck in Hindustan, and many of the Punjab traders have made up their minds to go to Yarkund, led on by the reports of large profits and good treatment which fell to the lot of some of their brother merchants, Hindu as well as Mahomedan, who last year ventured across the Karakorum mountains to the almost unknown lands beyond. Numerous merchants who never before attempted to trade with Ladakh have this year reached Leh, having heard that duties were lowered, and that the British Power had interposed and assured them protection from robbery and ill-usage. The fame of British justice and generosity has spread through all the chief cities of Turkistan. Many of these merchants have come from Yarkund, Kashgar, and Badakshan, and other important places, and are now for the first time wending their way towards the Punjab. A more convincing proof than this could hardly be desired by the most strenuous opponents of Cashmere mismanagement, of the necessity for British interference in Ladakh. We must not be lulled by the present improved state of affairs into unwatchful security. Let there be the slightest return of former abuses and the rising trade would vanish like a phantom. It behoves our consul or agent in Leh not to relax his vigilance. We all know how little confidence can be placed in Kashmere reforms, and if British protection in Ladakh were withdrawn for one season, the evils complained of in former years would at once reappear in all their magnitude. The merchants at least are fully convinced of this, and often tremble for the future, for the readiness which the Supreme Government last year evinced to break previous pledges and withdraw Dr. Cayley from Ladakh has not tended to give confidence in our good faith. Our influence in Central Asia depends greatly on our apparent position in Kashmere and Ladakh, and we undoubtedly have lost prestige to an incredible degree by our apparent submission to the, to us, ludicrous pretensions of the Maharajah. Now is our opportunity for a departure from the non-intervention policy. The very friendly reception accorded to two English travellers by the Kush Begi of Yarkund, as well as to several Hindustani merchants who last year entered Yarkund, show how strong is the desire of that ruler for our good-will. He tried to come to terms with Russia, and failed. Now he turns to us, certainly in an indirect way, if he has not, as is rumoured, already sent an envoy to ask openly for our friendship.

STATION TALK.

MOOLTAN, Oct. 11.—It seems now to be generally believed that a Durbar in honour of the Duke of Edinburgh will be held in the course of the ensuing cold season at Lahore instead of Agra; but doubtless before this reaches you will have heard more certain information on this point. Major General Rainier, commanding the division, is expected here on the 22nd to make his half-yearly inspection of her Majesty's 109th Regiment. A large flight of locusts passed over this station on the morning of the 6th instant. They came apparently from a northerly direction, and passed on towards the South-West. This is the second flight that has appeared here within the last few months. I hear these insects were seen in countless numbers last month in the district between this and Montgomery, and did much damage. We seem to have jumped into the cold weather with a sudden bound. This morning was really quite cold, and punkahs in barracks have been discontinued accordingly. Have you heard that two regiments of Native Cavalry and five of Infantry are to be broken up immediately, in consequence of the financial pressure? I think you will find that a reduction of this kind will really take place shortly, unless disturbances on the frontier should make it impolitic.

DEHRA DOON, Oct. 15.—So it is settled that a regiment of cavalry is to be located in the Doon between the race course and the old Goorkha lines inclusive. I am truly glad of this. The sooner we withdraw all our European troops from the old holes in the plains, the better. Rusty Sword's ludicrous jealousy of every other plan, even for cavalry in competition with his Jerripani, suggests that his proper signature should be "Crusty Zany." Jerripani is far too low a hill station for European troops, there is no room there for cavalry exercise. Subathoo has been found quite unsuitable. We can have no hill sites under 6,000 feet. I hope to see three thousand Europeans yet in the Dehra Doon, a place preferred all the year round even to the hills by poor men. There is a cool breeze here every night in the year.

HILLS NORTH OF DEYRAH, Oct. 12.—At last, and high time, indeed, have the rains bidden us farewell. The weather is now delicious; a fine, cool bracing air, mornings and evenings very chilly, and fires most agreeable. Natives are already predicting a severe winter; this they always do. It certainly is colder now than I remember it to have been in previous seasons during this month. People are hastening away rapidly—a daily exodus; the place is fast thinning, and many houses are vacated. A grand auction of house property yesterday, belonging to Mr. Greig. I am told the houses separately sold for more than was anticipated, thereby clearly proving that house property is not deteriorating in the hills, as some people wish to make the public believe. Auctions are the order of the day, and lotteries are being drawn as soon as filled. The station staff officer at Landour has not yet been named in succession to Captain Rind, but the likely man is now said to be an officer from her Majesty's 55th, at Chukrata. The next commandant is not yet known; but that must soon be patent. I believe not a soldier will be left up during the winter at the Convalescent Depot. Grain of all kinds selling at famine prices.

MORAR, Oct. 16.—None of your correspondents give news of the changes which are taking place here. General Chamberlain left this some days ago, making over charge of the Political Agency to Captain Mayne, until Colonel Hutchinson's arrival. In the meantime General Chamberlain himself joins Scindia on his travels, having persuaded that Chief to apply to Government for an attaché. I suppose as Scindia has to pay there was not much difficulty in this arrangement; but the position of chaparron to Scindia is thought rather beneath the dignity of a Major General and C.S.I. The Maharajah before he left made a handsome addition to his equipages by purchasing from the late officiating Political Agent his new barouche and pair. In former days Government prohibited these dealings between officers and natives, as such opportunities were frequently seized upon to "stick it on" in pricing the article for disposal. But on this occasion Scindia was let down easily no doubt; and as the consent of the head of the administration was obtained before the bargain was concluded, of course its all right. The great Dusserah festival is just over. The usual display was made in the Lushkur. The adopted heir, a most uninteresting and low-caste looking youth, occupied the position of the absent Maharajah on this occasion, and was "supported" on either hand by the General and the officiating Political Agent. I see in a late letter from Morar that the khurcef crops are stated to have been damaged by the late heavy rains. In the immediate neighbourhood of Gwalior this does not seem to be the case. The bajra fields present a most flourishing appearance just now.

LUKHIMPORE, Oct. 13.—The rainfall this year has been extremely anomalous. In July and August, the proper time for raining, the weather was dry, and we had scarcely a drop; but now, in the middle of October, when people are sick of it, and when it proves highly prejudicial to the crops, we have a superabundance of it. It began to rain on Saturday, the 9th current, at about six A.M., rained the whole day and whole night, and the next day up to eleven A.M., with little or no intermission. At about twelve A.M. the atmosphere cleared away, and we could see the orb of the day once again. On Monday, the 11th inst., the sky again became lowered, and clouds gathered together and we had a fresh fall. The injury which these rains have caused to the houses and crops, both standing and already cut, is great. Several houses at Kherree have come down, and many trees were blown down by strong gusts of wind which blew on Saturday while it was raining. The prospects of the peasants, so brilliant a few days before, have been almost entirely blasted. The labouring poor, who find it exceedingly difficult even now to make both ends meet, behold nothing but actual starvation staring them in the face. This is a sorry and gloomy picture indeed; but it has not been overdrawn I believe. Major Boulderson's furlough for two years has been sanctioned, and he leaves this on the 15th inst. Mr. McMinn, Settlement officer of Barabunkee, who has been appointed to act vice Major Boulderson, has come in and taken charge of his office. Syud Gholam Hyder, extra assistant commissioner, has been transferred to Hurdul for a month, and Pundit Kishen Lal, from Baraitch, is coming in place of Syud Gholam Hyder.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

LADY MAYO.—The Countess of Mayo was to leave Simla for Kusnowlie on the 16th October.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—Sir William Mansfield, it is said, would probably leave Simla about the 5th of November.

MR. G. CAMPBELL.—Although Mr. George Campbell, Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, has signified his intention of returning to India, we understand he will not do so before the expiration of his leave in March next.—Central India Times.

CIVIL.—We are informed that Lieutenant Begge will succeed Mr. Moss as Assistant Secretary to Government, North-Western Provinces, in the Public Works Department; and Lieutenant Pye will be appointed Assistant Secretary in the Railway Department.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—A letter from Allahabad, under date the 17th Oct., states that "the Rev. Mr. Fagan, Military Chaplain at that station, will succeed Mr. Baly, the Civil Chaplain, who has been obliged to go to England on sick leave.

CHOLERA.—In July the cholera appeared in Teheran, the deaths averaging twenty-seven a day; and the Mofussilite suggests that it probably found its way through Afghanistan to Peshawur, and mayhap by the Bolan route to other parts of India.

PREVALENCE OF FEVER.—We hear that with the closing of the hot season nasty fever has shown itself in several quarters throughout this presidency. It would seem as if the year altogether were fated to be an unpleasantly abnormal one—famine, deficit, cholera, a doubling of the income-tax, and fever.—Mofussilite, Oct. 16.

WANTED—A CHILD.—It is not often that we find an advertisement of the following kind, which we take from a late issue of the Delhi Gazette:—"A gentleman in good circumstances is anxious to adopt a girl between the ages of five and nine. An opportunity offers for any person in distress to secure a provision for her child for life.—Address, X. Y. Z., care of Postmaster, Landour."

CENTRAL INDIA.—The Government of India has received intelligence from Bundelkund that cholera is abating throughout the province, and has entirely disappeared from many places. Owing to the late copious falls of rain, the prospects of the ensuing harvest are excellent, especially in Malwa, and there is every ground for anticipating favourable returns of wheat and opium.

A VIRTUOUS ALMSHOUSE.—The Murdhurnint says that "a virtuous almshouse," established upon new principles, is about to be started at Benares. From the next passage we conclude that it will also be triangular. "On one side," says the paper, "Christians will read their services; Mahomedans will call to prayer on another side; while on the third side Hindoos will perform their Poojahs."

LADAKH.—Dr. Cayley reported on the 14th September last that two traders with eight or nine horse-loads of merchandise came into Ladakh by the Changchimm route, by which also they went to Yarkand last year. They spoke very favourably of this route, though they did not find the easiest and most direct line through the valley.

BILLIARDS IN INDIA.—The lovers of billiards—and in this country their name is legion—will now have an opportunity of seeing the game played as it ought to be. Mr. C. Hughes, of London celebrity, who has played several matches with the renowned Roberts and others, has arrived in Calcutta, and will give an exhibition at No. 8, Waterloo-street, on Wednesday evening next, and during the rest of the week.—Englishman, Oct. 18.

POLICE.—The Government of Bengal has desired the Inspector-General of Police to strengthen the frontier police at Sylhet and Cachar before the cold weather sets in. It has been decided to station about two hundred men at the outposts, and also depute from the police in this part of the country an experienced inspector, about fifteen sub-inspectors, forty head constables, and one hundred and eighty constables.—Indian Daily News, Oct. 15.

CHANGE IN THE RELIEF.—We are informed that the A and D batteries of A brigade Royal Artillery will proceed from Meerut to Peshawur, and not to Rawul Pindee and Sealcote as notified; the two batteries from Peshawur, which have suffered severely from sickness during the past season, occupying those stations.—Indian Army Gazette (Simla), Oct. 1.

THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH.—Though there will be no durbar at Agra, it is said to have been decided that the Duke of Edinburgh may, if he pleases, or rather if he cares, see a gathering of chiefs at Lucknow and Lahore, where a force of similar strength to that intended for Agra would be shown him. The chief reception will be at Calcutta; the others, at Delhi, Lucknow, Agra, or Lahore would fall upon the Lieutenant-Governors and the Chief Commissioner.

A THOUGHTFUL MOVE.—Owing to the dearth of provisions in the North-Western Provinces, the Government of India has sanctioned a batta allowance to the subordinate officers attached to the establishment of the superintendent of the operations for the suppression of Dacoity and Thuggee in the North-West. Those drawing salaries above Rs. 50, and not exceeding Rs. 100, will receive Rs. 15 a month, and those below Rs. 50, Rs. 10 per mensem.—Indian Daily News, Oct. 18.

MR. SETON-KARR.—The Mofussilite contradicts the statement that Mr. Seton-Karr has any arrière pensée of returning to India, if he could get some better appointment than that on which he still retains a lien, or that that gentleman waits to see whether the Duke of Argyll will do anything for him at home. "Mr. Seton-Karr, we have reason to know, merely keeps his name on the books till the question of the Covenanted Services Pension Rules, about which a memorial has gone to the India Office, is decided. A decision once given, Mr. Seton-Karr retires for good and all."

SIR D. McLEOD.—We hear from Murree that Sir Donald McLeod and staff, or a large portion thereof, left that place on the 5th instant for Cashmere, and he will travel via Abbottabad, and look in perhaps, or rather look at, the Black Mountain as he advances from Manserah towards the Kishen Gunga and Mozufferabad. He is said to be accompanied by some 400 mules and 1,100 coolies, and it is not easy to conceive how so small a retinue could require so large an accompaniment on so easy a journey into the peaceable territories of a friendly chief.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 14.

THE TURKISH ENVOY TO BOKHARA.—The Turkish vakeel, or envoy to Bokhara, arrived at Umballa by the 3 A.M. train of the 12th October. His Excellency put up at the Railway Hotel, where, as everywhere else in British India, his expenses will, according to the comfortable routine of Oriental diplomacy, be paid by the Government of the allied State he is travelling through. Nothing concerning the objects of the mission can be ascertained with certainty, beyond this that it may fairly be surmised that it has not been undertaken in Russian interests.—Mofussilite.

UNITED BANK OF INDIA.—The shareholders of the United Bank of India at Simla have, in general meeting assembled, confirmed the ad interim dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum declared by the directors. The bank seems to have been progressing very satisfactorily, and the shareholders have given the best possible proof of their satisfaction by passing a resolution to increase the salary of their secretary, Captain Levinge, and of their auditors and accountant. A piece of plate is also to be presented to the retiring chairman of their board of directors, Major Innes, who has from the first taken an active part in the management of the bank's affairs.—Pioneer.

ACT XIV. OF 1869.—A native woman registered under Act XIV. of 1869 committed suicide last week, the reason being, as stated by her servant at the coroner's inquest, that she could not bear to attend the hospital for examination. It would be barbarous to call this a gratifying testimony to the working of the Act, though it shows that the new provisions are likely to diminish the social plague of our Presidency towns, and to divert unfortunates to some other calling. But it may be asked, in the case of this unfortunate woman, what escape from her fallen life was provided for her under the Act? She could read and write, knit and sew. Could not the hospital be supplemented by an industrial penitentiary in each of the Presidency towns specially set apart for the reclamation of such persons?—Friend of India.

MILITARY.—The Eurasian battery at Shillong is to be broken up. This step, however, is no new decision, consequent on the new necessity for retrenchment: it had been long decided on.—Pioneer.—A letter from Murree of the 9th inst. states "that cholera had broken out at Kohat; several cases had occurred both in the city and amongst the troops in camp and cantonment."—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 14.—Colonel Hamilton, 92nd Highlanders, has sent in his papers to sell, and will in a few days proceed to England; Major McBean obtains the step.—Indian Army Gazette (Simla), Oct. 1.—We learn that H.M.'s 104th are still at Cherat, and will not return to Peshawur. H.M.'s 36th will leave for Rawul Pindee as soon as possible.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 16.—The 23rd (or Chamberlain's) Pioneers have received orders to march from Banguotee and occupy ground in the neighbourhood of the Soosul Pass in rear of the valley of Oghee, with a view to keeping open a communication between the force stationed there and the troops at Abbottabad.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 14.

THE CROPS IN ALLAHABAD.—Since the injury to the crops in the Allahabad district, from the rain storms which prevailed from the 5th to the 9th instant, has proved to be less than was apprehended, we are glad to learn from the Lieutenant-Governor's report to the Supreme Government that of all the districts in the North-West, Allahabad has suffered most.—Pioneer, Oct. 18.

THE NEILGHERRY EXHIBITION.

There were exhibited specimens of potatoes grown in the Katie Valley that set a-watering the mouth of every Irishman who saw them, so large and round and full did they look. "Bedad!" said one native of the Emerald Isle while admiring them, "shure its meself who couldn't beave that such praties could be raised out of Ould Oirland, and well roasted now, with half a pound or so of Mrs. M—'s prize butter, faith they'd be a male for Lord Napier hisself." Then there were pounds upon pounds of coffee, in parchment and clean picked, all grown on these hills, and seemingly quite equal to the berry, for which our neighbouring isle of Ceylon is famed. And tea—Neilgherry tea—black, green, congou, hyson, gunpowder—a regular battle of teas—which the tasters were fighting to decide the merits on early this morning, when I strolled for the last time round the Exhibition. Some sheaves of oats were excellent, full grained, and numerous—and some potato oats, grown for fodder for cattle, by, I believe, a Mr. Phillips, of Kotagherry, ought to be more extensively cultivated, such rich and fattening food does it make. The wheat was good—but the barley better—and one kind particularly, said to weigh fifty-four pounds to the bushel, and which I suppose is large, though I confess to know nothing about it—attracted general attention and commendation from connoisseurs. There was every species almost of native grain exposed, raggy, koral, varagu, &c., but yet I am led to understand that these productions have neither been as extensive, nor as good as they should have been. Clover and lucerne, and other green meat for horses, were not wanting in this section of the Exhibition, where also glistening in a basket were some enormous leeks, as gladdening to Taffy the Welchman as were the "murphies" just now to Pat the Emerald; and lying on the floor were some Swedish turnips of the hugest size, but which appeared spongy—and were flavourless. A small quantity of arrow-root—and a few pods of cocoa (Theobroma cocoa), grown at Burliar, some way down the Coonoor ghat, both seemed to me of excellent quality.

In one of the small rooms to the left of the building there was set out a collection of dyes from local materials, which delighted every one, and I saw the eyes of many a lady sparkle as she gazed on the brightness and freshness of the colours with which yarns and woven fabric had been stained. These dyes were obtained from cinchona alkaloids, and from the common berberry, and were named Chinoline red, Chinoline violet, Chinoline blue, and berlerine, the latter being of a yellow colour. They came from the laboratory of Mr. Broughton, who has elicited these valuable colouring materials from the refuse of his retorts while extracting quinine from the various cinchona barks. Close by the dyes were some splendid and well crystallised chemicals, got also from local material, jalapine from the jalap root—carbolic acid, quinine and its salts from the barks acclimatised hereabouts, theine from Neilgherry tea, caffeine from Neilgherry coffee, citric acid from Maltese limes also made to flourish on these hills, and fine specimens of which fruit were lying close by their product; Salicylic acid, and a fiery alcohol distilled from a common lichen, a bundle of which was touching almost the still in which the process of distillation was then going on. On a shelf in this room were laid out a large collection of snakes preserved in spirits, on which "horrid things" the ladies who had admired the dyes came to look and shudder. The handicraft and skilled labour of some of the soldiers of the depot at Wellington has come out well in some light drawing-room and boudoir furniture.

The series of prize photographs which Mr. Bourne, of Calcutta, had made and exhibited of the scenery of the Neilgherries was truly magnificent, and visitors were never tired of gazing on them; so too on some beautiful drawings of Colonel Hamilton, which were in the same room—and gained a special prize also.

There were in the centre division of the Exhibition many specimens of fibre, and textile material, carved ornamental work in ivory, and silver jewellery exhibited by the Travancore Government, some rare kinds of China ware, some Burmese ornaments, in fact a host of things, which a catalogue alone could set forth. Then, again, there were models of machinery, and models of police lines, planters' bungalows, and other useful buildings. Steel implements and weapons, tools, horse-shoes, locks, and sticks, canes, a thousand other articles were not wanting to fill even to repletion this section of the show. Besides this, Mr. Honeywell exhibited his Neilgherry beer brewed at Aravunghat on the road to Coonoor; some hard working baker of that town sent a loaf as big as a mountain, and as its accompaniment lay alongside and around it, bottles and jars of jams and jellies made from the hill fruits.—Madras Times Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY.—THE 45TH REGIMENT.—The two companies of H.M.'s 45th Regiment, "Sherwood Foresters," who were removed to the Red Hills in consequence of the late outbreak of cholera in the corps at the Fort, have received orders from the military authorities to return to their garrison quarters on Friday, the 15th instant.—Times, October 13.

A REASONABLE QUESTION.—Sir Adam Bittlestone made a remark at the dinner at Ootacamund, on Saturday last, which points to a disgrace in all our public convivialities. Why should the ladies have sat on the platform in Misquith's Hall, watching the members of the stronger sex enjoying themselves? Would it not have been better and pleasanter if the ladies had been seated at the tables? We think so.—Athenæum, October 13.

THE CASE OF MR. HALL, OF THE MADRAS C.S.—With reference to Mr. Hall's case, the Ceylon Observer believes it is certain "that the fullest particulars, including the result of a post mortem examination, have been furnished by this Government to that of Madras. The reason why the official report has not been published in the Ceylon papers is doubtless to be found in the fact that the conduct of a medical practitioner, who is not strictly a servant of Government, is gravely discussed. Not that we believe the report, when published, as it is sure to be in Madras, will show that any treatment in Ceylon would have saved poor Mr. Hall's life; he was a doomed man before he landed, the brain being in a state of fatal inflammation. But that does not excuse the sad neglect of the medical practitioner, who ought either to have accompanied the patient to the hospital, or at least furnished the men who took him, and who were strangers, with a note. The fault of the Colonial Assistant Surgeon in charge was acting too strictly on rules which were intended to prevent abuses."

DEATH OF BRIGADIER-GENERAL G. G. MACDONELL.—The Madras Times of the 18th October announces the death at the presidency early the previous morning, from apoplexy, of Brigadier-general G. G. Macdonell, commanding Northern District. General Macdonell only arrived at Madras by the steamer Busheer on Wednesday, the 13th October. He entered the Service in January, 1826, and in April last was appointed Brigadier-general of the second-class and to the command of the Southern District. Only a little more than two months ago, on the 12th of August, he was promoted to the first-class, and transferred to the Northern District. The late general was present with the force that marched from Bangalore on the 8th April, 1857, to quell the insurrection in Canara, was employed in the suppression of the Mutiny in Bengal 1857-58-59, commanded the field detachment that proceeded from Dornadah to Chota Nagpore to subdue the insurgents, defeated the rebels in an engagement on the 22nd January, 1858, capturing four small field-pieces, totally routing the enemy, and killing their leader. Served with the force under Major-general Whitlock, K.C.B., in Bundicound, and commanded the infantry detachment that proceeded in March, 1859, under Brigadier Faily against Rannust Singh.

STATION TALK.

BARODA, Oct. 17.—The Guicowar's grand Dussera procession came off on the 14th inst. with its usual barbaric show and pomp. The crowds were immense; many Europeans were also present from out-stations; it was a striking scene, especially to strangers. The whole of the Guicowar's European officers (eighteen I believe in number) were in cocked hats, as also were a certain proportion of the native officers; the general, colonel, and major were on elephants. The British troops were present also with the resident and staff. The usual salute was fired. Yesterday evening, while in the down train, I noticed myriads of locusts coming north—i.e., from Broach towards Baroda, at Kurgun station; they obscured the daylight, and were fast spreading over the fields of bajree, cotton, &c. Great fears prevail of a coming famine, but the bunnias are jubilant.

SURAT, Oct. 19.—For years past the B. B. and C. I. Railway Company have paid their servants liberally; now it would appear they are determined, and, we believe, have commenced not only to reduce the number of their servants but the salaries of those they retain. The emolument of the medical attendant at Ambrolee has, we believe, been reduced by half; the percentage is, undoubtedly very high, and the measure a severe one, considering that he joined the service in 1857. The officers of the Guicowar's service intend shortly giving a ball, under the patronage of H.H. the Guicowar; invitations are already out. Several of the friends and relatives of the officers have accepted invitations. Surat, this once neglected city, is now entirely changed; fancy new roads, clock tower, Hope's Circle, Municipal Park, and other numerous improvements. Why one who has not seen Surat for some five years would be astonished now. Mr. Hope, our indefatigable collector, deserves the thanks of the Surat community. It is currently rumoured that he is shortly to leave this city, and we hope the rumour will prove false for the sake of the city. The weather has changed for the better; the mornings and evenings are very cool and pleasant; rain has ceased, and the cold weather has fairly set in.

MALWA, Oct. 15.—The Marwarree exodus, which slackened somewhat during the rains, has now set in again as strong as ever, and judging from the stream of people passing through, it would appear as if the whole population was bent on clearing out of the doomed land. The mortality amongst them, I regret to say, continues very great; the roads are strewn with their bodies and in the towns of Mundisore, Jourah, and Rutlam the dead may be seen lying about the public roads in every stage of decomposition; and there they lie until the stench from them becomes too great to be borne with any longer, when the sweeper drags them away and burys them or throws them into the nearest nullah. A small sum is allowed by the Native States for burying the dead, but in many instances it is appropriated by the sepoys, whose duty it is to see this done. The poor people experience no difficulty in disposing of their children, the young girls being generally purchased by the Mahonadas for their zenanas, while the Hindoos give the preference to the boys. The Durbar authorities take charge of most of the orphans who are employed about their courts as slaves, a certain number being allotted to each member of the Rajah's family. The Rajah of Dhar, I am glad to say, has recovered from his late serious illness, and I understand, amongst other charitable devotions he has expressed a wish to contribute Rs. 10,000 towards the relief of the Marwarrees. The rain has entirely cleared off, and there is every indication of the cold weather setting in early this season, as the mornings are already beginning to feel sharp and chilly.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIR R. TEMPLE.—Sir Richard Temple was expected to arrive at Bombay on his return from England by the mail steamer due on the 7th November.

THE RAJAH OF KOLAPOOR.—We hear that, as a part of his general education before taking the reins of government, the Maharajah of Kolapoor is likely to make a trip to England. He will probably start in March next.—Indu Prakash.

A CURIOUS STORY.—A Bombay paper hears there is a tigress with two cubs roaming about the village of Coonditin, about three miles from Coorla. She was seen several times on Sunday, and early in the morning a Portuguese saw the cubs playing on the road, and thinking they were dogs, went after them with a stick, when the mother sprung upon him, and wounded him severely on the head, arm, and breast; having contented herself with knocking him down, the tigress went to look after her cubs and the Portuguese escaped. There is no European anywhere near, and as might be supposed the natives are afraid to go after the beast.

NEWS FROM PERSIA.—The Government of India has received intelligence from Persia that cholera has again broken out in Teheran and the adjoining villages. During the first week in July the deaths by this disease had increased from eight to twenty-seven a day. It is also reported that the silk crop, which is the great staple in the Persian province of Ghilan, has almost entirely failed, owing to a disease amongst the silk-worms. Last year there appears to have been a great deficiency in the crop, but this year not more than 1,500 ballots of 75lbs. each will be available for exportation, whereas in former seasons the average quantity exported has been 20,000 ballots, valued at about £1,340,000.

MILITARY.—It is reported that Majors Holland and Horg are expected out about the same time as Major Campbell. Major Holland will assume the Deputy Quartermaster generalship at army headquarters, and Colonel Bagrie, who now officiates for this officer, will have to revert to Bombay.—Our Paper, Oct. 12.—We regret to learn that Major R. R. Gillespie, of the 106th Regiment, who lately arrived from Umballa on leave, is ill, and has therefore been recommended by his medical adviser to remain in Kurrachee until the end of next month.—Sind News, Oct. 14.—The statement that Colonel Kennedy is going home on a two years' furlough is incorrect. Colonel Kennedy intends to run home on three months' privilege leave, but it is not certain when he will depart.—Bombay Gazette.

THE LOCUSTS.—We are glad to have assurances from Ahmedabad, dated the 15th inst., that the cotton crops around Veerungam, Wudhwan, Limree, and Dholerah have not been injured by the locusts, and that the crops are very promising. A correspondent, writing to a contemporary from Nusserebad on the 10th inst., describes the passage of the myriads over that station:—"An immense flight of locusts, coming apparently from the S.E. reached this camp on Friday afternoon (8½ inst.) about four o'clock, and continued to pour over in darkening masses until sunset. Myriads attached themselves to the trees, shrubs, and grass. Next morning, shortly after sunrise, the invasion recommenced, and continued with short intermission till nearly sunset. Many of the trees have been completely denuded of leaves, and some of the compounds present their arid hot-weather appearance."—Times of India.

MAZAGON LAND AND RECLAMATION COMPANY.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company was held in the offices of Messrs. Ritchie, Stewart and Co., on Wednesday, October 20, Mr. J. S. Hurrell in the chair, for the purpose of confirming the following resolution passed at a meeting of the shareholders on the 1st instant:—"That the liquidators of the company be, and they hereby are authorised to transfer and sell the lands, houses, hereditaments, movable and immovable, and all other assets, rights, business, effects, and good-will of the Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company, Limited, to a new company, to be called the 'Mazagon Land Company, Limited,' and to receive in compensation for each transfer and sale 2,000 fully paid-up shares, of the nominal value of Rs. 2,000 each, in such last mentioned company, such company undertaking to pay and discharge all debts, liabilities, either contingent or existing, and engagements, of the Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company, Limited, and to carry out and perform the agreements, leases, and obligations of the said Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company, Limited." Mr. Cleveland, who represented a number of shareholders who are very much opposed to any attempt to get this resolution confirmed, said that to his mind, as a lawyer, this was a resolution which never can be legally passed. They could not, he contended, sell the lands, houses, &c., of the company to an embryo company, and there was really no company in existence yet to whom they could sell. Mr. Cleveland then submitted to this meeting that the best thing that could be done was to adjourn it and get the new articles of association drawn out, and then they should see who were to be the new shareholders and what would be the articles under which they would work. He then proposed—"That this meeting be adjourned for one month." Mr. Moteeram Bhuggoobhoy said he would second Mr. Cleveland's motion. The chairman said that it was at the express wish of the shareholders that the directors had taken steps to form a new company, for the directors themselves certainly had no desire to do so. He, for his part, did not care about the new company—in fact he rather objected to it, and he would not have gone in for it at all had it not been that the shareholders almost unanimously expressed a wish that there should be a new company formed with shares fully paid up, so that the shares would stand better in the market than at present with the large liability still on them. After some further discussion, the question was put to the meeting, when three shareholders voted for Mr. Cleveland's amendment, and about six or seven against it. The original proposition was then put and carried without dissent.

NON-PURCHASE REGIMENTS OF THE LINE—SUPERNUMERARIES.

No. 1,007.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secy. of State for India is published for general information:—

Military.—No. 224.

India Office, London, Aug. 25, 1869.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—I transmit, for the information of your lordship, a copy of a correspondence which has taken place respecting the measures about to be adopted for the reduction of the establishment of the non-purchase regiments of the line whilst serving in this country. [From Horse Guards, April 14, 1869, to Horse Guards, May 18 (323u). To War Office, May 18 (495w), from War Office, July 24 (Ref. No. 5,076).]

2. Your Lordship will observe that it has been decided that, whether there may be supernumeraries or not, promotion shall be given in the room of every officer who may retire when the interests of any officers, late of the Indian Army, would suffer by absorption. But in the case of a death or a casualty, such as that caused by the supersession of an officer, the rule of allowing only one vacancy in two to go in the corps which is adopted in the reduction of purchase regiments will be applied also to the new line regiments.

SMALL CAUSE COURT, RANGOON.

Simla, Oct. 2.—No. 1,467.—Under Section 3 of Act XI. of 1865 the Governor-general in Council is pleased to sanction the establishment of a Court of Small Causes in the City of Rangoon, for the hearing of suits cognisable by such courts under the provisions of the said Act.

Under Section 7, the jurisdiction of the said court is extended, in suits of the nature described in Section 6, to an amount not exceeding one thousand rupees. The territorial jurisdiction of the court will be co-extensive with that of the existing Small Cause Court jurisdiction of the Recorder's Court at Rangoon.

THE SURVEY DEPARTMENT.

Oct. 5.—The Governor-general in Council is pleased to declare that the alterations in the designations of the officers of various grades in the several branches of the Survey Department, which were published in notification No. 268, dated Aug. 20, 1869, are applicable to the departments of the Great Trigonometrical and Topographical Surveys of India, and to the Revenue Survey Department of the Bengal Presidency.

FURLOUGH—CASE OF CAPT. J. LOW.

Military Department, Fort William, Sept. 24.

Office memorandum from Major-gen. H. W. Norman, c.s., Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the Foreign Department (No. 223, dated Simla, Sept. 11).

The secretary in the mil. dept. has the honour to forward, for disposal in the foreign dept., the accompanying application, in original, for leave for Capt. J. Low, asst. comr., Roy Bareilly, for six weeks, in extension of privilege leave (received with asst. adjt. gen.'s memorandum No. 1,816E, dated Sept. 8).

2. Capt. Low asks for the leave as furlough under the new rules of 1868; such leave up to three months, though counting as furlough, may be given by the local Government or the department of the Government of India under which the officer is serving, without any prior reference to the C. in C. or the military dept. The only communication necessary to be made to the mil. dept. is that, in all cases in which such leave is granted, a copy of the order giving the leave shall be forwarded to the office in Calcutta for record.

3. Officers applying for short furlough, as above, to local Governments, must, of course, satisfy the authorities that they have furlough to their credit.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

Simla, Oct. 6.—No. 3,843.—Read the undermentioned papers:—

Resolution No. 57, passed on Jan. 2, 1868, deciding "that, when an officer is placed in charge of the current duties of a judicial office, and the charge, in the opinion of the Local Government, entails a substantial increase of responsibility as well as some additional work, he shall be permitted to draw one-half of the deputation allowance which he would have received had he been appointed to officiate in the office concerned."

Resolution No. 2,905, passed on Aug. 27 last, deciding that, in calculating half-acting allowance under the rule of Jan. 2, 1868, the proviso in the notification of this department, No. 531, dated June 16, 1868, that the minimum of acting allowance must be two-thirds of the difference between the salaries of the substantive and acting appointments of the officer concerned, shall be disregarded.

Endorsement from the home department, No. 612, dated Aug. 30 last, transferring for disposal a letter from the Government of the Punjab, soliciting that the operation of the rule of Jan. 2, 1868, may be extended to the cases of officers carrying on the current duties of offices in the police department.

Resolution.—The Governor-general in Council is pleased to sanction the extension of the operation of the rules of Jan. 2, 1868, and Aug. 27, 1869, to the cases of officers placed in charge of the current duties of offices in the police department.

STUDENTSHIPS—MADRAS UNIVERSITY.

Simla, Sept. 14.—Read a memorandum from the Home Dept., No. 429, dated Aug. 12, 1869, giving cover to a statement of fresh charges sanctioned by the Govt. of Madras during the month of May last, in which a charge for three bachelor studentships in the Madras University of the value of Rs. 70 each per mensem has been sanctioned.

Observations.—H.E. in Council observes that the charge which has been permanently sanctioned by the Govt. of Madras is a considerable one, and should have received the previous sanction of the Supreme Govt.

2. Even the provisional sanction of permanent charges by local Governments appears to the Gov. gen. in Council inconsistent with the financial control which it is necessary to reserve to the Supreme Government. H.E. in Council therefore desires that local Governments may be informed that no sanction to charges of a permanent nature must in future be given without the previous consent of the Supreme Government.

3. The proposal of the Home Department, that sanction should not be accorded to the arrangement further than to express the willingness of the Government of India to assign a student-ship on the plan proposed for every one such student-ship, not exceeding three in number, for which funds may be supplied by private liberality, is approved.

POLITICAL.—The designation of the officer who is entrusted with the political duties in Serohi is changed from "political superintendent" to "political assistant."

PUBLIC WORKS, HYDERABAD.—The following persons, employed in Hyderabad, are permanently appointed to the public works department with effect from the dates specified:—Sergeants Cardwell, McCallum, and Pearce, overseers, 1st grade, Oct. 1, 1868; Mr. Rose, overseer, 2nd grade, Sept. 12. Corporal Williamson and Private Jackson, probationary overseers, 1st grade, Central Provinces, are permanently appointed to the public works department (October).

ARRIVALS FROM EUROPE.—The undermentioned officers have reported their return from England:—Lieut. C. J. Walter, of the Bengal staff corps, quartermaster, 8th regiment of N.I.; date of arrival at Bombay, Sept. 11. Major F. N. Miles, of the Bengal staff corps, district superintendent of police, 2nd grade, Malda—date of arrival at Bombay, Sept. 17.

ACCOUNTANTS.—The undermentioned accountants are transferred to the office of the Accountant-general, Public Works Department (October 6):—Mr. Beaume, 2nd grade, Punjab; Mr. Harold, 2nd grade, North-Western Provinces; Mr. Ten Broeke, 3rd grade, North-Western Provinces; and Mr. Wood, 3rd grade, Central Provinces.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—Lieut. Ross, R.E., assistant engineer, 1st grade, officiating assistant secretary to Government, N.W. provinces, irrigation branch, passed the department at standard examination laid down in Chapter 11, Section 4, paragraph 23 of the Code as modified by S.O. No. 22 of 1867, on Sept. 22.

CLAIMS TO MEDALS.—As the submission of unauthorised medal claims causes much unnecessary trouble and correspondence, the C. in C. desires that transmitting authorities will be good enough to refrain from forwarding claims to the North-West frontier medal for services other than those specified in G.O.C.C. dated Aug. 16 last. Transmitting officers and their staff will closely scrutinise these rolls, and satisfy themselves that the documents are in form, and that no claims but those coming strictly within the scope of the G.O.C.C. cited are forwarded to head quarters. The rolls should be prepared and submitted in duplicate.

CANTEENS.—In continuation of G.O. No. 259 of 1869 and with advertence to section 5 of the Canteen Rules, Standing Orders of 1865, no more than one quart of malt liquor daily is over to be drawn for any one individual from the Canteen, except for the players on the occasion of a cricket match or any similar amusement, when one pint extra may be issued, but only under the sanction of the commanding officer of the regiment, and provided the total allowed to the regiment for that day's issue be not exceeded thereby. Under no other plea must extra malt liquor ever be issued. The issue of ale or porter at the dinner hour must be restricted to one pint, for each man drinking it at that meal, and that quantity is invariably to be the limit of any one issue.

COURTS MARTIAL.—The C. in C. has observed that many summary trials have been annulled in consequence of the neglect of commanding officers to make oath or affirmation, as required by the 127th Article of War; the result being a defeat of justice, and the escape of offenders from punishment. The 127th Article of War is so plain in its directions that its non-observance must be attributable to carelessness. Another point on which H.E. had recently occasion to remark, is that commanding officers have tried charges of theft without reference to superior authority and without any apparent necessity for a summary trial, in disregard of the instructions of Article 93. The C. in C. expects that commanding officers will make themselves better acquainted with the powers entrusted to them by the Articles of War, and the forms of procedure enjoined by the Articles.

CIVIL LEAVE.—The following civil servants, &c., obtained furlough to Europe and leave of absence on m.c., under the Rules of 1868, unless otherwise specified, in October:—Mr. H. J. Reynolds, officiating magistrate and collector of Midnapore, is allowed furlough for two years, together with subsidiary leave for a period not exceeding thirty days. Mr. D. C. Gordon, deputy controller of public works accounts, Punjab, is allowed twelve months' leave, with effect from Nov. 1; Mr. Gordon is also allowed one month's preparatory leave, with effect from Oct. 1. Mr. R. Waddington, district superintendent of police at Azimgurh, was a passenger on board the Mongolia, which was left by the pilot at sea on Sept. 13. Lieut. col. Hutchinson, political agent at Gwalior, is granted privilege leave of absence for thirty days, in continuation of the time allowed for joining his substantive appointment at Gwalior from Oodeypore, where he has been officiating as political agent. Mr. W. N. Toulmin, an assistant superintendent of the 1st grade in the telegraph department, has been granted by the Secretary of State four months' leave of absence, in extension. Mr. T. H. Willson, executive engineer, 1st division, Lahore and Peshawar Road, is allowed privilege leave for one month and six days, from Oct. 9. The leave granted to Mr. L. Bean, executive engineer, 3rd division, Lahore and Peshawar Road, is extended to 4½ months. The leave granted to Mr. H. W. Alexander, magistrate and collector of Shahabad, is cancelled. Mr. C. W. Wilmot, of the uncovenanted civil service, reported his departure from India on board the Meiam, on Sept. 20. Mr. H. L. Dampier, secretary to the Government of Bengal, in revenue and general departments, is permitted to avail himself, from the date of his departure from India, of the furlough which was granted to him in orders of July 5 last. Mr. G. H. Blyth, revenue surveyor, third grade, second division, Lower Provinces, for three months, from such date in November as he may avail himself of the indulgence. Mr. T. Weldon, district superintendent of police, Durrung, for one month. The leave granted to Mr. W. M. Tidy, officiating joint magistrate of Saharunpore, will have effect from Oct. 1, or subsequent date. Capt. J. Miller, 3rd squadron officer 1st regt. Central India horse, is granted privilege leave for sixty days, from Oct. 15. One month's privilege leave is granted to Mr. W. Jacob, officiating conservator of forests, Central Provinces, from Oct. 16. One month's privilege leave is granted to Major R. Cadell, district superintendent of police, Futtelghurh, with effect from Sept. 15. Mr. G. Stratford, assistant superintendent of police, Jessore, is allowed three months' privilege leave, from Sept. 29. Mr. J. E. A. Eyre, deputy magistrate and deputy collector of City Moorshedabad, has three months' leave. Dr. T. Murray, civil surgeon of Ajmere, is granted two months' privilege leave, with reference to the orders of the Govt. of India, dated Jan. 22 last, with effect from Nov. 25. Mr. C. Belli, civil and sessions judge of Rajshayhe, is allowed the usual subsidiary leave from Sept. 28, to enable him to rejoin his appointment.

EDUCATION.—The undermentioned gentlemen are appointed to be members of the Educational Committee of the Jaloun district:—Capt. Chatterton, officiating assistant commissioner; Mr. Innes, officiating extra assistant commissioner.

SOLDIERS' PENSIONS.—The undermentioned out-pensioners of the Royal Hospital at Chelsea having been permitted to reside and draw their stipends in India, payment of pension is to be made and charged accordingly:—Sergeant Lynch, late of the 104th foot; rate of pension per diem, 2s. (two shillings), from the date he ceases to receive regimental pay or allowance. Sergeant Bond, late of the 19th brigade R.A.; rate of pension per diem, 2s. (two shillings), from the date he ceases to receive regimental pay or allowance. Trumpet-major Shelvington, late of the 22nd brigade R.A.; rate of pension per diem, 2s. ### GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

FAMILIES OF UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS.

Fort St. George, Sept. 21.—The following circular from the Govt. of India, Public Works Dept. (Establishment), dated Simla, Aug. 10, No. 63, is published for general information:—

One or two cases have recently occurred where the families of uncovenanted servants in the Public Works Department who have died have been left unprovided for, and in one instance the widow of a civil engineer lately arrived from England has declared that her husband and other civil engineers similarly situated had been in entire ignorance of the existence of the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund; I am accordingly directed to request that uncovenanted servants in the Public Works Department, Madras, may be informed that there is such a fund, and that all rules, &c., regarding the institution may be obtained at the office of the secretary to the fund in Calcutta.

2. It should be understood that this fund is not guaranteed by the Government of India, and the only connection between it and the Government is, that the latter has undertaken to pay six per cent. per annum on all sums deposited by the fund to the account of Government in the Bank of Bengal. The amount so paid by Government in 1867-68 was Rs. 1,71,773. The directors must all be subscribers to the fund. The Governor-general of India is ex-officio patron. In all other essential points the fund is on the footing of the pension branch of an ordinary insurance company.

3. All uncovenanted officers must understand that if they neglect to provide for their families they must not expect the Government to do so after their death.—By order of the Governor in Council,

R. A. DALYELL, Acting Secy. to Govt.

REGIMENTAL SCHOOLS.

Bombay Castle, Oct. 2.—No. 677.—The following extract from a letter from the Government of India, military department, to the adjutant general in Bengal, together with the order by H.E. the C. in C. in India therein quoted, is published for general information:—

"I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of H.E. the C. in O., that the Right Hon. the Governor general in Council has been pleased to extend the provisions of G.G.O. No. 26, dated Jan. 30, 1868, to wings of British regiments of infantry detached from regimental head quarters for considerable periods, such as when, as in this case, the wings garrisoning two separate stations may probably be apart for a year or two.

"2. H.E. in Council does not consider the provision of a moonshee necessary during the merely temporary detachment of wings as occasionally happens during the cold season.

"Adjutant gen.'s Office, Head Qrs., Calcutta, Jan. 30, 1868.

"No. 26.—Schools—Moonshee.

"To prevent misunderstanding and references to army head quarters, it is notified, for the information and guidance of officers concerned, that the orders (S.O. Queen's troops, page 24 of 1862; Adjutant general's Circular, Feb. 15, 1865, page 22, S.O.) discontinuing school fees do not apply to the fees for Hindoostance classes, which are still leviable under para. 3, Sect. LVII. of the military regulations.

"2. It is also notified that a moonshee is allowed for two or more batteries of artillery stationed together, on the following rates of monthly pay:—When the number of men attending the Hindoostance class is fifteen or more, Rs. 30; when the number averages ten, Rs. 20.

"But whenever, owing to a temporary reduction in the strength of the artillery at a station, the number attending the class may fall short of ten, the moonshee may still be retained, his pay (Rs. 20) being passed on the production of an explanatory certificate.

Official Papers.

JURISDICTION OF THE AGROV VALLEY.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

Simla, Oct. 4.—No. 10.—In exercise of the power conferred upon him by the Indian Councils Act, 1861, section 23, H.E. the Governor-general is pleased to make and promulgate the following ordinance:—

1. Save as hereinafter provided, the territory known as the Agrov Valley is hereby removed from the jurisdiction of the Courts of Civil and Criminal Judicature, and from the control of the offices of revenue constituted by the Rules, Regulations, and Acts in force in the territories under the control of the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, as well as from the law prescribed for the said courts and offices by the Rules, Regulations, and Acts aforesaid; and no Act hereafter passed by the council of the Governor-general for making laws and regulations shall be deemed to extend to any part of the said territory, unless the same be specially named therein.

2. The administration of civil and criminal justice within the said territory, and the superintendence of the settlement and realisation of the public revenue, and of all matters relating to the peace and good government of the same territory and to rent payable therein, are hereby vested in such officers as the said Lieutenant-governor may, for the purpose of tribunals of first instance or of reference and appeal, from time to time appoint.

The officers so appointed shall, in the matter of the administration and superintendence aforesaid, be subject to the direction and control of the said Lieutenant-governor, and be guided by such instructions as he may from time to time issue.

3. Any person liable to be imprisoned in any civil or criminal jail, or to be transported beyond sea under any order or sentence passed by any officer or court empowered as provided in this ordinance, may be imprisoned in any civil or criminal jail, or transported to any place which the said Lieutenant-governor may direct.

4. The said Lieutenant-governor may from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette, extend to the said territory any law, or any portion of any law, now in force in the other territories subject to his Government, or which may hereafter be enacted by the Council of the Governor-general for the purpose of making laws and regulations; and may, on making such extension, direct by whom any powers or duties incident to the provisions so extended shall be exercised or performed, and make any order which he shall deem requisite for carrying such provisions into operation.

5. Whenever a question arises whether any place falls within the boundary of the said territory, such officer as the said Lieutenant-governor shall from time to time appoint may consider and determine on which side of the boundary such place may lie, and the order made thereon by such officer shall be final.

6. For the purposes of this ordinance, the said territory shall be deemed to include such portions of the districts of Hazara, Attock, and Rawal Pindi as the said Lieutenant-governor shall from time to time appoint in this behalf.

(Signed) MAYO, Viceroy and Governor-general.
 WHITLEY STOKES, Secy. to the Council of the Gov. gen.
 for making Laws and Regulations.

THE SALT TAX.

An Ordinance to Enhance the Duty on Salt in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay.

No. 11. Whereas the financial condition of British India requires an immediate enhancement of the price of salt manufactured and sold in the Presidency of Fort St. George and of the duty leviable on salt manufactured in or imported into the Presidency of Bombay; and whereas, pending the re-assembly in Calcutta of the Council of the Governor general for the purpose of making laws and regulations, it is expedient that such enhancement should be effected by an ordinance under section 23 of the Indian Councils Act, 1861; in exercise of the power conferred upon him by the said section, his Excellency the Governor general is pleased to make and promulgate the following ordinance:—

1. Notwithstanding anything contained in Act No. XIX. of 1866 (to enhance the price of salt manufactured and sold under the orders of the Government of the Presidency of Fort St. George in Council), section 1, and in Act No. VII. of 1861 (to empower the Governor general in Council to increase the rate of duty leviable on salt manufactured in or imported into any part of the Presidency of Bombay), section 2, the price to be paid to the local Government for salt manufactured and sold under the orders of the Governor of the Presidency of Fort St. George in Council for consumption within the territories subordinate to that Presidency shall be two rupees for every three thousand two hundred tolas weight of salt; and an excise duty of one rupee and thirteen annas per maund shall be levied on salt manufactured in, and a Customs duty of one rupee and thirteen annas per maund shall be levied on salt imported either by sea or by land into any part of the Presidency of Bombay.

2. Nothing hereinbefore contained shall affect any duty now leviable on salt in the province of Scinde.

3. So far as it relates to the Presidency of Fort St. George, this ordinance shall be read with and taken as part of Act No. VI. of 1844 (for abolishing the levy of transit or inland customs duties, for revising the duties on imports and exports by sea, and for determining the price at which salt shall be sold for home consumption within the territories subject to the Government of Fort St. George).

(Signed) MAYO, Viceroy and Governor-general.

Dated the 4th day of October, 1869.

WHITLEY STOKES, Sec. to the Council of the Gov. gen. for making Laws and Regulations.

THE ALBERT LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

Vice-Chancellor James attended at Chambers on Nov. 9, to hear an application for the reconstruction of the Albert Life Assurance Company. On the former occasion two applications were made to appoint a representative or a committee of policy-holders, to communicate with the official liquidators in considering a scheme of reconstruction. Messrs. Brandon applied for a paid representative, supported by policy-holders to £400,000, and Messrs. Mackenzie, on the part of policy-holders to £2,000,000, asked for a committee to be recognised in the proceedings, and they would work without payment. The Vice-Chancellor declined an appointment, as the policy-holders were represented by the official liquidators. A scheme for reconstruction was mentioned, and Mr. C. E. Lewis (Lewis, Munns, and Co.) suggested an adjournment, as the policy-holders were about to meet to consider the subject, and the proposal would then come before the Court in a proper shape for adoption. The case stood adjourned until Nov. 9, when Mr. Lewis informed the learned judge that the policy-holders had met and were to meet again. He therefore wished for a further adjournment. The Vice-Chancellor acquiesced, and the application accordingly stood over until the policy-holders had come to a determination on the subject.

A meeting of representatives of the London and provincial committees of policy-holders in the Albert Life Assurance Company has been held, and a scheme submitted by the official liquidators, under which, it is stated, policy-holders in the Albert can obtain new policies in an old-established office, on equitable, but at the same time favourable terms. Lord W. Hay proposed a resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Jas. Bird, of the firm of W. Bird and Co., and supported by Mr. Wyld and others, recommending the policy-holders generally to adopt the scheme. The liquidators state that they will communicate with the whole of the policy-holders as quickly as possible.

THE EUROPEAN ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

On Wednesday, Nov. 10, an extraordinary general meeting of shareholders of the European Assurance Society was held at the offices, Waterloo-place, under the presidency of Sir Frederick Smith. Mr. Lake read a report, in which the following passages occurred:—

The directors beg to inform the shareholders and the policy-holders that immediately after the petitions were presented, they caused to be prepared a statement of the assets and liabilities of the society, a copy of which is annexed and marked W. This statement showed a balance in favour of the company of £107,205. 18s. 2d., and the capital at call was £595,550. 14s. 6d. The directors also instructed Mr. Henry Edward Bird, an independent and experienced accountant, and who was formerly for eight years a partner in the eminent firm of Coleman, Turquand, and Co., to make an examination into the accounts of the society. Mr. Bird says:—"As the result of investigation and examination of the said books and accounts, I say that the said balance-sheet is in all respects a correct and accurate balance-sheet of the affairs of the company, as shown by its books and accounts. It appears to me, however, that having regard to the particulars of which the item railway debentures £6,000 is composed, that this amount should be assumed as of the present value of £3,500 only; and that, having regard to the particulars of which the items £57,207. 11s. 1d. and £71,551. 16s. 6d. are composed, a deduction of 15 per cent. should in strictness be made from those sums as a reserve for contingencies of realisation. I have no doubt whatever that the society, as regards its policy-holders and creditors, is perfectly solvent. As regards the share capital, representing the proprietors' interest in the society, the question as to whether such capital is wholly or to what extent intact, must depend mainly upon the value of the businesses taken over by the society, which at present stand in the books at the total sum of £261,817. 15s. 10d. The result of the account is to show that the liabilities of the society, on December 31, 1868, amount to £441,771. 16s. 1d., and no more; and that the society's assets (after entirely excluding from calculation the purchase of business account) amount to £449,144. 14s. 11d., and no more; in addition to which there is a capital, as at the date of December, 31, 1868, remaining uncalled, of £595,550. 14s. 6d. The result of the whole is to show, as I verily believe from my examination of the books and accounts of the society the fact is, that the creditors of the society, including the policy-holders, have as security for the payment of the society's liabilities an amount of assets somewhat exceeding the total amount of the society's liabilities, and, in addition, the uncalled capital of the society, together with the value to be attributed to the goodwill of the society's business." Notwithstanding the excitement for some time past in the insurance world, the amount of premiums on the new life and guarantee policies received by the society for the nine months in the present year, ending on September 30, was no less than £24,756. 18s. 7d. It is proposed to reduce the board to nine directors, which, experience shows, is a convenient number for working the two branches of life and guarantee, and which arrangement, as allowing for casualties, would ensure an average attendance of seven. There will be, therefore, four vacancies to be filled up at the discretion of the shareholders, and it is suggested that of this number one-half should be qualified shareholders, who are also policy-holders. It also seems desirable to increase the qualification of a director, the qualification being at present fixed by the deed of settlement at 200 shares. The mere fact of the presentation of the recent petitions has, no doubt, for the time affected the society prejudicially, and the directors propose to make a call of 5s. per share. In conclusion, the directors fully believe that the society is in possession of a very valuable business, a proposition which, even in the midst of the recent very hostile litigation, it was scarcely attempted to gainsay or deny, and they have no reason to doubt that with the co-operation of the shareholders, and with care and economy in the management, the society may not only continue its business with perfect safety to the present and future policy-holders, but with a fair prospect of becoming prosperous and remunerative to the shareholders themselves.

The part of the report in which the proposed call of 5s. per share was indicated was received with some dissent.

The Chairman then addressed the meeting. One of the objects of the call of 5s. proposed to be made was to make up the expected deficiency in the United States, in India, and probably, it might turn out, in Melbourne. It was intended to put apart, as quickly as possible, a sum of £10,000 (and it might be done in twelve months), for a guarantee reserve fund, and to add to it from year to year until it should be increased to £50,000. The guarantee was a most valuable business, and was rendered even more so because the Government guaranteed all their officials in the European. A great number of the railway companies and the banks still held in the guarantee fund. During the past six weeks, since the dismissal of the petitions, £487 had been received for new guarantee business. The chairman concluded by moving the adoption of the report.

Dr. Reed seconded the motion.

Mr. Child moved as an amendment the appointment of a committee to confer and act with the directors in the management of the affairs of the society, such committee to report to the shareholders on Thursday, Nov. 18, at twelve o'clock.

Mr. Orton seconded the amendment.

In reply to one of the speakers, Mr. Crawford offered to withdraw his appeal against the Vice-Chancellor's judgment, on certain conditions which he proceeded to explain. After some strong remarks from subsequent speakers, to which Mr. Crawford vainly attempted to reply,

Mr. Legge and the Rev. Mr. Gleig suggested that the report of the directors should be simply received, and the substantive resolution for the appointment of a committee should be taken afterwards. This was done, and both propositions were carried. The following gentlemen were appointed to form the committee:—Mr. Alderman Crompton, Oldham; Mr. J. Dendy, Manchester; Mr. A. Bristowe, London; Mr. Orton, Leeds; Mr. Edward Healey, Birmingham; Provost Yeaman, of Dundee; and Mr. Child.

The meeting was then adjourned until November 18.

Miscellaneous.

NEW TRADE BY SUEZ CANAL.—Among the new developments of the shipping trade of Europe likely to follow the opening of the Isthmus of Suez Canal is a contemplated extension of operations by the Royal Steam Navigation Company of Holland, which it is understood is constructing additional steamers to ply in the Mediterranean with the view of ultimately establishing a line between Holland and India, by way of the Red Sea.

THE exports of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamers, sailed at the subjoined dates, were—per Delhi, October 23rd, from Southampton to Bombay, gold, £15,997; to Bombay, per Nyanza, October 30, gold, £2,900, silver, £15,000; to Bombay, per Bangalore (from Marseilles), October 31st, silver, £8,000; to Madras, per Nyanza, October 30, gold, £21,879, per Ceylon (from Marseilles), gold, £200, silver, £408; to Galle, per Nyanza, from Southampton, gold, £20,400; to Penang, per Nyanza, from Southampton, silver, £14,800; to Singapore, silver, £9,860.

ALDERSHOT STRATEGY.—Officers of Artillery complain, and, apparently not without cause, that, in the mimic actions lately introduced, their guns are captured by cavalry and infantry under circumstances which would be impracticable in real war. They say that their antagonists march up to the cannon's mouth with a total disregard of the fact that shot and shell would be vomited therefrom in real battle, and proceed to capture batteries which would be unapproachable if anything more deadly than smoke were discharged from their pieces. The cure for this, as for all the other evils of our manoeuvres, is the introduction of the system of competent umpires such as exist in Continental armies.—Army and Navy Gazette.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—An extraordinary general meeting of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company is to be held on the 22nd Nov., when "there will be submitted to the meeting certain proposals from his Grace her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council with reference to the Veerumquam-Wudwan Extension of this company's line, on conditions involving alterations in the existing contracts between the company and the Government of India, especially as to advances for interest and the division of surplus profits above 5 per cent., and if such proposals be approved, resolutions for carrying them into effect will be submitted to the meeting."

COMPANION OF THE BATH.—The Gazette announces the appointment of Dr. J. D. Hooker to be a Companion of the Bath.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—The directors have issued their report for the half-year ending 30th June last. It shows a net profit of £50,252. 15s. 5d.; and, after payment of an interim dividend of 4 per cent., a balance of £20,282. 15s. 5d. is carried forward. The profit is stated to have been relatively less than that of the first half of previous years, owing to the unfavourable course of exchange throughout the East. Among the liabilities are, deposits, £2,844,589. 11s. 3d.; and bills payable and notes in circulation, £5,161,383. 11s. 6d. The assets include coin and bullion, £2,015,966. 4s. 8d.; cash, £849,478. 18s. 11d.; Government Securities, £547,109. 6s. 8d.; and bills receivable, loans, &c., £5,322,784. 14s. 4d.

THE RUSSO-PERSIAN TELEGRAPH.—With regard to some statements in the Bombay Gazette respecting a series of ludicrously incorrect telegrams said to have been transmitted through the "new line of telegraphic communication with Europe via Russia, which was opened a few weeks since," it appears that any such telegrams must have been sent through private or unauthorised hands. The line, instead of having been open for a few weeks, is not yet opened; even the working staff have not been sent out, nor have any of the arrangements requisite with the North German and Russian Governments yet been concluded. At present the impression is that the line may be opened by the 1st of December, but this will certainly be the earliest date.

DEATH OF MR. H. H. CLARKE.—An inquest was held at Lincoln College, Oxford, last week, respecting the death of Mr. Herbert Hildyard Clarke, commoner of that college, who died on Tuesday under the influence of chloroform, which was administered to him at his own request previous to undergoing a painful surgical operation. The operation was successfully performed, and soon after the pulse suddenly subsided, and in a short time the patient died. It was stated that he had taken chloroform before, and the medical witnesses expressed their opinion that the chloroform had been administered in a proper manner. By the jury's desire, however, a post mortem examination was made, and the surgeon who made it stated that, in his opinion, death was caused by the action of chloroform upon a weak heart. The jury found a verdict to this effect, and added that the chloroform appeared to have been administered with due care and skill. Mr. Clarke was only nineteen years of age. His father is in India.

MEGALITHIC REMAINS.—The attention of the Ethnological Society during their last session was directed (in a series of able papers recorded in their journal) to the Megalithic remains—cromlechs, dolmens, stone circles, &c., such as are found in our own island, as well as in all parts of Southern Europe, in India, Arabia, and in Africa along the shores of the Mediterranean. The desirability of collecting evidence of at least relation of race in their builders, which the identity of form and size of these stone wonders suggests, whether found in Kaseem, in Arabia, or in Albury in Somersetshire—induced the assistant-secretary of the society to send a competent photographer to take views of the stone circles of Wiltshire. In these views, twelve inches by ten, by a simple method of scale measurement, the exact dimensions are recorded, and the compass bearings noted; enabling the closest student to make careful comparisons. Will not our learned societies, and munificent individuals interested in prehistoric studies, come forward to provide funds to secure a systematic delineation of, at least, the European megalithic structures?—Nature.

THE EAST INDIA TRADE AND THE SUEZ CANAL.—The Liverpool shipowners engaged in the East India trade are rapidly turning their attention to the Suez Canal, and the great facilities which it will afford them in their traffic with the East. One of the first steam vessels destined to trade between the Mersey and Bombay, via the Suez Canal, is the Brazilian, belonging to the Merchants' Shipping Company of Liverpool, which has just left the Mersey for Bombay. The Brazilian will proceed to Alexandria, and as soon as the Canal shall be declared open she will pass through on her route to Bombay. The Brazilian is a very fine vessel—in fact, a more suitable vessel could not have been selected by the Merchants' Shipping Company to inaugurate the trade between the port of Liverpool and the East by way of the Suez Canal. The Brazilian is upwards of 400 feet long—in fact, we believe she is the longest vessel that ever left the Mersey; and as the requirements and rules connected with the Suez Canal Company are of a very stringent nature, notwithstanding her splendid steaming power, it will take her two days before she can get over the 100 miles of Canal—that is, provided she adheres to the regulations—which limit the steaming power to not more than four or five nautical miles per hour. The Brazilian will not draw more than 20 feet when she enters the Canal, and will leave it with the same draught of water. In connection with the above matter we may state that one of the principal steamship companies in Liverpool is having several vessels built expressly for the Suez Canal traffic.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—The Malta Times publishes the following as the programme to be observed at the "inauguration" of the Canal on the 17th instant: "All the ships are to assemble on the 16th of November at Port Said, where preparations are being made for placing signals to indicate the anchorage of each. On the following day, 17th, at dawn, a salute of twenty-one guns will be fired to announce the time of departure, and the different ships will commence moving in the following order:—The Aigle, having on board the Empress of the French; the steam corvette Hertha, having on board the Crown Prince of Prussia; the steam corvette Elisabeth, on board of which will embark the Archduke Victor, brother of the Emperor of Austria; the steam corvette Java, with Prince Henry of the Netherlands; and the steam corvette Vanadis, with Prince Augustus of Sweden. After the single vessels will follow the squadrons. The first will be the Italian squadron, commanded by Rear-Admiral Prince Amadeus of Savoy; then the French squadron in the Levant, led by the frigate Themis (bearing the Admiral's flag); then the Netherlands division, and then the Swedish division. When all the vessels of war have entered the Canal, the merchant steamers and steam launches, with the spectators, will follow. The Khedive of Egypt will proceed the cortège by an hour on board the steamer Latif, with his Ministers, aides-de-camp, and engineers. The Latif will be followed immediately by the steamer of the Isthmus of Suez Canal Company, charged with the direction of the arrangements. When the Aigle arrives at Suez a salute of 101 guns will be fired by the Egyptian Artillery.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—On Saturday, Nov. 13, the following draughts of officers, non-commissioned officers, and men belonging to the Depot Brigade, left Woolwich to embark on board the Indian troopship Serapis, Captain J. C. Soady, for conveyance to Alexandria, en route for India. The number belonging to the Depot Brigade placed under orders to leave is 3 officers, 97 non-commissioned officers and men, 9 soldiers' wives, and 14 children, to join the head-quarters of the 8th Brigade, at Lucknow; 1 officer and 56 non-commissioned officers and men, to join the 16th Brigade, at Barrackpore; 5 officers, 52 non-commissioned officers and men, 1 officer's wife, 9 soldiers' wives, and 19 children, to join the head-quarters of the 25th Brigade, at Allahabad; and 63 non-commissioned officers and men to fill up vacancies in the 10th Brigade at Malta. The B battery, 9th Brigade, commanded by Captain H. M. G. Purvis, Royal Artillery, consisting of 7 officers, 146 non-commissioned officers and men, 4 officers' wives, 17 soldiers' wives, and 51 children, left Woolwich at the same time to join the head-quarters of the Brigade in India. In addition to the above the following detachments have left the depot of the Royal Horse Artillery at Maidstone for the same destination:—111 non-commissioned officers and men, five women, and six children, to join the A Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, head-quarters at Meerut, Bengal; 90 non-commissioned officers and men, seven women, and nine children, to be attached to the F Brigade Royal Horse Artillery at Umballa, Bengal.—CHATHAM, Nov. 15.—Orders have been received for a detachment of the 1st Battalion of the 14th Regiment, under the command of Captain R. Harman, to be held in readiness to proceed from this garrison and embark for Calcutta on Saturday next, to join the service companies. The troops will embark in the iron screw transport Crocodile.

THE CHAIR OF HINDOO, MAHOMMEDAN, AND INDIAN LAW.—Mr. Stanish Grove Grady, the reader in Hindoo, Mahommedan, and Indian Law to the Inns of Court, delivered the first of an intended course of lectures in Middle Temple Hall, on Saturday, the 13th, in presence of a large and distinguished audience. The learned lecturer, after a graceful allusion to his sense of the importance of the task assigned him, and to the diffidence he felt in his own powers to do it full justice, although he was much encouraged by the high opinion of his capacity which the Council of Legal Education evinced by their free and unanimous selection of him to fill the new Chair, proceeded to the main object of his theme—the elucidation of the maxims, the principles, the sources, and the history of the Hindoo and Mahommedan systems of law which obtain throughout the Presidencies and different districts of our Indian Empire. This part of his subject he treated at considerable length, and in a manner that evidenced extensive research, pointing out as he went along the points of resemblance, if not identity, between the Hindoo system of law in its growth and development and that which, radiating from Greece, more or less influenced the laws and institutions of Western Europe. A similar mode of historical and analytical treatment applied to the Mahommedan law, brought out its salient points, and traced its diverging streams up to the fountain head—the Koran. The lecturer's familiarity with the different schools of commentators and expounders enabled him to give a rapid and graphic sketch of its rise and spread throughout the various provinces of India, mapping out the country, as it were, into separate districts according to the predominance of one or other school of interpretation, distinguishing those that received the commands of the Koran alone as of binding and paramount authority from those that accepted the sayings and precepts of the prophet and his companions, as handed down through the modifying element of Arab tradition. The lecturer then entered into a discussion of the modifications introduced into the native systems of laws, and the mode of their administration, by English positive enactments, and gave a complete and comprehensive narrative of British legislation, as applied to the different presidencies at different times, from the earliest charter of the first James to the most recent statutes of the present reign. Fullness of detail, clearness of language, and precision of statement marked the learned Reader's handling of the different subjects embraced in this most interesting and erudite lecture.

MILITARY.—The colonelcy of the 65th Regiment, vacant by the death of General R. B. Coles, has been awarded to Major-General Sir Robert Walpole, K.C.B., late of the Rifle Brigade. Sir Robert commanded a detachment of the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade at the Pandoo Nuddee on the 26th November, 1857; a brigade on the 27th and 28th November at Cawnpore under Major-General Windham; the 6th Brigade of the Army, in the action of Cawnpore on the 6th December, under Lord Clyde; the 3rd Division of the Army, at the capture of Lucknow, and a field force that entered Rohilcund, including fort Roeha and the battle of Allygunge; also the troops at the battle of Bareilly under Lord Clyde, where he was wounded. Commanded at the fight at Maylah Ghat on the Saarda, 15th January, 1859, when, with 360 men, sixty only of whom were Europeans, he entirely defeated 2,500 of the enemy. For these services he received a Companionship of the Bath, and was subsequently appointed a Knight Commander, and was given the war medal with clasp.—The distinguished service pension, vacant by the death of Colonel A. B. Montgomery, C.B., retired full pay, late of the 1st Royal Regiment, has been granted to Colonel E. B. Hale, C.B., Lieutenant-Colonel, on the half-pay list, late of the 82nd Regiment. Colonel Hale served in the North-Western Provinces and Oude in suppressing the Mutiny in 1857-59; commanded three companies of the 82nd at the relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde, and succeeded to the command of the 5th Brigade on Brigadier G. Russell being severely wounded and Colonel Biddulph killed, when he was wounded and had his charger shot under him. He commanded the 82nd during the latter part of the defence, and at the battle of Cawnpore, and the 5th Brigade at the action of Khodagunge, subsequent occupation of Futteghur; he served throughout the Rohilcund campaign, and was left in command of the post of Shahjehanpore on the advance of the army under Lord Clyde to Bareilly, where he was wounded. He commanded the regiment at the actions of Kunkur and Bunkagaon; was appointed to the command of a brigade for field service in Oude in October, 1858, and he held it up to the end of the campaign. He was frequently mentioned in despatches, and received the Companionship of the Bath, the rank of colonel, and the war medal with clasp for his services.—It is probable that Major-general M'Murdo, C.B., will succeed Major-general W. O'Grady Haly, C.B., whose period of divisional command in Bengal will expire next January.

Letters intended to be forwarded by these Packets must be specially addressed—"By French Mail Packet from Marseilles."

Up to the end of December the dates of despatch from London will be the Thursday evenings, September 30th, October 29th, November 25th, and December 23rd, and by Supplementary Mails on the morning following.

Supplementary Mails will also be made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday morning, via France and Italy to Brindisi, and thence by Italian packet to Alexandria, but should they not reach the latter place in time, the departure of the regular Mails for Suez will not be delayed. The postage of letters will be at the rate of 1s. 4d. for each half-ounce, and of newspapers 4d. for each four ounces.

MILITARY OPERATIONS AT THE BLACK MOUNTAIN.—There is no doubt of the fact that a military movement has been made by a British force at the North-west frontier. The Englishman, of Oct. 19, which appears to have some good source of information in the Punjab, gives the following details:—A British force is at this moment more than half way up the Black Mountain, and a severe retribution has been taken for the petty, but politically important insults, which the Hussunzyes have offered us so frequently of late. Last week a large village was burnt, its crops were wasted, and 150 head of cattle carried off by our troops. This vigorous measure will prove a significant warning at the very commencement of the cold season, that anything like a recurrence of depredation or marauding, upon the part of the mountaineers will be severely visited. It has been found necessary to get rid of the clumsy double system of government to which we alluded yesterday, and to invest the whole conduct of the expedition in one man. The Agror valley has been removed from the jurisdiction of the ordinary tribunals, and this is the first overt sign of the new policy that is to be pursued. It is with mingled feelings of pleasure and of shame that we observe the command of the expedition has been given to Lieutenant Colonel Rothney, C.S.I., of pleasure, because he is unquestionably the best man for the work; and of shame, because he has been allowed to go so long unrewarded for his brilliant services on the Black Mountain in the last campaign. We understand that the whole operations are to be entrusted to him, and that he will form an advanced camp either upon or close to the Black Mountain, with the station of Abbottabad, in which he has so long commanded, for its military base. Colonel Rothney is a man of singular tact and judgment, with energy sufficient to give great vigour to any operation he may direct, but fortunately without that foolhardy dash, so fascinating to the junior officers of a frontier force, but so politically fatal in a commander of a frontier expedition.

HIMALAYAN GAME BIRDS.—The Pioneer calls attention to a letter which appeared in the Field of the 4th of September on the destruction of Himalayan game birds during the breeding season. It is the opinion of many who have had good opportunities of judging that the diminution of game in the hills from this cause is advancing at a very rapid rate, and will ultimately lead to the extinction of some of the finest species. Is it not possible, with the co-operation of native landowners in the Himalayas, to arrest the destruction of these handsome birds?

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That, in conformity with the intention announced of sending to India annually a certain number of YOUNG MEN, Trained and Educated for ultimate Employment in the Higher Branches of the Department for the Conservation and Management of the FORESTS under the Government of India, ELEVEN Young Men will be selected in DECEMBER next to go to India at the end of 1872, if so many are found duly qualified.

The salary will be at first £300 a-year, and the salaries of the appointments in the three Presidencies range between that sum and £1,900 a-year. Promotions will depend upon efficiency, and the occurrence of vacancies in the higher grades.

Applicants must be British subjects, above seventeen and under twenty-five years of age, and unmarried.

As active habits and a strong constitution are most important, Candidates will have to undergo a strict medical examination.

They must send to the Revenue Department of the India Office, on or before the 25th of November next, a statement of their names and parentage, with a certificate of birth, and of being possessed of a competent knowledge of the following subjects, and they must be prepared to undergo an examination in them:—

1. English writing from dictation and English composition.
2. Arithmetic in all its branches.
3. Algebra, elementary principles, simple and quadratic equations, ratios and proportions, logarithms, arithmetical and geometrical progression.
4. Geometry (1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 6th Books of Euclid and plane trigonometry).
5. Free hand-drawing.
6. A good colloquial knowledge of either French or German, with the facility to read and translate the works of some classical writer in the language.

A preference will be given to those Candidates who show proficiency in—

1. Surveying and land measuring.
Geology and mineralogy.
2. The elements of any of the following subjects:—
Plan-drawing.
Botany.
Mechanical and natural philosophy.
Chemistry.

If selected, they will be further required to go through a course of training and instruction in Forestry and cognate Sciences for two years and a-half, in France or Germany, previous to their departure for India, and the Secretary of State will contribute £50 at the end of each half-year, towards the expenses of their training, in the case of such Candidates as are favourably reported on by their instructors. In addition to this, the young men will be required to pass some weeks under one or more approved Foresters in Scotland before they go out to India.

More detailed information as to these appointments may be had on application to the Assistant Secretary, Revenue (Forests) Department, India Office, Westminster.

(Signed) HERMAN MERIVALE.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.

BILIOUS DISORDERS.—In no organ of the body does disease present itself so frequently and in such varied forms as in the liver, and in no affections is it more important to apply immediate and safe treatment.

Holloway's remedies happily place the means of cure within the reach of all. His Pills, aided by energetic friction with his Ointment on the right side and over the pit of the stomach, will soon relieve the troublesome dyspeptic symptoms, and perseverance with these preparations will insure perfect recovery without any great restrictions to habits or diet. This treatment safely reduces the enlarged liver, often resulting from hot climates or too great indulgence in the pleasures of the table.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 30; Agra and Calcutta, October 26; Madras, October 25.

The question of retrenchment was still the question of the day. The pruning-knife is being applied in all directions within reach of the Viceregal authority. In the native army the chief part of the curtailments will probably fall on Madras, which is generally the first to be victimised on such occasions. In return for its faithfulness during the Mutiny, the Madras Army, already reduced by several regiments, is now to lose eight or ten more; on the plea that Madras hardly needs any garrison, and that in respect of real efficiency any number of Madras Sepoys can well be spared. The financial necessity for the reduction however requires propping by no offensive allusions to a probable untruth. The reductions in the Public Works Department also press heavily on Madras. An excess of outlay over the estimates sanctioned had been incurred by Lord Napier on jails, court-houses, and the Madras pier, before the Viceroy's warning circular came out. This outlay the Indian Government has not only declined to sanction, but has forbidden a transfer of the excess from one item of the Budget grants to another. It is only another instance of the absurdity of treating the rulers of twenty or thirty millions like the agent of a trading company or the head-clerk of a small department.

GREAT reductions are already ordered in the Police Department. Fifteen high appointments, including the deputy-inspector-generalships of police, are to be done away, while the services of 107 district superintendents will also be declined. The expected saving will be £80,000 a-year, and further retrenchments are not unlikely. A great many officers of the army will thus be cast adrift, pending new opportunities for employing them in other fields. With a tender regard for their sad case, the Viceroy has pledged himself to give these forlorn ones the first choice of all vacant berths at his disposal, and he has asked the Commander-in-Chief to do his best also in the same direction.

WITH reference to the engrossing topic the Friend of India bemoans the vast expense involved in the passage of troops between India and England under the present system. Two hundred pounds a man is the price that India is supposed to pay, whereas a private company once offered to carry troops at £35 only a man and £45 for each officer. There must surely be some mistake in the first calculation, which is ten times the figure named in Parliamentary papers. The Times of India however, while doubting the Friend's accuracy, maintains that even the high rates of the P. and O. Company would have been cheaper than the actual cost of carrying the reliefs in the present troopships. The Calcutta paper also points to the pension-list of the native Army as a source of needless expense, and proposes to save future pensions by means of shorter enlistments. The Madras Athenaeum illustrates the utter muddle of Indian finance by supposing Killarney the centre of government for England, France, the Netherlands, Germany, Italy, Spain, and Turkey—an illustration not far amiss.

THE cotton crops have not passed unscathed through the recent ordeals of locusts and heavy rains. Instead of a bumper season, the probable yield will not exceed the average. Mr. Rivett-Carnac still prophesies good things of the cotton in Central India and the Berars, especially if the branch line to Khangaum should be ready to transport the harvest due next January.

THE Government of India has issued a decree that all officers on the general lists of the cavalry and infantry of the three Presidencies, who do not qualify for staff employment by passing the higher standard examination in the native languages before the 1st May, 1871, will be removed from the service. This Draconian edict was avowedly inspired by instructions sent out from England; but in its present shape it seems to go far beyond the Indian Secretary's expressed desire to enforce the language qualifications only against officers who entered the service after 1858. "The removal of an officer who entered the service before 1858, on the ground of his having failed to pass in the native languages, will not be justifiable." Such are the very words of the Despatch of March last, and it is very unlikely that the India Office has since changed its mind on this point. Meanwhile the order just issued from Simlah needs explaining.

THE Indian Government has just declared its approval of Captain Forbes's designs for a canal system in Oudh and the adjacent districts, which will probably surpass even the Ganges Canal in size. He proposes with the water of the Sardah River to irrigate 19,000 square miles of the surrounding country. It is reckoned that the cutting of the first twelve miles will cost half-a-million sterling. The dam will be made at Bunbassa, the canal head at Nuglah, eight miles below, near the junction of the Sunnea Nuddee with the Sardah. After running through Oudh for eighty miles, the canal will branch off into a Benares section of 280 miles, and a Jaunpore section of 235. Other branches are to water the western districts of Oudh. It is to cost nearly five millions sterling. A discharge of 13,000 cubic feet per second is required for the Gogra-Gangetic Doab, and any shortcomings of the Sardah will be made up by tapping the Koreallie River. At three rupees an acre the return, after deducting 4 per cent. for ordinary charges, is estimated at 11 per cent. According to Colonel Strachey, the returns will be yet larger if the new Canal Bill becomes law. It is altogether a magnificent project, but what does Oudh especially want with canals, when it has plentiful supplies of well water? The proposed canal from Rajmahal to Calcutta is now under survey, and so is the line of canal in Sirhind. We are glad to hear that the Ganges Canal is already paying 7 per cent. It is a work of time to accustom the natives to the use of new methods of irrigation. In Madras they have long since learned the advantage of canals, but in Upper India and Bengal they still have prejudices on that point, which even a famine cannot wholly eradicate.

THE last Government Bill to which Mr. Maine put his signature was Colonel Strachey's new Canal Bill for Northern India, which has at length been officially promulgated after many months of preliminary discussion. It aims among other things at a fairer distribution than hitherto of the charge for water supplied. Henceforth, if the Bill passes, the landlord will have to pay his share as well as the occupier. So far as irrigation increases the value of the former's land, it seems but fair that he should pay something out of his increased rents for the source of his improved income; but the fear is that, whatever may be taken from him in the shape of water-rate, will have to be made good by the unlucky cultivator. This part of the Bill however is said to have been endorsed by both Sir W. Muir and Sir D. Macleod. Another provision is that, if a canal after being open five years fails to pay 7 per cent. net on the outlay, all the irrigable land through which it passes shall be charged with water-rate, whether it be irrigated from the canal or no. There is little to say against a principle which is every day enforced in England, if only care be taken not to extend canal irrigation in districts where water can easily be had from wells. It is further proposed that all canal questions, except those regarding compensation for land, shall be tried by a class of officers specially appointed to that end. Two more clauses provide that in time of need the Government may use forced labour to keep the canals in repair, and may see to the proper draining of districts near the canal, whose natural outfalls may have become choked. The last arrangement seems specially suited to Bengal, where the soil has become like a wet sponge through the absence of any common system of drainage.

LORD AND LADY MAYO had already left Simlah for Calcutta, and Sir W. Mansfield was to start early in November on his last tour of inspection.

If the Home authorities ever indulge in second thoughts, we would ask them to reconsider the problem of the unemployed field officers by the light of a certain letter which appeared in our columns last week. It has long been felt everywhere outside the India Office that General Hannington's calculations were far more misleading in the one direction than those of Colonel Broome in the other. It seemed certain that the scheme so strongly supported by the Indian Government must have very strong reasons indeed in its favour, and that in such a question the authorities on the spot must be better judges of the evils they sought to remedy than the authorities at home. Our correspondent "T. R. Y." does good service in once more stating the simple facts of the case at issue, and pointing out the utter fallacy of any calculations based on a high mortality among old officers in India. He asks less than Colonels Broome and Norman did, and may therefore hope for a more patient hearing. With regard to the question of mortality we might almost assume the very reverse of General Hannington's reckonings, and affirm that after a certain age Indian officers die faster at home than they would in India. Anyhow it stands to reason that twenty or thirty officers drawing £500 a-year each in England for seven years instead of twice that sum in India must save money to the State. Yet greater would be the saving if, as our correspondent proposes, all lieutenant-colonels who chose to do so were allowed to go on half Indian pay in England, with liability to serve at need, and a delay of two years in getting their colonel's allowance. The one question is whether the lieutenant-colonels would accept these terms or anything like them. We are inclined to think that many of them would.

AN interesting paper has lately been contributed by Lieutenant-colonel C. L. Showers to the Proceedings of the Asiatic Society. Its subject is the Meenas, a wild tribe of Central India, with whom Colonel Showers has for some time been thrown into contact by virtue of his office. Readers of Mr. Hunter's works are sometimes led to imagine that the merits of the so-called Indian aborigines were discovered for the first time by Mr. Hunter himself; but old Anglo-Indians have longer memories. Instance after instance might be given of English officers, who during this century have done good service among the hill and jungle races of India. Outram among the Bheels of Candeish, Hall and his successor in Mairwarra, Campbell and Macpherson among the Khonds, are a few of the names in point. The first Bheel corps was raised by Outram nearly forty years ago, and its loyalty ever since has been matched by its good discipline. The Meywar Bheel Corps was raised ten years later, in 1841, by Colonel Hunter. Colonel Showers saw the first recruits enrolled, "naked savages, with bows and arrows, fresh from their native hills." In 1850 this corps "went through a field day equal to any native regiment of the line," and in 1857 it cheerfully took the field on our behalf against bodies of mutinous sepoys. Meanwhile, in another part of the Meywar States, in Oodipore namely, the Meenas, another wild race, were enjoying a kind of lawless independence, until, in 1854, their inroads into British Ajmere brought them under the rod of British power. Colonel Showers was ordered to "take them in hand." He proceeded to Jehazpore, a town in the midst of a sea of hill and jungle, forming the boundary of Meywar, Boondie, Jeypore, and Ajmere. Under the stern rule of the Kotah chief this old centre of strife and rapine had been kept in good order from 1806 to 1819. Being then restored to Meywar, it soon relapsed into its old condition. From the time, however, when Colonel Showers first took it in hand, steady progress has been made in civilising the people without recourse to harsh or summary measures. Peace and order were restored without the firing of a shot. The robber tribes no sooner learned the true character of their British neighbours than they saw the necessity of mending their ways. The particular tribe of Meenas thus reduced to order is one of twelve scattered through Central India. It is called the Purihar tribe, which claims descent from the race that ruled Marwar before the Rhatoor invasion towards the end of the fourteenth century. Retreating from Marwar, the Purihars ere long took possession of their present haunts, where they have ever since led a life of lawless adventure, plundering, and fighting in gangs, joining the standard of every outlaw, and banding together against any of the neighbouring States that tried to bring them under control. The whole tribe numbers 24,000 male adults. The men are brave, hardy, and strong, frequently tall, and betraying in their handsome features how little they have in common with the Bheels, Mairs, Koles, and the low caste Meenas of the Aravulli Hills. No Purihar will give his daughter in marriage to a man of those tribes. Their pride of birth is fostered by the genealogist who visits each family in turn to note down the latest additions, male or female, to the family tree. Half the tribe are armed with good matchlocks, the rest with bows, and all with a kattar or double-hilted dagger. They eat meat and drink spirits. The men are all married, some taking extra wives from the widows of deceased clansmen, others from the women carried off in their raids.

It is not likely, we understand, that any examination for the Indian Medical Service will be held before August 1870.

OPENING OF THE SUEZ CANAL.

AFTER all the doubts and the conflicting prophecies of the last six months, M. de Lesseps has kept his word. Even in the early days of this month it seemed hardly safe to predict that he could do so. Only ten days before the promised ceremony we heard of rocks discovered in the bed of his canal, and were left to speculate how many days it would take to remove them, to say nothing of the rocks that might still await discovery. Fortune however smiled on the bold Frenchman. Expectant Europe was not to be disappointed. The rocks were removed, the French Empress got back to Port Said in the nick of time, and about fifty vessels bearing a choice freight of highborn and eminent personages from all parts of Europe, lay off the harbour ready to play their part in the drama of the 17th. The eve of the great day was devoted to a joint religious festival of Christians and Mohammedans, and the next morning saw the whole flotilla gliding triumphantly along the narrow strait which has turned Africa into an island, in spite of all the discouragement thrown on M. de Lesseps' project by Lord Palmerston's statesmanship and Stephenson's engineering science. During the 18th the fleet lay anchored in Lake Timsah, off the new town of Ismailia, which has sprung up like a charmed oasis amidst the sands of the desert; and there it was greeted by four large steamers which had come unhindered up the canal from its Suez entrance. The ships then mustered in sight of Ismailia are said to have averaged a thousand tons each. Some of them, at any rate, had a draught of eighteen feet, if not more. On the 19th the other half of the canal was safely threaded down to the Red Sea.

Thus far the great enterprise has certainly prospered, from the engineering point of view. M. de Lesseps has solved the problem of uniting the two seas, and well deserves whatever honours and rewards his own countrymen, the world of practical science, and the admirers everywhere of successful energy may heap upon him. Competent engineers like Mr. T. Login speak with undoubting trustfulness of the lasting benefits involved in his great work. No one of any experience seems to doubt that what has been thus founded can with due care be improved and rendered permanent. So much a year will be necessary to keep the canal-bed clear by dredging. The construction of bays here and there to act like sidings on a railway is merely a matter of pounds and shillings. The whole canal indeed could at any time be widened, and its bank lined with masonry, at a cost by no means uncompassable. Mr. Login has shown in his letter to the Editor of our new scientific contemporary Nature, that the Mediterranean current flowing eastward carries off the mud of the Nile towards Syria, and so prevents or retards the silting up of Port Said. One condition only appears needful to the maintenance of the canal, and that, we need hardly say, is money. If in the long run it seems likely to pay, its maintenance is well-nigh certain, even though present shareholders may have long to wait for their dividends.

To such a question no definite answer can well be hazarded for some time to come. So much depends on the patience of all concerned in the canal's financial success, so much on the conditions of its navigation, on the amount of tolls levied, on the depth of water maintained, on the facilities offered for the passage of the narrow rock-bordered Red Sea. Low tolls, a general peace, a sufficient depth of water in the canal, a due supply of lights and buoys from Suez to Aden, would in due time assure a busy and continuous traffic between Port Said and Suez for steamers of all but the largest size. To sailing-ships the canal would be of very little use. Will the P. and O. Company's steamers ever succeed in threading it with their present draught of water, and if not, will it be worth the company's while to carry goods and passengers right through in vessels of smaller tonnage? English merchants and manufacturers would gain something by the new facilities for the conveyance of cotton, silk, indigo, and other Eastern products, if the present toll of eight shillings a ton were exchanged for an ad valorem duty. Some of the Liverpool shipowners have already arranged to start a line of large steamers, drawing twenty feet water, from the Mersey to Bombay, and if one of these gets easily through the canal, others are sure to follow. But will steamers of that draught ever get through the canal? The P. and O. Company's steamer D. G., drawing only fifteen and a-half feet water, touched ground several times on her way from Port Said to Ismailia, although Mr. Pender's report to Captain Osborn shows a depth of more than 17 feet throughout the canal. A Dutch company is about to extend its dealings from the Mediterranean to Bombay. All this promises fairly not only for M. de Lesseps and the Khedive, but for India also, and through her perhaps for Lancashire, which cannot for some time yet look to derive much profit from Sir S. Baker's scheme for compelling Africans to grow cotton in the regions of the Upper Nile. The canal's success would be the final victory of Bombay over Calcutta, the making of Car-war, and the development of Kurrachee.

MILITARY EDUCATION.

THE Report of the Royal Commissioners on Military Education naturally claims some little notice in the pages of a journal devoted to Indian affairs, seeing how greatly the efficiency of the Indian army, as now constituted, must depend on the training provided in this country for the officers of her Majesty's Service. The Commissioners begin by recommending the displacement of the present Council of Military Education by a Director-General acting under the orders of the War Office, and aided by a sufficient staff. All purely military examinations, except those for the promotion of subalterns, should be carried on by his department; the Civil Service Commissioners dealing with all non-military subjects. This substitution of one Director for a Council of five will hardly tend, we fear, to strengthen the War Office against the Horse Guards, if, as is almost inevitable, the Director must be himself an officer, who would naturally find himself exposed to Horse Guards pressure, if any such were even needed to keep him true to the traditions of his service.

No examiner should retain his appointment for more than four years, care being properly taken that one set of examiners shall not all go out of office at the same time. The two colleges of Woolwich and Sandhurst are to be sharply divided; Woolwich being reserved for the special use of candidates for the Artillery and Engineers, while those for the Cavalry and Infantry will go to Sandhurst. At Woolwich the limit of age for entrance remains in the one direction at sixteen years. In the other it is not without reason proposed to fix it at eighteen instead of nineteen. The candidates for Sandhurst must not be less than sixteen or more than seventeen years old. Candidates for direct commissions are allowed the wider range from seventeen to twenty years. Candidates who have taken a B.A. degree however may compete as late as twenty-two. To all three classes are allotted the same subjects for examination; with the same scale of highest marks for each of the eight subjects. Latin and Mathematics lead off with 4,000 marks; Greek comes next with 3,000; for French and German the standard is placed at 2,000; for history and experimental sciences at 1,500; while English composition and free-hand drawing are rated at 1,000. Why English should be placed so far below even French and German is a curious instance of the obstinacy of old tradition. It always seems to be supposed that a competent knowledge of one's mother-tongue comes by instinct; for certainly there are few branches of learning so utterly neglected as our poor English has been and still is, even in the most progressive schools. How many school-boys are even now taught to see that modern English has the same affinity to the language of Bede and Alfred, that Italian has to Latin, or modern German to Old German? In how many schools are our English classics studied as a branch of learning, or English composition practised as it ought to be? With the high value set however on Greek and Latin and even mathematics we shall be the less inclined to quarrel, if it succeeds in mitigating the reign of cram through its power of drawing candidates from public schools. The whole scheme indeed of entrance examination, as revised by the Commissioners, obviously aims at securing recruits for the commissioned ranks of the army from all the great centres of liberal education. The cadet of the future, it is hoped, will come straight to Woolwich or Sandhurst from Rugby, Charterhouse, or Cheltenham, armed with a fair stock of general learning, and trained in a healthy school of masculine morals, instead of having passed through the mill of the professional crammer during the most critical period of his mental and bodily growth. Henceforth his special training will begin after, not before his entrance examination.

That examination is to be twofold, qualifying and competitive—the one preliminary to the other. For the former a very moderate acquaintance with mathematics, English, drawing, and German or French is all that is demanded. The eight subjects for the further ordeal have already been named. Of these the candidate may take up any five—or six, if one of them be free-hand drawing. None of his marks will count for anything until he has gained one-fifth of all that could be gained in the subjects selected by him—a pretty fair guarantee for breadth of previous culture. Three failures will throw him out of the struggle altogether. The winners will then have to study at Woolwich or Sandhurst, as the case may be, for two years. At Woolwich six subjects are to be obligatory—namely, mathematics as far as trigonometry (for the first year only), fortification, artillery, military drawing, military history, mechanics. The cadet may also take up any three of the following studies—higher mathematics, higher fortification, French, German, drawing, chemistry, Latin, Greek. At Sandhurst the course of study would be similar, but proportionately less severe. The terms of payment would in some cases be slightly altered. The drill taught will be less in quantity, but it will be thoroughly taught. Parades for non-military purposes will be generally avoided. Successful cadets at the end of two years will be entitled to a free commission, and be exempt, save in one particular, from the special examination proposed for all officers under two years' standing.

On the internal government of the cadets the Commissioners are equally divided in respect of Woolwich; one half proposing to retain the present form of military organisation into a company commanded by a captain with two or three lieutenants under him; the other half recommending that the cadets in both colleges shall be distributed into groups of twenty-five, each controlled by a professor or instructor, military or civilian, who may punish his pupils within certain limits. This counter-scheme will not find much favour with the military world, and not a few outsiders will question the expediency of dealing with military cadets on any other than military principles. Any plan however would be better than the present one of treating young men old enough for the universities like fourth-form boys at school. The Governors of course are still to be military men, but the notion of turning them into practical headmasters, taking part in the teaching of the cadets, with a College Board of Professors to aid and advise them, will disturb the serenity of those who look on age and length of service as sufficient titles—interest apart—for the post of Governor. All these reforms in the internal economy of Woolwich and Sandhurst, including as they do a great reduction in the governing staff, will save the country more than £13,000, which the Commissioners propose to employ in aid of military education among commissioned officers.

On leaving the Woolwich Academy, the young artillery officers will go through a regular course of instruction at Woolwich and Shoeburyness, ending in an examination on gunnery, veterinary science, military law, and the tactics of all three arms. The Staff College should be opened to all branches of the Service, the number of students being increased to forty, and twenty vacancies a year being filled by open competition. Out of nine subjects for the entrance examination, mathematics, fortification, military drawing, and either French, German, or Hindustani, would be indispensable. The course of instruction for successful candidates would be spread over two years, and embrace all manner of pertinent studies, including practical lessons to be learned at Aldershot and Portsmouth in the art of encampment, the carriage of troops by rail, the conveyance of sick and wounded by land and sea. The instruction in reconnaissance should be thoroughly mastered under the commandant himself. Much time also would be given to road-making, tactics, strategy, and the various uses of artillery in the field. Cadets who have passed Sandhurst—why not Woolwich also?—with distinction, will be eligible without further examination to serve as aides-de-camp. The Staff College is to be quite distinct from the college for cadets. A higher standard than the present will be required for the pass examination. The examiners will be independent of the college. The commandant, appointed for seven years, should be selected on grounds of special fitness. Garrison and regimental instructors should henceforth be furnished from those who have passed the college. For the final examination all officers may compete, whether they have gone through the college course or not.

All officers of the Guards and Line who have not passed through Sandhurst are, within two years after entering the Service, to qualify themselves by a special examination for the post of captain. They should be examined in military law, field-fortification, field-sketching, and reconnaissance; failure on second trial to be specially reported to the Horse Guards. A sufficient number of garrison and regimental instructors will aid both officers and men in their professional studies. Lord de Ros objects to this system of turning regimental officers into a kind of schoolmasters, as hurtful to the harmony of regimental messes; but the force of his objection melts away before a reference to actual usage. Are not regiments already supplied with adjutants and musketry instructors, and what difference in social respects could be made by one "instructor" the more? With regard to the Royal Engineers, their system of training is already so good that the Commissioners can see no room for improvement except in the matter of road-making, and the addition at Chatham of a building like the Royal Artillery Institution at Woolwich.

EDUCATION FOR THE MILLION.—VI.
INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—It has been generally admitted that the greatest impetus which female education has received in India was due to the advent of Miss Mary Carpenter, but it had not been altogether neglected in the localities which that lady did not visit, and to them I shall devote a few preliminary observations, to show that the good seed has not been cast away in the waters without a profitable return.

Much had been done in respect of male education in the North-West Provinces in the time of Sir James Thomason. Soon afterwards a female school was founded by certain natives at Agra, in 1855, which was subsequently supported by Government, after which a mania for female education burst forth. The schools were attended indiscriminately by all classes of Hindus, including many Brahmins. In two years the number of schools amounted to 288, with a daily attendance of 4,127 pupils, and by the last report of 1866-7 there were 595 schools with 12,902 pupils. An English lady has since been appointed to superintend the establishment.

Much had already been done in respect of education for the male population of the Punjab, while Sir Robert Montgomery was Acting Lieutenant-governor. In 1862-3 he held a meeting of the chiefs of Lahore and Umritsur, urging on them the necessity of educating their daughters as well as their sons, promising at the same time that the Government would bear such portion of the expense as might be necessary to carry out any measures which committees formed by themselves might suggest at each of those cities. It was recommended by these bodies that the domestic priests of certain of the best families named should undertake to teach one female each from his own or from his client's families; the priests to receive one pound a month until such time as their pupils became fit to impart knowledge themselves as governesses, not only in the families with which they were connected, but also of respectable neighbours of a lower social grade. These, again, would be expected to open schools of their own, or take service as governesses in private families, or as mistresses and governesses in Government schools.

Until the end of May, 1853, little progress had been made, there being only five female schools; since which they have multiplied so, that, at the close of 1866-7, 130 schools, with 3,621 pupils, had been established in the Punjab.

In Oude a beginning has been made, but in 1866-67 there were only eighteen female schools, six of which were supported by Government, and the number of pupils was 408. The official report of 1856 affords no further information on female education, but the progress that has since been made is greatly to be ascribed to the efforts of Miss Carpenter—as described in her work, entitled "Six Months' Residence in India." This lady's work is comprised in two volumes, and from its pages I shall venture to extract what I conceive to be most important and most suitable for your journal. But I must divide it into two parts; the first finishing with her visit to Bombay and its dependencies; the second following her steps from thence to Madras and Calcutta, and her return to the Western Presidency, before she embarked again for England. On Miss Carpenter's arrival in Bombay Harbour she was visited by an officer, on the part of the Governor, Sir Bartle Frere, who delivered in his name, and with his compliments, the copy of a letter addressed by his Excellency to Sir Alexander Grant, Bart., Director of Public Instruction, informing him of the expected arrival of Miss Carpenter; from "whose visit his Excellency anticipates great benefit, by aiding in the solution of many problems with respect to which much has yet to be learnt in India from the results of late European inquiry and discussions." Finally, Sir Alexander is requested to supply Miss Carpenter with all the information she might require in furtherance of the object of her visit.

Through the kindness of her shipmate, Mr. Barrister Ram-mohun Ghose, she was introduced to several Parsee gentlemen and their wives, the former speaking English fluently, and being otherwise well educated. She was hospitably received, not only by the Government, but by all the principal officers of Government, and most cordially welcomed by the upper classes of natives. As her object was to spend only six months in India, she lost no time in proceeding into the interior, and accompanied by her native friend, whom she designates as Mr. Ghose, she proceeded by rail through Surat to Ahmedabad, the ancient capital of the Mahomedan kings of Guzerat. She there visited the jail, the hospitals, and the Native Vernacular High School of Youths preparing to enter college, as also the Normal School for Teachers. Here she found only one female school; and urged on those persons with whom she became acquainted the desirability of establishing normal schools for her own sex, preparatory to forming ordinary schools. It may as well be observed, once for all, that the rules of caste, which do not altogether preclude association, are still a barrier to the partaking of food in common, so that all schools, except the pupils be of one caste, must be confined to day schools. She visited one female school where she found eighty little girls, between the ages of six and eleven; after which time they are withdrawn, and even some of the latter were already betrothed. On asking where the school mistresses were, she found there were none; the education being conducted by men alone. She found this to be the case almost everywhere, and she made it her duty to urge on all who evinced any interest in female education, the necessity of establishing female normal schools. On visiting the High School for men, preparatory to entering college, she found the classes to consist of about thirty youths in each, whose ages varied from fourteen to twenty. On being asked what was their object in studying to take degrees, they everywhere invariably replied,—“For the purpose of obtaining some Government situation.” She regretted very much that education seemed confined entirely to the upper classes, but was told it was enough for them to educate themselves. Miss Carpenter examined several of the elder scholars in English literature, both in prose and poetry. In arithmetic and mathematics she found the natives peculiarly adept. They explained the cause of the eclipse which had lately taken place with clearness and accuracy, and evidently saw the absurdity of the common Hindu superstition of that phenomenon. On Sunday Miss Carpenter attended the Missionary Church at Serkhej, a short distance from Ahmedabad. The service being in Guzeratti she could not understand it, but it was accompanied by all the ceremonies of a Christian community; after which, in the evening, she attended a Sunday-school maintained by the Missionaries. The above is an abstract of eighty-one pages in Miss Carpenter's first volume, and I am reminded that I must be brief in describing her visits to other parts. Before her immediate departure she resolved to visit Poona, where the first Normal native school and college had been founded by the Hon. Mount-Stuart Elphinstone forty-five years before. She was induced to visit Poona on another account, for she was desirous of seeing a grand leée to be held by the Governor, Sir B. Frere, previous to his quitting India, on which occasion the several native feudatory chiefs of the Southern Mahratta country were to be present. The Governor was attended by a numerous staff, and, among others, by Sir Alexander Grant, Bart., the Inspector-general of Education on that side of India.

On her arrival at Poona Miss Carpenter visited the schools, which she speaks of as particularly good, and most popular. She makes mention of a native gentleman who told her he had received all his education gratuitously from benevolent persons; that his father had spent Rs. 30,000 (£3,000) on his marriage, but would not have spent Rs. 3,000 (£300) for his education. Miss Carpenter also visited four educational establishments for youths, a branch school, a high school, a mission school, and a Normal training school. There were, in all, 137 boys' schools, and 7,051 scholars, but only three girls' schools, with 154 pupils. Besides these, there was a mission day school, having from 600 to 700 youths. “There and elsewhere the superintendent missionary candidly owned that their schools are not sought after for the sake of Scripture instruction, but to obtain instruction at a cheaper rate than at the other seminaries. They hoped, however, the influence of the Scriptural instruction had its effect on their future lives.” There was also a missionary boarding school for young girls, in which about twenty little Brahmin girls attended as day scholars. There is, besides, in Poona, a small orphanage school for girls, supported by resident ladies.

“English girls are not forgotten in India. In Bombay there are large boarding schools, both for the sons and the daughters of soldiers, where the children appeared healthy and happy.”

In conclusion, Miss Carpenter observes the great subject of female education occupied a large share of her attention. Throughout the Bombay Presidency education has made great progress within the last eighteen or twenty years, especially among that class of the male population who have benefited by scholastic education. But the universal cry is for female teachers, which can only be obtained through Normal schools, superintended in the first instance by English ladies. I. B. Oriental Club.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE PEASANTRY.

The Hindoo Runjika says, that notwithstanding all the advantages offered to the country under the British rule, the poor are utterly ignorant of them, and consequently do not give the English the credit of being just rulers. This is owing to the Government not having done the labouring classes of the country any direct benefit. Railways have been made, roads have been constructed; but what are these to the labourer? they can only be enjoyed and appreciated by the rich. Question the Mofussil labourer as to his opinion regarding the English; he will inform you that the aim of the present rulers is to amass riches, but they care not for the welfare of their subjects. May he not with truth make such a statement since he has to suffer every oppression to which the inventive mind of the landholder can subject him? He has his entertainments—the ryots pay the cost; the Government taxes him, the ryots are compelled to refund the amount fourfold. In short, the landholder extorts money by all manner of means from his ryots, who submissively pay all demands, for they have no alternative. They cannot assert their rights, and Government will not befriend them. It might be said that the Court of Justice is open to them. But dare they appear to prosecute their lord? They would, without fail, lose their suits, and with it all their worldly possessions, which would be confiscated by the landholder. Now, if the authorities wish to release the labouring classes from this state of abject bondage, the first step in the matter would be to appoint such men in the civil service as are noted not only for their learning, but also for their good character. It is the overbearing conduct of these officials that encourages the zemindar, who is often on terms of intimacy with them, in oppressing his ryots.

WOMEN IN INDIA.

The Udula Bandhub, or the Woman's Friend, notices the Countess of Mayo having danced with the Maharajah of Jeypore, and adds that the Rajah of Puttiala is determined to outdo the Maharajah by expending Rs. 50,000 in a party to be given in honour of the Countess. He asks whether her Excellency will dance there also; he hopes not; for then all the Rajahs will in turn present invitations, and there will be much waste of money. In a long article on the degraded state of native women, the editor suggests the formation of a society for the protection of females. He refers to the very brutal manner in which women are frequently treated by their husbands, and since there has been a law passed for the prevention of cruelty to animals, he thinks it is the duty of his countrymen to form a society to protect females from gross abuse.

THE DEAD SEASON IN INDIA.

The Friend of India remarks that, deprived of outside topics of interest, India has very few resources with herself for breaking the monotony of the Dead Season. Our monster turnips take the form of an advance of the Russians upon the Oxus, while a two-headed calf is at the best but a Pathan raid in the Hazara, the occurrence of which Government seems to consider itself as much bound to deny as if it were proposed to hold it responsible for the damages. Even Afghanistan, to the domestic broils of which the Indian press has anxiously looked for its leading subjects during the past four years, is at rest, and shows no disposition to make any return for the subsidy of twelve lakhs in the shape of gladiatorial contests for the edification of the Anglo-Indian public. But educated as we all are to the importance of Afghan politics, we are far from sure that the interest in them lies much below the surface. The general ignorance of the country, its people and its history, the varying stage of its politics, one party giving place to another before its acquaintance has been made, and a recollection of past discomfiture and disasters do much to counteract any substantial interest in its fortunes. If the Star of India were to be offered to all the Anglo-Indians who at this moment, and without premeditation, could tell who was the mother of Abdul Rahman Khan and the great-grandfather of the Ameer Dost Mohammed, we do not believe that the ranks of the Most Exalted Order would receive a large accession. The Russian question is of more general importance, but its shape is, as yet, to most people undefined. As for minor internal topics they are almost wholly wanting during the Dead Season, or they are such as interest only sections of the community. The vagaries of the native journals are too common and too badly translated to afford even a laugh. The provincial press seems utterly oblivious of its duty to cull monstrosities for the amusement of the lieges, and yields itself to the embraces of the dull season with a resignation that would be touching if it were not painful to its contemporaries. Many are the groans that affected home journalism utters over the deadness of a few of the pleasantest months of the English year, and many the attempts to show dexterity in breaking the monotony of the silly season, the man of straw set up by journalism itself. The avenging Nemesis of a bored public could wish the writers no greater punishment than to be compelled to ply their calling in India throughout the six months of the hot weather and the Dead Season. But there is this consolation, that the saying is even more true of India than of Europe—happy is the nation which has no history. However dead the season to the languid eye of the foreign observer, there is life beneath the surface.

NEW FIELDS FOR RETRENCHMENT.

The Friend of India recommends the Duke of Argyll to call for the figures which show the cost to India of the overland transport service. Let him ask how many men were sent home in 1868 and calculate the cost. It will be found that each man costs India £200 from country to country. The British India Steam Navigation Company submitted a scheme years ago, by which each would have cost £35, a sixth of that, and officers only £45 a head. Steamers lie at Bombay with the full complement of officers and men for eight out of the twelve months. The officers and men in each number some 250 souls. The Peninsular and Oriental Company could do the work of transport, supplying separate steamers in excess of those required by the public, for half a million per annum. Our present system costs one and a half million. The evils found on this side of the desert are equally great on the other. Another terrible item of waste, daily increasing waste, is the pension establishment of the native army. It costs nearly a quarter of a million sterling every year. We write most positively of Bengal. Take the respective strengths of the Bengal armies of 1847 and 1858, and put the amount of invaliding between 1847 and 1857 against that of 1858 to 1868. The pensions of the Bengal army, rightly forfeited by 1857, except where the pensioner was shown to have done us service, should not to-day be a charge on our revenues; but to that extravagant injustice to the tax-payer another has been added. We insist upon a smart army. Among Asiatics life and strength have no long duration, and invaliding committees clear the ranks with supreme indifference to considerations of finance. Daily the pension list mounts up. With 40,000,000 of men to choose from we should enlist for twelve years only, with discharge and one year's pay as bonus at the end of that period. That this may not flood the country with unemployed soldiers, determine some average age at which the black warrior can be let loose with safety. Enlist men at ages from twenty to forty, making the service one of twenty instead of twenty-two years. Entering the army at eighteen, the discharged soldier at thirty years of age would not be in a position to plead decrepitude. Certainly the old notion of buying devotion by the payment of pensions proved baseless in 1857. The best of the ex-soldiers would be available for the police—a cheap provision for them, whilst giving to that body something of tone and discipline. Again, look into the cost of passage money paid to officers sent home on quasi duty to depots and of others brought out without advantage to the public service; the difficulty is great; the opportunity of serving the public, by indicating fair and judicious means of retrenchment, is equally large, and largest of all is the danger of wrong and unsound cheese-paring.

THE VICEROY.—The Viceroy and Lady Mayo reached Umballa on the 19th Oct., and became the guests of Major Tighe, the Deputy Commissioner of Umballa. Lord Mayo left the following morning by special train for Loodiana. From the banks of the Sutlej, he and those with him went in trolleys to Phillour, where the railway contractors provided a sumptuous dejeuner. The bridge works were afterwards inspected, and (of course) gave satisfaction. After the sumptuous dejeuner dissatisfaction would have shown a want of good taste. The Mofussilite states that "twenty additional spans will have to be constructed, so that the bridge will not be completed before another twelvemonths, but the Lahore section will be open to Jullunder on the 15th proximo, and to Phillour next February, trains to Jullunder having already been run, though not for the purposes of traffic." The Viceregal party returned to Umballa by 5 p.m. and left thence by the ordinary passenger train the same night for Meerut. It is believed that Lord Mayo will halt at Cawnpore, on his way down, for a day's shooting. We do not know who is Secretary to Government in the Shikar Department, but in this case that officer, whoever he may be, has not given good advice. His Excellency should come to Allahabad a day earlier than he intended, and leave (if it must be so) a day sooner. He should spend the day thus gained at Sukte-gurgh, ten miles from the Pahari (between Mirzapore and Chunar) station on the E. I. Railway. It is the most accessible and prettiest spot where there is really good shooting in all India.—Pioneer, Oct. 25.

STATION TALK.

PESHAWUR, Oct. 16.—Shahzadah Mohamed Junnoor, Extra Assistant Commissioner of Kohat, died of cholera on the 12th instant. His son, grandson, and two servants fell victims to the disease shortly afterwards. Sickness has not yet left the station.

SEERAPORE, Oct. 20.—We have been very gay this week. Last Monday we had races, and yesterday soldiers' games, finishing off with a theatrical entertainment given by the men of the 260th Rifles. To-day there are to be races again; if I can I will give you a detailed account of them. The cold weather seems to be setting in very slowly here. Whilst I write a heavy flight of locusts is passing over the station.

DELHI, Oct. 22.—My faithful mercury (I mean that in my thermometer) marked only 64 degs. this morning at sunrise, and that in a verandah room. Outside the air was so sharp that a brisk walk in real cold weather clothing was scarcely sufficient to bring the blood into circulation, and even then my calves, or what I choose to call by that name, were rather chilly in my "ribbed knicker-bocker hose." Even during the day the heat is very bearable now, and we have promise of a sharp and prolonged cold season. The temperature is at least ten degrees lower this year than it was last at the corresponding time. Maharaja Scindiah came in last evening from Meerut by the five P.M. train; there was no salute and nothing in the shape of attention as far as I know, beyond what was paid by the station-masters and other railway officials; the reason why may be because no one in Delhi knew his Highness was coming; indeed I don't think he knew it himself until he was well off. If anybody had told him ten years ago that he could attend a reception of the Governor-general and hold a Durbar himself in Meerut one morning, and be in Delhi the same evening, he would have considered it anything but raja baat. General Abbot, agent of the Delhi Railway, was up here to-day, but only for an hour or so, I believe. The Commissariat Office here is to be removed to Meerut by the 1st proximo. I wish I could tell you that the post-office and telegraph office were removed from Deriowganj and outside the Cashmere Gate; they are very inconvenient where they are.

NYNCE TAL, Oct. 19.—You ought to see all the preparations being made for the visit of the Governor-general. The cricket ground is covered with tents; where they all come from is a wonder to me, and the flocks of sheep, geese, turkeys, and all kinds of good things that have been got up from Bareilly make one almost wish to be a Governor-general, or else on his staff. Considering that his Excellency only stays two days, he will have enough to do; there is to be a grand reception or levee there in the evening, an At Home at Government-house to meet their Excellencies the Governor-general and Countess Mayo, preceded, I hear, by a grand dinner to all the swells, and about ditto for the next day, after which they will all be off to Rance Khet. His Honour the Lieutenant-governor leaves for Allahabad directly the Governor takes his departure, and will be present there to receive the Viceroy, when I fancy all the affairs of the North-West Provinces will be taken of and considered. As I shall be here till the end of the month I hope to give you a description of all the grand doings; it is, however, a pity they did not take place sooner, as the station is now getting very empty. It often seems to me a great pity that officers and others who have come up here to recover from sickness contracted in the plains should have to hurry away just as the most health-restoring beautiful month in all the year has come on. I think that instead of the 15th officers ought to be allowed till the end of October. I know of several men in a still weak state who have had to hurry away to rejoin their regiments. The Nynce Tal Protestant School got up some time ago by Dr. Condon is doing exceedingly well, there being some fifty or sixty scholars attending it. The Lord Bishop during his late visit went to see it, and was much pleased with it, and he has consented to allow it to go under the Diocesan Board. This school will be a great boon to the poorer classes living in stations near to Nynce Tal, and who formerly had to go to the expense of sending their children to Ma-soorie or Simla, or worse still, keep them at home and give them no education at all. Lady Muir with her usual kindness takes a great interest in this institution, and on Saturday last had all the little people up to Government-house, and gave them a grand treat in the way of tea and cakes, and after that a magic lantern exhibition. I hear the little ones were highly delighted.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SEPARATION OF THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS FROM THE DIOCESE OF CALCUTTA.—The islands and territories known as the Straits Settlements, consisting of Prince of Wales Island, the island of Singapore, and the town and fort of Malacca have, by an Act dated the 9th of August, 1869, been separated from the diocese of Calcutta, and are no longer subject to the authority of the bishop of that diocese.

THE CASE OF MAJOR GLASSE.—It is reported from Lahore that Major Glasse, the defendant in the "Perozepore case"—a case similar to that of Capt. Gillespie at Kurrachee—was tried by the Chief Court of the Panjab on the 19th October, and acquitted.

MAJOR SLADEN'S REPORT.—We observe that Major Sladen's official narrative of the expedition to Momein is now likely to be published, with a few omissions. Another expedition, it is said, will not be sent to Tadi until the good faith of the Burmese Government is so established that its professions of hearty assistance may be relied on. Major McMahon has been ordered, by telegraph, to Mandalay and Captain Stover to Bhamo.

TURKISTAN.—The Ameer is seriously contemplating proceeding himself to Turkistan. Affairs there are decidedly threatening. General Daood Shah has formally impeached Naib Mahomed Alum Khan, the civil Governor, before the Ameer, accusing him of driving the inhabitants into the opposite party by his extortions and oppression. The Ameer has made a partial distribution of pay to his troops.—Pioneer, Oct. 25.

SIR WILLIAM MANSFIELD.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief was expected to leave Simla on his inspection tour on the 5th November. His Excellency will be accompanied by Colonel Lumsden, the Quartermaster-General, and one aide-de-camp. This, his Excellency's last inspection, is likely to be a very searching one. At the close of the month Sir William Mansfield will reach Meera Meer, where he will make some slight stay; after which, on his route to Calcutta, it is believed he will inspect all the military stations on the way, and perhaps Oude may also be visited. His Excellency will not reach Calcutta before the 8th or 10th of December.

INDIAN COAL.—We learn that when the trial of the Chanda coal, made by the G.I.P. Railway officials took place, two Government engineers, who were associated with them in the experiment, reported favourably on the coal, in so far that though its caloric generating capabilities are only half as powerful as those of English coal, still the difference in cost of the two fuels will give a saving to consumers of over twenty shillings a ton. The coal which has just been tested was merely surface coal, and it is fully expected that a much better description may be obtained when deeper strata are reached. We anxiously await the report of the railway authorities on this very interesting and important matter.—Central India Times.

A "LARK" AT SIMLA.—Simla, Oct. 19.—Simla has always been considered a quiet place, but the other night the disciples of the late Lord Waterford distinguished themselves by their nocturnal exploits; sign-boards and address-boards made most extraordinary exchanges. Mr. O. M.'s board was transferred to General B's gate; General B's board to Crayden's the bootmaker; Mr. Crayden's board to the library; and that of the undertaker's, I believe, to the house of Mr. Belcham, the bailiff. There were several other similar exchanges made with the boards. What could the police have been about that they never discovered the perpetrators?

A GOVERNMENT AUDITOR OF PUBLIC COMPANIES.—There is to be a Government Auditor of all Joint-Stock and such like public companies, and it is very probable that Mr. R. A. Hollingbery, the Assistant Secretary to the Government of India, in the Finance Department will be the first Government Auditor; the salary of the office will be, perhaps, from two or three thousand rupees a month. A better man than Mr. Hollingbery for the appointment could scarcely be found, but we fear he may not accept of it; in that case it is likely that Mr. G. W. Kellner, the Inspector General of Accounts, may be offered the place, or it may be added on to his present office, a doubling-up that may secure economy without disadvantage of any kind.—Jubbulpore Chronicle.

BREACH OF TRUST.—We regret to hear that Mr. J. Nowill, Superintendent Government Telegraphs, Assam Division, has by order of Government been arrested on a charge of criminal breach of trust at Nagpore. The alleged defalcations refer to a period some ten or twelve years back, during which time, in accordance with departmental usage, the accounts have remained unaudited. Twelve months ago Mr. Nowill was deputed to Nagpore for the purpose of adjusting his accounts, which had been carried from Hyderabad, the former head-quarters of his division. Vouchers however were not forthcoming in many instances, and hence the charge. We do not advocate undue leniency; but we certainly think that Mr. Nowill ought, under the circumstances, to be admitted to bail until such time as the offence with which he has been charged is proved against him.—Delhi Gazette.

CHOLERA AT MEERUT.—On Sunday there was a fresh outburst of cholera at Meerut. Three men of her Majesty's 105th Light Infantry, each living as far apart from the other two as was possible within the limits of the regimental lines, were seized almost simultaneously; two died within a few hours; the third was convalescent on the evening of the 19th. Cases have been occurring at short intervals in the bazars and native city. Two or three days passed without a case; then five or ten persons have been carried off in a single night; the disease is clearly sporadic. We hear later that there were no more cases of cholera at Meerut between the 17th and 21st instant. Sergeant Rose, of the 105th Light Infantry, one of the three men seized on Sunday, died on Tuesday evening. He survived the other two, and hopes had been entertained of his recovery.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 22.

CAPTAIN ROSS'S INVENTION.—The reported invention of Capt. Ross, R.A., of a composition for preventing the rusting of iron, is not unlikely to receive the attention of the Government of India. The invention is secured by her Majesty's letters patent, and has been specified as a composition which applied to the clean surface of iron or other metals, chemically combines with it to form in the case of iron "a coating of iron itself but changed in character, which will not oxydise even if steeped in water," for, we suppose, any length of time. Some pieces of iron and steel have been operated on before competent judges at Simla, with, as we have been informed, satisfactory results. The inventor considers that as far as fresh water is concerned no further trials are necessary, and he is now desirous, we believe, to obtain leave, without extra pay, to some seaport, Calcutta, Bombay, or Kurrachee for instance, to try his composition on some ships to be sent thence to sea. Capt. Ross entertains the fullest confidence that the composition will stand salt as well as it does fresh water. There can be no overrating the importance of an invention that will effectually prevent the rusting of iron.—Mofussilite.

MILITARY.—A Battery F Brigade Royal Horse Artillery will leave Umballa en route to Benares on the 25th inst. The 4th Bengal Cavalry will leave Bareilly on the 20th instant.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 23.—We hear from Ghazepore that Sergeant G. Winter, of the Stud Department there, committed suicide on the 18th inst. by hanging himself with a punkah rope; the cause of the act was not known.—Pioneer, Oct. 22.—We regret to hear that as late as the 15th there were a few fresh cases of cholera amongst the Europeans at Peshawur, two in H.M.'s 36th, and one in the Royal Artillery. The epidemic is still raging in some of the villages, where the mortality is said to be very great.—The following are said to be the troops to be asson bled at Meean Meer in the first week of February next, for the military display in honour of the Duke of Edinburgh:—Two troops Royal Horse Artillery, viz., D-F and F-F Brigades; two field batteries, viz., H-8th and D-19th Brigades; two regiments of British cavalry, viz., 5th Lancers and 20th Hussars; two regiments of native cavalry, viz., 9th and 19th Bengal Cavalry; three regiments of British infantry, viz., 39th and 85th Foot, and 92nd Highlanders; five regiments of native infantry, viz., 3rd, 14th, 21st, 28th, and 35th Regiments.

OPIMUM STOCK.—The provision opium to be brought forward for sale by public auction in the year 1870 will consist of 25,800 chests of Behar, and 22,200 chests of Benares opium, being of the three seasons 1865-66, 1868-69, and 1869-70, in the following proportions:—

	Chests.
Behar—Reserve of 1865-66	1
Supply from 1868-69	25,244
Ditto 1869-70	555
	25,800
Benares—Reserve of 1865-66	1
Supply from 1868-69	21,650
Ditto 1869-70	549
	22,200

The reserve of one chest of Behar and one chest of Benares opium of 1865-66 will be first sold, and will form a part of the quantity to be sold in January, 1870; and 555 chests of Behar and 549 chests of Benares opium of the provision of 1869-70 will be sold in December, 1870, after the sale of the opium of the previous season. The sales will be held on or about the dates specified below. The Board, however, reserve to themselves the right of altering these dates, should circumstances render it expedient to do so:—

CENTRAL ASIAN EXPLORATIONS.—We learn from a Calcutta contemporary that Mr. Hayward, the young savant specially sent out by the Royal Geographical Society, and whose fortune it has been to be the first scientific Englishman to penetrate into and return from Kashgar, has been for some time staying at Murree, previous to his starting again to renew his explorations in Central Asia. The Supreme Government has refused to grant him any marks of special recognition, or any demi-official powers which might lead the country into complications with the wild nations through whom he must pass. "If Mr. Hayward succeeds in his intention of starting again, and endeavouring to force his way across the Pamir plateau and down the course of the Oxus into Russia, he will," says the English- man, "place himself in the foremost rank of the travellers of this age. He will also win for his country the honour of having explored a tract which forms the theatre of the most extended military operations that Central Asia has seen since the days of Tamerlane—a tract which is the more interesting at the present moment, as we believe the Russians are organising an exploring party from their own side, and it remains to be seen which of the two great European Powers will be the first to accomplish the work. At the same time, it is unquestionably an enterprise of very imminent peril."

STATION TALK.

WALTAIR, Sept. 7.—I saw with deep regret the sad story of the young English girl who had been punished for concealing the birth of her child. She came out to Vizagapatam with Mrs. Leeming, the wife of the chaplain. The downward course for a young woman fresh out from home, in the position of a servant in a large military station, is a very easy one. It was rendered almost necessary in the case of Joyce Browne by her being dismissed from her situation, and consequently compelled to live among the families of the soldiers, until shame compelled her to leave Vizag and go to Madras. It is very hard that the laws should punish the victim instead of the wrong-doer; and it seems disgraceful that ladies should be allowed to bring out young maid servants and to throw them on the world again instead of sending them home when their services are required no longer. To the disgrace almost certain to fall upon a young woman so treated has been added another—that of going into a common gaol. Unless those who are in some measure responsible for bringing her to India do something for her, what is to become of her? In England there are homes for fallen but not depraved women. These are excellent institutions. In them the victim may hide her face from the world for a time, but mostly she comes forth a new creature, with habits of industry, cheerfulness, and piety. Could not such a home be found in Madras? Lord Napier has done much to provide comfortable quarters for the real criminals of the country; it could scarcely be a less genial occupation for his lordship to provide such an asylum as I have described.

BANGALORE, Oct. 21.—The police have been distinguishing themselves, as usual. I give you an incident that was related to me the other day, and it is just as likely to be true as not. A native peon happened to see a boy playing on the road side, and ordered him to be off; the boy appears not to have heard, and the result was a smart blow from a baton that broke his back. What do you think of that for a specimen of a policeman's way of doing his duty? There was a case of murder, too, on Wednesday. The dead body of a boy, about six years of age, was discovered in a well near the railway station, with his neck twisted out of shape: he was the son of a respectable native merchant, and had been sent out to play in the streets covered with jewels; the latter were not found on his body, and the only conclusion came to is that he has been very cruelly murdered. Bishop Cotton's School has created quite a sensation; the boys are now clothed with caps and gowns. Capt. Cole, I hear, is coming to Bangalore in place of Colonel Puckle, Deputy Superintendent of the District, who has gone home. Capt. Cole, as you know, was one of the passengers in the Carnatic, and is very popular in Coorg. I believe there was some doubt of his being allowed to resume his appointment on account of overstaying his leave, but all that has been satisfactorily arranged. Report says that we are to have an Inspector General of Police. If so, he will not be appointed until the beginning of the official year. Major Twiss, of the Artillery, goes to Bombay and Secunderabad soon; he is a first rate amateur actor, and the people here talk of getting up a performance next week of the United dramatic talent of the place, in which he will be requested to play for the time: if the thing does come off, there is certain to be a bumper house. There are likely to be changes in the commission shortly, but nothing is decided yet. The Small Cause Court does not appear to be popular, and the Judicial Assistant's Court is more thought of. We are having delightful weather, the crops promise to be a success, and the tanks are full.—Athenæum Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

INAM COMMISSION.—The last finishing stroke to the Inam Commission in Madras is to be given by the present financial crisis. The Madras Mail learns that the Government of that presidency has resolved to do away with the department altogether. Why should the Alienation Department in this presidency exist a moment longer than the Inam Commission in Madras, involving as it does an expense of two thousand rupees per mensem to Government?—Indu Prakash Oct. 25.

THE PARADISE OF THE PARIAHS.—We shall certainly recommend all pariahs of our acquaintance to emigrate to Hyderabad, where every day is a dog-day, and Sirius—or rather Sir Salar Jung—is always in the ascendant. According to the Meerut Gazette, "nine maunds of cooked bread are daily distributed to the city dogs which wander about the streets." Such a beatific state of things must be almost incredible to the dogs of Lucknow, who, if they have looked into the Sanitary Report for Oudh, must have read that the Health Officer "thinks that all dogs which have no home but the streets should be mercilessly destroyed;" and if they have that signification which the books of our childhood used to vouch for (in words of one syllable), we may look for an exodus of dogs from Lucknow, and a general emigration to Hyderabad, the paradise of pariahs.—Pioneer.

DEATH OF MR. J. A. PINSON, C.E.—We regret to announce the death of Mr. John Abberley Pinson, C.E., deputy chief engineer of the Madras Railway. Mr. Pinson had been in the company's service for about eleven years, and had previously been engaged on railways in Italy. On arriving in India he was made assistant to Mr. Heppel, the then chief engineer. About five years ago he was appointed deputy chief on the permanent way, and held that post up to the day of his death; he had also twice acted as chief engineer. In Mr. Pinson (says the Madras Mail) the company have lost a good and able servant. He was an excellent railway engineer, and was much esteemed by his brother officers both for his professional abilities and his social qualities. It is to him that the public are principally indebted for the eminently satisfactory condition in which the open portions of the Madras Railway are maintained. About a month ago Mr. Pinson went on his usual quarterly tour of inspection, and it was during this tour that he appears to have contracted the disease—abscess of the liver—to which, at the age of forty-four, he has fallen a victim. He was buried in the Cathedral Cemetery on Oct. 23.

MILITARY.—We learn from Madras that the movements of the A Battery 9th Brigade, D Battery 20th Brigade, and C Battery 23rd Brigade, Royal Artillery, previously notified, are cancelled, and the following removals are ordered:—A Battery 9th Brigade from England to the Mount, C Battery 23rd Brigade from Trichinopoly to Bangalore.—We hear that Lieutenant Russel, R.A., stationed at the Mount, is to succeed Lieutenant Clark Kennedy as aide-de-camp to Lieut.-Gen. Sir R. Smyth.—Madras Mail, Oct. 23.—The rumour of a contemplated reduction of the Madras army finds some slight confirmation from a Madras paper. "There is," we are told, "a sinister rumour circulating in military circles at the presidency to the effect that three more Madras regiments are likely to be sacrificed to the deficit! It is also said that his Excellency General McCleverty, as regardless of self as any old Roman, and with a noble devotion to economy beyond all praise, has recommended the abolition of his own office, and that the present incumbents of the Adjutant and Quarter Master General's will be the last of the kind that we shall ever see in Madras again—the last of the Mohicans in fact! We are not authorised to state how far these rumours are reliable."

AN IMPORTANT EXPERIMENT.—The Government of India have found that the supply to European troops of meat rations by the Commissariat through direct agency is a more satisfactory arrangement than the present contract system, and the local Government has, on the recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, ordered that it should be tried at a few stations of this presidency, a report of the result of the experiment being submitted after a year's experience. A comparison of the financial result of the two systems in Bengal has shown a saving in favour of the agency amounting to Rs 150,000 in eleven months. Apart from the financial superiority of the agency system, the quality of the meat has been greatly and incontestably improved. This is attributed to the interest of the contractor to supply meat at the smallest possible cost to himself, whereas the primary object of the Commissariat officer is to give the best possible meat ration in his power within a fair reasonable limit as to cost, so as to prevent rejection, and to afford no grounds for complaint against his management. While, however, the cost of the beef ration has been considerably reduced, that of the mutton ration has been increased. This increase is not attributed to any scarcity of, or to any great extent to enhanced prices for sheep, but to the fact of its having been found absolutely necessary, in order to give the British soldier a fairly eatable mutton ration to feed the sheep upon gram more or less according to the season of the year.—Madras Times.

Bombay.

CIVIL.—We hear that Mr. Watt, the Assistant Judge and Session Judge of Poona, is to be appointed Senior Assistant Session Judge of Sholapore.

CAPTURE OF SLAVES.—H.M.'s Nymph, Captain Meara, has arrived at Bombay from the East Coast of Africa. She has taken 19 dhows with 640 slaves this season. In cutting out a dhow which was embarking slaves Lieutenants Clarke and Hodson, who commanded the boats were wounded, and a seaman named Mitchell killed.

THE WAGHEELS.—The Wagheers are reported to have plundered the village of Sahapur, subject to Nugger. One of the garasias and a few mekrances of that State are said to have united with them; but all fled on being pursued by a party from Nugger.—Gujarat Mitra, Oct. 24.

AGRICULTURE.—Some interesting experiments were recently made by the authorities to popularise the use of the agricultural machinery of Europe in Gujarat. Mr. Borradaile, the Collector of Ahmedabad, has described them in detail in a report which has been placed at the disposal of the press. At the suggestion of the Revenue Commissioner, N.D., Government have sanctioned the extension of the old Tuccavee rules regarding the purchase of improved agricultural implements and machinery by the ryots.—Native Opinion.

THE AGENT OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—The Bombay Gazette makes the welcome announcement that Mr. H. P. Le Messurier has been confirmed as agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway; and our contemporary very justly observes that a better selection could not have been made, either in the interest of the public or the company—we would add, or of Government. Mr. Le Messurier unites in himself the best qualities of his predecessors—the energy and practical knowledge of Knox, the wisdom and judiciousness of Rivers, and the genialness and affability of Osborn. He is certainly the man whom Government, the public, and the railway establishment in India would have chosen if the election had been left to them.—Deccan Herald, Oct. 29.

LOCUSTS.—The locusts have not lost or plunged themselves into the sea, as one might have concluded on seeing them following the course of the Taptee towards its mouth. They have kept themselves to the land, their next and probably the last place of visit being Kattiawar, where, on account of the heat, they have died off in numbers. Their powers of committing devastation seem to have gradually abated since their departure from Ahmedabad. Broach, Surar, and Kattiawar may be said to have greatly escaped their devouring propensities, though the grain dealers and others of some places in Kattiawar have, on the pretence of their arrival, sent up their prices to a distressing point.

DEATH OF THE RAJAH OF DHIRANGDHRA IN KATTIAWAR.—From the Kattiawar Agency Gazette of Oct. 19th we learn of the death, on Saturday, the 16th, of his Highness Rajah Rammulingjee, of Dhirangdhra, Knight Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. "This Prince's prudent and benign government," says Captain Anderson, "the confidence and affection with which he was regarded by his Bhayad, his great and well deserved influence throughout Jhalwar, will long cause his name to be remembered in Kattiawar as that of a wise and just ruler." The late Rajah died of fever of three days' duration, at the ripe old age of sixty-one years, and after a reign of twenty-six years. His eldest son, Mamsingjee, aged thirty, has succeeded to the gaddie; he is said to be a promising and amiable Prince, and it is to be hoped will follow in the footsteps of his late father.

CAPTAIN GILLESPIE'S CASE.—We hear that at length the orders of the Commander-in-Chief, on the subject of the charges pending against Captain Gillespie, have reached the military authorities at Kurrachee. They are understood to be to the effect that that officer be handed over to the jurisdiction of the civil power, in regard to the matters laid to his charge. In that case Captain Gillespie will be arraigned in the usual manner on a prosecution by the police authorities before Mr. Gibbons, the magistrate, who on the evidence adduced in the matter will exercise his discretion as to the prima facie necessity, or otherwise, of committing the case; and will also rely on his own opinion, formed from a consideration of the case, de novo, as to the stringency or otherwise of the preliminary measures to be adopted in the matter. Captain Gillespie is fortunate in the circumstance that this important part of the case will be thus placed in the hands of an officer on whom ill-informed clamour is as little likely to have effect on the one hand as prejudice or favour is on the other. His thorough knowledge of the general character of the evidence he will have to sift in this peculiar case, as well as the astute discrimination which long experience has given him, in dealing with exceptional results of all degrees of gravity springing from exceptional causes, will at the same time ensure justice to the prosecution, fair play to the accused, and due consideration to the public concern which society has in the serious matter involved. We shall watch the case anxiously on all the accounts, but we shall not lightly venture on remark or criticism of any sort as the proceedings go on.—Sindian, Oct. 20.

MEDICAL CERTIFICATES.

Oct. 13.—No. 1,046.—In view to prevent inconvenience, the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that military officers of the Bengal Presidency proceeding to Bombay to appear before the standing medical committee to obtain sick leave to Europe, are to provide themselves with two copies of their medical cases, &c. (both of which must be taken by themselves), one for their own use in Europe, and the other for record in the office of the standing medical committee at Bombay.

RE-ORGANISATION OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

Simla, Oct. 13.—No. 1,047.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following paragraphs of a military letter from H.M.'s Secretary of State for India, No. 151, dated June 17:—

Para. 1. Your Excellency's letter, No. 410, dated Oct. 24 last, forwarding copies of correspondence on the subject of the re-organisation of the judge advocate general's dept. in India, has been considered by me in Council.

2. After careful consideration, your Government have arrived at a decided opinion that there should be one homogeneous department for India, having for its head a specially-selected barrister as judge advocate general (which has been prospectively sanctioned), who should be attached to the head-quarters of H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India.

That at each Presidency there should be a deputy judge advocate general—a military officer—selected for ability and departmental experience.

That these officers should transact business personally with their respective commanders in chief, and represent the local head of the department in each army, but all subordinate to, and in direct and intimate communication with, the judge advocate general for India.

That the divisional or district officers should have the designation of "deputy judge advocate," and be available for the employment in any Presidency.

I fully approve of these arrangements under which your Government anticipate that, when the system is brought into full operation, the number of deputy judge advocates may be reduced, without impairing the efficiency of the department.

4. I also approve of your proposal to allow a staff salary of Rs. 1,200 to the office of deputy judge advocate general in Bengal, and Rs. 1,000 to the same office in Madras and Bombay respectively.

No. 1,048.—With reference to general order No. 1,017 of this date, the Governor General in Council is pleased to notify the following appointment:—

Mr. W. G. Romaine, barrister at law, to be judge advocate general in India, on a salary of £5,000 per annum, commencing from the date of his assuming charge of his office.

From the date of Mr. Romaine assuming charge of his office the designation of the several officers now at the head of the department in the three presidencies will be changed from that of judge advocate to deputy judge advocate general, but the existing incumbents will retain their present salaries.

The appointment of deputy judge advocate general at army head quarters as now existing will cease, and the officer now officiating in it will revert to his substantive position in the department.

The general officers commanding in chief in Madras and Bombay are empowered to submit to the Commander in Chief in India, for the opinion and advice of the judge advocate general all proceedings of general courts marshal on British officers and soldiers in the disposal of which they may experience difficulty or doubt.

After final disposal by the local commanders in chief, the proceedings of all general courts martial on British officers and soldiers are to be forwarded for the information of the judge advocate general, and for such observation as they may appear to him to call for—a course similar to that which is followed in the ultimate transmission of proceedings of general courts martial to the judge advocate general in London.

REDUCTIONS IN POLICE CHARGES.

RESOLUTION OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA (IN THE HOME DEPARTMENT) DATED OCT. 16.

The necessity for reduction of expenditure in all departments being urgent, it becomes an imperative duty to scrutinise the charges for police, which have now risen to a gross amount of nearly two-and-a-half millions sterling annually.* Even after allowing for the receipts from municipalities and other sources,* the cost has, during the last few years, greatly increased; and such reductions as can be made without impairing the efficiency of the service must be carried out as rapidly as circumstances will admit. Nor will the fact of any province having been hitherto allowed to have a fixed annual sum for its police be permitted to stand in the way of reductions of general application.

H.E. the Governor-general in Council would not desire to reduce the numbers or pay of constables, or otherwise to issue orders affecting the minor details of police administration, without previous reference to the local governments and administrations. But there are changes which may be made on general principles, conducing greatly to economy in administration, and yet, in the opinion of H.E. in Council, not injurious to efficiency. It may confidently be expected that all local governments and administrations will readily accept these changes, and do their best to support the Government of India in the efforts now being made to retrench all redundant expenditure.

The first of the reductions to be made is in the appointment of deputy inspector-general of police. The office has already been condemned as useless and abolished in the minor administrations under the Government of India, and there is no doubt that it may equally well be abolished elsewhere. In Bengal one officer of this rank has been recently appointed for special detective service, and would necessarily be retained for the present; but, with this exception, in all provinces the office of deputy inspector-general must be abolished. By these means fifteen appointments, costing annually in pay alone Rs. 2,28,000, will be dispensed with, and a further saving, estimated at the least at Rs. 72,000 on account of travelling allowances and establishments, will bring the total annual saving to three lakhs of rupees.

Another reduction which may be made is in the office of Assistant District Superintendent. The principal reason for maintaining this grade of officers is to train district superintendents, as it would be inexpedient to entrust the police charge of a district to a superintendent wholly without experience. There are also places in which it is desirable to station an assistant on detached duty, and virtually in charge of a district, as, for instance, in the Naga Hills in Assam. These cases, however, are exceptional. Ordinarily assistants are employed to aid district superintendents, although the work might be done as efficiently and more economically by experienced inspectors.

The number of assistants, therefore, may safely be reduced to the number required to train young officers for superintendents, and to serve on detached duty at places where an inspector would not suffice.

In regulation provinces it will be necessary to retain some assistants with the former object.

In the smaller non-regulation provinces, in fact in all, except perhaps the Punjab, it will be quite feasible to dispense altogether with assistant superintendents, except so far as their services are required for detached duty.

In carrying out this principle, it is estimated that the services of 107 assistant district superintendents may be dispensed with, causing a saving in pay alone of Rs. 4,50,000 annually; and if a moderate sum be added for travelling and other contingent expenses, the relief to the police budget will be under this head upwards of Rs. 5,00,000.

There will thus be a saving of 122 officers, and upwards of Rs. 8,00,000 per annum.

Other saving may doubtless be made, and it is believed that a further considerable sum can be struck off the police expenditure; but his Excellency in Council does not consider it desirable to order other retrenchments without previous reference to local Governments and administrations.

The Governor-general in Council requests that no appointments in the rank of deputy inspector general, or assistant district superintendent, be filled up either permanently or temporarily pending the receipt of further instructions, which will be issued in detail to each local Government and administration.

The Governor-general in Council desires further to express his conviction that, in giving effect to these reductions, endeavours will be made to absorb as far as possible the officers whose appointments are to be reduced, and to secure their employment, whether in their own provinces or those adjacent to them, as occasions occur, in other branches of the administration. In non-regulation provinces it will be easy to provide for the reductions by transferring to other appointments some of the police officers who are qualified for other local duties; and it may be remarked generally that in these provinces there is no objection whatever to promote police officers, who are properly qualified, to appointments in the general administration.

In all administrations openings will be found in the superintendents of central rails, in the new State railways, in the forest department, in the establishments to be created in the salt department in Oude and elsewhere, and in the arrangements for the employment of prisoners in large bodies on extramural labour.

For some military officers military appointments may gradually be found, and the Governor-general in Council has no doubt that their claims will receive full consideration from the Commander-in Chief of the armies to which they severally belong. In any case officers placed out of employ must have the preference over fresh candidates for any appointments for which they are fitted, and the Governor-general in Council will be guided in the disposal of his own patronage by the same principle until all the officers displaced are provided for.

The reductions should begin to take effect as vacancies occur, but they must be completed by March 31 next; for provision will not be made in next year's Budget for the appointments which will under these orders be reduced.

[The above order has been sent to local governments and administrations for information and guidance.]

* The receipts in 1868-69 were £277,237.

ENGLISH THE COLLOQUIAL LANGUAGE FOR INDIA.

At a meeting of the East India Association, held at the Westminster Palace Hotel, on Wednesday, November 17th, a paper was read by George Simmons, Esq., C.E., entitled, "The advantages of encouraging the English language to become the colloquial tongue of India, with a practical system for its development." After referring to the general advantages reaped by the inhabitants of Hindoostan, from the presence and government of the English, with the numerous improvements of the West, the lecturer enlarged on the duty of treating the natives of India with the firm but yet beneficent disposition of Englishmen associating with their neighbours for rendering India the England of the East; and with regard to the present character of its people with their hundred and more different languages, he opened out the benefits that would accrue from a general instruction in the English language, for not only was it apparent that natives of India are all very desirous of learning English, but that they are able to converse in the same with much greater facility than many of the people on the Continent of Europe. And though at first the propounding of so novel a course seemed to hint at a task of almost superhuman magnitude, yet, upon a due consideration of the present blank in the education of the people, the intercourse which the natives will be continually and increasingly holding with the English, the almost total deficiency in their own languages of any literature, especially of any serviceable to the advancement of civilisation, while on the other hand the literature of the English language affords such an ample field for the poorest in the country of improving themselves and extending the education they may receive at school at a nominal cost—one is led to believe that a wide benefit would be conferred upon India by instructing the peoples in the English tongue, so far as possible, that it may become the colloquial of future generations.

With this view the lecturer suggested that the English language should be the general medium for conveying instruction throughout India, and that a system of pictorial representations of words and short sentences, for preparing the minds of that large class at present unaccustomed to study, should be adopted.

In this way it is proposed to teach larger numbers in a class than could be taught by the present methods; for in general pronunciation by the class and conversation with the teacher the mind would be rendered more capable of appreciating the words and gathering with facility the ideas to be conveyed. It was proposed to extend this system throughout India, and as far as may be to assist the poorest in obtaining a knowledge of the English tongue, and thus, with comparatively little effort, lift the masses of the people into another arena of thought and habit of mind, which shall enable them to appreciate in its proper degree the knowledge and acquisitions of the Western world.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.

The half-yearly meeting was held on the 16th November, at the offices of the Corporation, Old Broad-street; Mr. George G. Nicol in the chair.

The report of the directors recommended an interim dividend of 4 per cent. for the half year.

The Chairman observed that as regarded figures the accounts were satisfactory. The liabilities showed an increase chiefly in the deposits, which had increased very considerably. The assets stood in a more satisfactory position as to amount, but that position was so far unsatisfactory in their not having been able to employ the whole of them. There was an increase of about £900,000 in coin and bullion standing against securities, which, though not conducive to profit, was an evidence of the sound position of the bank. The proprietors might feel some disappointment at the results of the profit and loss account for the half-year, but the disappointment of the directors was greater. Down to four or five months since the board hoped and expected to present to the shareholders a very satisfactory account, and the reason they had not done so might be ascribed to the very unfavourable state of trade in the East, and in China especially. The season in China had opened late, and altogether the causes of depression in trade had been greater than for many years past. The exchanges had been singularly unfavourable, and to these circumstances they might attribute the unsatisfactory state of affairs; still, considering the extraordinary difficulties they had had to encounter, the shareholders would, he apprehended, agree with him that the profit they had earned, which was about equal to 15 per cent, was encouraging. Although it usually happened that the first half-year was better than the second, they had every reason to hope that the current half-year would be better than the past, and it was satisfactory to know that although they had not been able to make much profit, they had made no loss. There was only one account still unadjusted, which in all probability would not be closed till the end of the year. Upon that there might possibly be a loss of about £1,200, and that, so far as they knew, was the whole. He was happy to be in a position to give the meeting the satisfactory assurance that of all the large amount of bills and securities held by the bank there was not one shilling in danger. (Cheers.) Among the causes of the unsatisfactory state of the accounts to a certain degree was the extreme irregularity, and the annoyance they had been subjected to in consequence of the telegraphic communication, as an illustration of which he might mention that that morning they had received a telegram twenty-two days from Galle. He was happy to say that there was now every reason to believe that direct telegraphic communication with India was on the eve of completion, and that they would soon be in direct communication with Singapore. When that was accomplished he had no hesitation in saying that banking in India and China would be as safe as banking here, as they would be in constant communication with every branch. The only other matter he had to refer to was the proposition of the directors to fill up the vacancy in the direction caused by the retirement of Mr. George May by the election of Mr. C. J. Erskine.

The Chairman, in reply to a shareholder, said the £12,000 applies solely to this year. The outstanding old debts have not been provided for in the present accounts. He expressed a hope at the last meeting that if 1869 was a good year, they would be enabled to provide for the whole of the losses. But they had been disappointed, for so far it had not been a good year, and they had only been able to carry forward £20,000 against those losses. How much more they might be in a position to carry forward at the close of the year he could not say, but the balance remaining after the present year would be very trivial. In conclusion he moved that Mr. C. J. Erskine be elected a director. This was carried unanimously, and the meeting separated.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY.—Captain A. S. Thain, Bengal Staff Corps, has been placed on the half-pay list.

THE ORIENTAL GAS COMPANY.—The directors of the Oriental Gas Company (Limited), in their report, recommend a distribution of 6 per cent., free of income-tax, making (with the interim payment of 4 per cent. on June 3 last) a total dividend of 10 per cent. for the year.

FIELD ARTILLERY EQUIPMENT.—The Globe regrets to learn that the Special Committee on Field Artillery Equipment for India, of which Major-General Eardley Wilnot is president, has been directed to close its proceedings and send in a report forthwith. The committee was on the point of finishing the few experiments required to render its report complete.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £200,000 in bills on India were received on the 17th inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta £182,500, and to Madras £17,500. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 11d. Tenders on those presidencies at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 29 per cent., above that price in full.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY.—At an extraordinary general meeting of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company on Monday, resolutions were passed accepting the proposal of the Secretary of State for India for the construction of the railway from Ahmedabad to Veerungam and Wudwan, particulars of which we have already given, and authorising the directors to raise the necessary capital.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY COMPANY.—The report of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company for the half-year ending 30th June last has been issued. The accounts show that the gross receipts of the railway and steamer traffic have amounted to £95,486—an increase of £2,301 over the revenue of the corresponding half of 1868. The net profits of the half-year declared, according to the rule laid down by Government, amount to £38,393. 1s. 8d. It is added that the gross receipts of the first fifteen weeks of the current year show an increase over those of the corresponding period of 1868, and that the way and works on the open line have been efficiently maintained.

ALBERT ASSURANCE COMPANY.—The winding up of the Albert Life Assurance Company bids fair to be a very long and tedious process—the longer on account of the ramifications of the company in India and the colonies. A formal notice has appeared from the solicitors for the official liquidators whereby creditors of the company “resident in India, the continent of Europe, and elsewhere out of the jurisdiction” of the Court of Chancery, are required to send in the particulars of their claims by the 30th of April next, the 30th of May having been appointed by Vice-Chancellor James for adjudicating upon them.

THE BRINDISI ROUTE.—Increased attention is being directed to the Brindisi route to and from India. On the morning of Saturday, Nov. 13, Bombay papers were received by this route to Oct. 23, in anticipation of the Marseilles mail. The letters by the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Delhi did not leave Marseilles until Saturday morning, Nov. 13, and therefore were not delivered in London till Monday morning, Nov. 15. In connection with the superiority of the Brindisi route, which is thus demonstrated, a company is in course of formation, under very respectable auspices, for carrying out a concession for the exclusive privilege of constructing docks at Brindisi, to accommodate the trade of the East.

THE BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY.—It appears from a Parliamentary return just issued that the total amount of the Banda and Kirwee prize fund, after deducting law expenses (upwards of £58,000), and agency commission at 1½ per cent. (£9,374 odd), amounted to £615,600. Of this one-twentieth (£30,780) was paid to the representatives of Lord Clyde and Sir George Whitlock in the proportion of four-fifths (£24,624) to the former, and one-fifth (£6,156) to the latter, leaving for general distribution £584,800. Three distributions had taken place, amounting in all to Rs. 750 (£75) a share. A number of despatches, memorials, and other documents relating to the distribution of the booty are included in the return.

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS FOR INDIA.—Her Majesty's Indian relief screw troopship Crocodile, Capt. Watson, embarked troops at Portsmouth on Saturday as per subjoined list, and sailed the next morning for Alexandria:—Lieut.-Col. Macpherson, 2nd battalion 24th Infantry, in military command of all troops on board; 66 other officers of various corps, nine officers' wives and families, 1,000 non-commissioned officers and men to join various regiments in India, with 112 soldiers' wives and 120 children. The naval passengers taken out by the Crocodile included Navigating Sub-Lieut. Henderson, to join her Majesty's screw troopship Malabar, and three warrant officers and 19 seamen to join her Majesty's ship Fortc, at Aden, for disposal.

MADRAS RAILWAY COMPANY.—The directors of the Madras Railway Company have issued their half-yearly report in anticipation of the meeting of shareholders. The traffic results for the six months, though not exhibiting the same rate of increase as usual, are stated to be on the whole as favourable as could be expected, considering the stagnation of trade, and the prevalence of epidemic disease during great part of the time. The gross receipts of the South-West line show a falling off of £2,217, and there is also a considerable increase in the working charges. Comparing the traffic on this line with that for the same period last year, there is a falling off in the quantities carried of cotton, rice, and coffee; while grain, seeds, jagree, timber, firewood, and iron show an increase. The revenue statement of the North-West line shows an expenditure of £4,993. 4s. 5d., which is not taken into account in calculating the rate of working expenses or the net receipts.

THE SUEZ CANAL AND THE RED SEA CABLE.—The following letter appeared in Monday's Times:—Sir,—The following telegram, just received from Suez, will, perhaps, interest the many who are anxiously waiting for the result of the passage of steamers through the Suez Canal. We despatched the Hawk to accompany the fleet just passing through from Port Said to Suez, to obtain accurate information, and to enable Mr. Pender, the chairman of the British Indian Telegraph and other submarine companies, to be present at the inauguration. His telegram runs as follows:—“Pender to Osborn, Nov. 20, 11 A.M.—Hawk at Suez, after most successful passage throughout. Make your arrangements for passing Suez section (of cable) through Canal. Briscoe will send you soundings, which have been most carefully taken. Seventeen feet will easily pass.” I am, Sir, yours truly, SHERARD OSBORN, Captain, R.N. Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company (Limited), offices, 38, Old Broad-street, Nov. 20.

QUESTION OF DOMICILE.—The Court of Exchequer sitting in banco on November 18 had a special case before it raising the question whether the personal property of Robert Hastie was chargeable with legacy duty. This depended upon another question, viz., whether he had lost his domicile in this country and acquired a new domicile in Calcutta. He was born near Paisley, in Scotland, in 1785, and about the year 1804 he left Scotland and proceeded to Calcutta to enter the establishment of Stewart and Co. in that city. Ultimately he became a member of the firm, and he continued to be so up to the time of his death, which took place at Yeovil, in Somersetshire, in July, 1834. In 1828 he came to England for the benefit of his health, and it appeared that he always expressed an intention to return to India, and that in this country he had no property except personal effects. The Court was clearly of opinion that the deceased acquired a new domicile in Calcutta, and possessed it at the time of his death, and gave judgment for the executors.

THE EUROPEAN ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—At the adjourned meeting of the European Assurance Society, on Nov. 18, the report of the special committee appointed on Nov. 10 was presented. The committee “were of opinion that there had been gross mismanagement and recklessness in purchases and amalgamations with other companies, and in enormous and unjustifiable expenditure.” They condemned “the want of proper vigilance on the part of the directors, and the great power acquired by the general manager, which power had been very frequently exercised improperly.” They, therefore, recommended an entire change in the management of the society, and a call of 10s. a share to produce a reserve fund which should justify public confidence. The report was adopted, and the resignations of the board were accepted, with the exception of those of Sir F. Smith, Dr. Read, and Mr. Hanson, who are to form a part of the new board. The resignation of the general manager was also accepted. The new directors will be Messrs. J. Brown Westhead, M.P., Alderman Carter, M.P., A. Bristowe, J. Field, Childe, E. Healy, and the Hon. Auberon Herbert.

THE WRECK OF THE "CARNATIC."—The superintendent of diving operations on the wreck of the Carnatic reports the Carnatic's spare shaft and crank had fallen overboard to leeward, and the end rested against the mail room door, where the boxes of specie were deposited. Bales of goods were also found jammed in, requiring great power to remove them. The Arab divers at the loose copper sunk in ten fathoms have recovered 126 pieces. On the 24th October the divers managed to get into the mail-room, and sent up the mail bags and cases with the postmaster's luggage. The mail bags were rotten, and the pulp flowed out. Recovered six gold watches and seven silver ones, with a large quantity of valuable jewellery. Every tin package had given way, and the water and sediment had penetrated. There were no marks on the packages. On the 25th the Bengal steamer arrived off the island, and Mr. Hain, in charge of the mails, took away with him the recovered mails on to Bombay. The English diver on the 26th at length got into the mail-room, where the treasure was, and in three days sent up twenty-two boxes, containing in all £26,000. The operations were still proceeding when the report left Suez on the 28th October, the divers being sanguine that they would be enabled to recover the whole of the remaining treasure. The Marine Department of the Board of Trade have ordered an inquiry to be instituted under the powers of the Merchant Shipping Act into the circumstances attending the wreck of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's steamer Carnatic off Shadwan, while on a voyage from Suez. The investigation began in the early part of this week.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY.—The report of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company for the half-year ending 30th June last has been issued. It states that in all likelihood the whole of the undertaking, with the exception of the Kistna Viaduct, will be completed for traffic before the middle of next year. The revenue receipts have amounted to £892,349. 7s. 4d., against £869,943. 17s. 2d., in the corresponding half-year of 1868; and the expenditure was £526,834. 12s. 8d., being 59 per cent. of the gross receipts; but this includes special sums set apart for the first time under arrangement with the Secretary of State. The net revenue, amounting to £365,514. 14s. 8d., is in the hands of Government, to be applied in reduction of guaranteed interest advanced. An agreement has been concluded, under sanction of the Secretary of State, between the company and Mr. T. W. Knolles, who has lately opened up a seam of coal near Mohpani, in the Nerbudda Valley, he undertaking to supply a quantity of coal at a reasonable price during the years 1870-1-2, sufficient to meet nearly all the requirements on the north-eastern portion of the railway. At the end of this year debenture bonds of the company to the amount of £194,600, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent., and of £521,000, at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, fall due. The Secretary of State having declined to allow debenture bonds to be renewed, the option of receiving in discharge for them irredeemable debenture stock, bearing 4 per cent. interest, at the price of £110 stock for every £100 debentures, has been offered to the holders, under the Secretary of State's sanction.

PRE-HISTORIC ARCHAEOLOGY.—Touching these early works of man, we commend attention to the excellent account given by Mr. R. Bruce Foote of his discoveries of quartzite implements of Palæolithic types in the Laterite formation of the east coast of Southern India. We know of nothing more striking than the wonderful similarity of these implements to those discovered associated with remains of extinct mammals in the old river gravels of Western Europe. But for the difference in the material there are numerous twin specimens so like each other that they might be thought to have been formed by the same hand, and yet they occur thousands of miles apart, and under what are apparently different geological conditions, though we think that much remains to be unravelled as to the origin and age of the Laterite deposits of Madras. Still this parallelism of type seems to afford most remarkable proof that the same wants, with the same means at command for fulfilling them, result, so far as tools are concerned, in the production of similar forms, no matter where or when the men live who make them. This is further illustrated by the stone implements from Japan, described by Mr. Franks, nearly all of which may be matched in form by arrow-heads, lance-heads, and hatchets found in Western Europe; and what is no less remarkable, the former are by the Japanese regarded as of heavenly origin, like the Elf-bolts of Scotland, and the stone-celts are considered to be thunderbolts—a belief so universal in historic times that it may be said to have been held semper, ubique, et ab omnibus. There is, in fact, no difference of opinion between the old Greek Sotacius and the Chinese Emperor Kaug-li's encyclopædia list (A.D. 1662). The former informs us, through Piny, as translated by Philemon Holland, that "there be two kinds of Ceramiae, to wit, the black and the red," and, "that they doe resemble halberds or axe-heads." The latter that "some of the lightning-stones have the shape of a hatchet, others that of a knife, and some are made like mallets. They are of different colours; there are blackish ones, others are greenish." The curious similarity observed among Megalithic monuments in different parts of the world may possibly be due to some analogous development of thought and feeling rather than to any intimate connection between the races who erected them. The Dolmens of Algeria, described by M. Flower, those of Brittany by Mr. Lukis, those of the Aveyron by M. Cartailhac, are all, more or less, closely allied to the ancient sepulchres and Pandukulis of the Nilagiri Mountains in Southern India, described by Sir Walter Elliot.—Nature.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The Daily News asks, what likelihood is there of the gross receipts of the Suez Canal exceeding £800,000, the amount of charges which must be paid before any profit is earned, and exceeding it so much as even to pay a fair interest on the ordinary capital of £8,000,000, which at 5 per cent. would require £400,000? To state the question is to exhibit the gloominess of the prospect for the shareholders, when it is remembered that the principal and almost the exclusive source of revenue must be the charge of 8s. per ton for shipping and 8s. per passenger passing through the canal. The passengers cannot be many, for it would take 250,000 to make up £100,000; and it will take 1,000,000 tons of shipping to pay £400,000. In other words there must be 2,000,000 tons to pay the preference charge, and 3,000,000 tons if the unlucky shareholders are to get five per cent.—very much more if the Pasha of Egypt gets anything. Where is any such tonnage to come from? On this point the shareholders should not deceive themselves. However quickly the Eastern trade may grow, how much soever the canal itself may promote new transactions, the trade of the world is not about to be revolutionised with pantomimic rapidity. The total annual tonnage of the Eastern trade is only 4,000,000 tons. This is all that the canal will fight for, and we need hardly discuss the probability of its share being very soon three-fourths, though that is what will be required to pay even five per cent. to the ordinary shareholder. One is half inclined to doubt, indeed, whether for some time to come the working expenses will be more than paid.

The Economist thinks the balance of probabilities is that the Suez Canal will be kept in working order for many years to come, but cannot on that account believe that any very marked effect will be produced either on the politics or on the commerce of the world, still less any effect adverse to Great Britain. India always has been liable to such attack by any Power with the means to send a fleet on a three months' voyage round the Cape, and the reduction of the time to two months does not increase the liability. Indeed, the opening of the new route slightly diminishes it; for whereas a fleet sailing round the Cape might by possibility avoid the British squadron sent in search of it, it could not possibly evade an encounter somewhere in the course of the narrow and dangerous ravine of 1,500 miles, which we call the Red Sea, and at the entrance of which we possess in Aden a natural fortress to which even Gibraltar is a feeble place. No surprise from a fleet which has to descend the Red Sea is possible, and against anything but a surprise India is always securely guarded both by art and nature. Calcutta is impregnable from the sea, and, although Bombay might under certain circumstances be threatened, the Empire could suffer only the pecuniary loss involved in a temporary suspension of about half its trade. As to Egypt, the canal would no more assist a French expedition than an English or an Indian one, and the balance of influences within the Delta remains absolutely unaffected. Nor do we perceive that the canal will greatly affect very soon the course of trade. For sailing ships it will be useless, as they will save no time, and greatly increase their risk; and for steamers, though it may diminish distance, it cannot very greatly reduce expense—the tolls, the price of coal in the Red Sea, and the danger of that long passage quite compensating the saving of a month in time. It is true that the extinction of a necessity for transshipment may tend to develop new trades, and may relieve old ones, such as the traffic in silk and indigo and treasure, but these trades, though valuable, are not sufficient of themselves to make up a commerce. Moreover, there exists no reason of any kind why, if the new route proves attractive, Englishmen should not avail themselves of it as well as any other nation. The small additional distance they will have to travel to reach the western entrance will make little perceptible difference, and Italian merchants, for example, will have no other advantage. Further, every sea route, like every railway, has two ends, and in this case one of the two ends happens to be ours. Let us suppose for one moment that M. de Lesseps's most magnificent dreams are all fulfilled; that Asiatic commerce is immensely accelerated and developed by the new route. The first result of that change must be a great addition to the trade of India, which is our own; of China, which is chiefly in our hands; and of Australia, which is possessed by our own people and best customers. Europe cannot double its trade with India without India doubling its trade with Europe, and the profits of that doubled trade will be as much English as those of the single trade now are. Those who see in the canal an injury to Great Britain are, therefore, reduced to this dilemma—either the canal will prove a great convenience to commerce or it will not. If it will not, nothing is changed. If it will, then such convenience must greatly increase the prosperity of British dependencies, and therefore of Great Britain. The Economist suggests whether, if the canal succeeds, that is, causes any considerable saving of time, the toll by tonnage might not be exchanged for an ad valorem toll with very great effect? That system is already in force upon the Indian railroads, and in some branches of our sea-going commerce, and may prove to be both practicable and possible on the canal.

LORD MAYO'S RETRENCHMENTS.

The Broad Arrow thinks that natives will assuredly misjudge and misapply the refusal of the Supreme Government to sanction expenditure on public works already incurred by the Madras authorities. It does seem unreasonable that Lord Napier's proposal to defray the cost of the works, by transfer of securities placed to the credit of his Government for less urgent improvements, should be rejected. There is no doubt but that a reference to her Majesty's Secretary of State will end in the necessary sanction being accorded, accompanied by a more or less dignified rebuke. Did the matter end here, we should not care; officials of such high standing, and drawing such handsome salaries as Governor-General and Governors, can afford to swallow rebukes, come when and whence they may. His Excellency Sir William Mansfield has given them a lesson in such matters, and apparently with some effect. But how fares it with magistrates and executive engineers, and other hard-working and zealous officials? We expect to hear of contracts, already arranged for, being rescinded summarily in the presence of the former under the guise of authority; specifications and deeds, already in the registrar's books, regarded as so much waste paper, and the successful tenderers told—ay, threatened—that unless they submit to the same no contracts will in future be entrusted to them. We unhesitatingly affirm that nothing can compensate for breaches of faith between executive engineers and their contractors. Without the ready support of the latter engineers are helpless, and every officer deserves well of his superiors who raises the character of the various contractors with whom he is brought in contact.

Mails to India, &c.

The Mails to all parts of India, via Southampton, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 9 A.M., and those via Marseilles every Friday, at 6 P.M.

For Ceylon, China, Straits Settlements, &c., the dates of despatch up to the end of December will be as follows, viz.:

Via Southampton, at 8 A.M., on the Saturdays, October 2, 16, and 30, November 6 and 20, and December 4 and 18.

Via Marseilles, at 6 P.M., on the Fridays, October 8 and 22, November 5 and 19, and December 3, 17, and 31.

RATES OF POSTAGE TO INDIA & CEYLON.

The postage on letters may either be paid in advance or left to be paid on delivery, at the option of the sender; but in all cases where the postage is not fully pre-paid, the letters will be charged, on delivery, with one additional rate of Ninepence, besides the usual postage.

This increase of postage will not affect the Letters of Officers of the Army and Navy serving in India and Ceylon; such Letters will continue to enjoy the privilege of transmission at the reduced postage of sixpence the half-ounce, via Southampton, and Tenpence the half-ounce via Marseilles.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth. A French line of Mail Packets leaves Marseilles every fourth Saturday. Postage for Letters and Papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English Mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these Packets must be specially addressed—"By French Mail Packet from Marseilles."

Up to the end of December the dates of despatch from London will be the Thursday evenings, September 30th, October 30th, November 24th, and December 23rd, and by Supplementary Mails on the morning following.

Supplementary Mails will also be made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday morning, via France and Italy to Brindisi, and thence by Italian packet to Alexandria, but should they not reach the latter place in time, the departure of the regular Mails for Suez will not be delayed. The postage of letters will be at the rate of 1s. 4d. for each half-ounce, and of newspapers 4d. for each four ounces.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That, in conformity with the intention announced of sending to India annually a certain number of YOUNG MEN, Trained and Educated for ultimate Employment in the Higher Branches of the Department for the Conservation and Management of the FORESTS under the Government of India, ELEVEN Young Men will be selected in DECEMBER next to go to India at the end of 1872, if so many are found duly qualified.

The salary will be at first £300 a-year, and the salaries of the appointments in the three Presidencies range between that sum and £1,900 a-year. Promotions will depend upon efficiency, and the occurrence of vacancies in the higher grades.

Applicants must be British subjects, above seventeen and under twenty-five years of age, and unmarried.

As active habits and a strong constitution are most important, Candidates will have to undergo a strict medical examination.

They must send to the Revenue Department of the India Office, on or before the 25th of November next, a statement of their names and parentage, with a certificate of birth, and of being possessed of a competent knowledge of the following subjects, and they must be prepared to undergo an examination in the same:—

1. English writing from dictation and English composition.
2. Arithmetic in all its branches.
3. Algebra, elementary principles, simple and quadratic equations, ratios and proportions, logarithms, arithmetical and geometrical progression.
4. Geometry (1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 6th Books of Euclid and plane trigonometry).
5. Free hand-drawing.
6. A good colloquial knowledge of either French or German, with the facility to read and translate the works of some classical writer in the language.

A preference will be given to those Candidates who show proficiency in—

1. Surveying and land measuring.
2. The elements of any of the following subjects:—
Geology and mineralogy.
Plan-drawing.
Botany.
Mechanical and natural philosophy.
Chemistry.

If selected, they will be further required to go through a course of training and instruction in Forestry and cognate Sciences for two years and a-half, in France or Germany, previous to their departure for India, and the Secretary of State will contribute £50 at the end of each half-year, towards the expenses of their training, in the case of such Candidates as are favourably reported on by their instructors. In addition to this, the young men will be required to pass some weeks under one or more approved Foresters in Scotland before they go out to India.

More detailed information as to these appointments may be had on application to the Assistant Secretary, Revenue (Forests) Department, India Office, Westminster.

(Signed) HERMAN MERIVALE.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, Nov. 6; Agra and Calcutta, Nov. 2; Madras, Nov. 1.

The little storm in the direction of Muscat has blown over. On Colonel Pelly's arrival in H.M.'s Dalhousie, he lost no time in demanding an explanation of the wanton firing on the British gunboat Clyde. Mohammed Bin Ghez tried to excuse the outrage on the plea of an expected inroad from the hostile natives of Zanzibar. The Clyde was taken by the authorities for an enemy's ship, and fired at accordingly. Some attempt was also made to lay the misadventure at the doors of Colonel Disbrowe, who sent the Clyde out to sea. But the Political Resident would take no excuse, and a formal apology was made on the quarter-deck of the Dalhousie to the captain and officers of the insulted vessel. It is supposed that the Dalhousie will proceed with the Nymph and Daphne to pay off the Shaik of Bahrein for his repeated outrages on British subjects.

RETRENCHMENT is still the burden of the Indian papers and the war-cry of the Government. As the Indian Daily News puts it, Lord Mayo has been "tomahawking" every department of the State. The grant for military works, already cut down from £2,400,000 to £1,660,000, is next year to stand at only one million and a-quarter. On Agricultural Works however there will be a small increase, to which further additions may be made at need during the year. On other services the total reduction for this year will be not far from £400,000. The establishment charges are cut down by £200,000. Of the reduction in the Police Force we have already spoken. To soften the blow caused by the abolition of the Bombay Special Fund, Lord Mayo promises to treat Bombay as handsomely as he can, with due regard to economy, in the Budget grants for next year. Even the cost of special famine works must henceforth be defrayed out of the ordinary grants. In case of great need, funds may be diverted from other channels for purposes of relief; but the total outlay must be kept strictly within its prescribed bounds. Money written down to military and agricultural works is on no account to be employed for other purposes. There is a rumour of wholesale reductions among the engineers, supervisors, and overseers in the Public Works Department. People are wondering where the docking process will end, and murmuring at the extent to which it has already gone, at a time when trade is unusually dull and loss of employment will fall proportionally hard on many of the sufferers. It is to be hoped that the new State railways and irrigation works may absorb most of those who would else be turned adrift on that dreariest of deserts for unemployed Englishmen—life in India.

THE Bombay opposition to the Cotton Frauds Bill has resulted in the getting up of two memorials, one from the Chamber of Commerce, the other from the Bombay Association, praying Lord Mayo to reject the Bill. They plead that existing laws and authorities are quite equal to doing all that the Bill can ever do in the way of repressing fraud among the dealers in cotton. Even in the Bombay Council opinions were divided, Sir S. Fitzgerald finding a strenuous opponent in Mr. Tucker, one of the Executive members. Most of the English and all the native merchants are against the Bill, but on the other hand it has been carried through the Bombay Government mainly by one of the leading English merchants, Mr. Campbell.

THE native mind seems to be straining in various ways to shake off the trammels of old use and wont. The feat of the Jeypore Rajah has been surpassed in daring by the conduct of the Ranee of Baroda, who actually gave a ball to a number of English ladies and gentlemen. The Gaikwar himself, besides taking lessons in dancing, has avowed himself a friend to the remarriage of Hindu widows. At Indore a body of Brahmin Pundits has ruled that an Indian chief may cross the "dark water" without loss of caste, and a similar conclave at Nagpore is discussing the propriety of allowing Hindoos to eat meat and drink strong waters. E pur si muove.

WE are glad to learn that Captain Gillespie, like Major Glasse, has been fully acquitted of the crime laid to his charge. A telegram received from Kurrachee declares that his acquittal is so complete that no slur will rest upon his name, nor any harm be inflicted on his worldly prospects.

THE Lieutenant-governor of Bengal may yet become a convert to the fiscal theories of the Supreme Government in respect of popular education. Mr. Grey still declines, it seems, to enforce a local cess on land for the education of the Bengal ryot; but he sees no objection to such a tax for the maintenance and construction of local roads. The Indian Government has wisely agreed to accept the half-loaf thus offered, and requested Mr. Grey to take the needful steps without loss of time for supplying Bengal with the roads she certainly wants. At the same time, Lord Mayo takes care to observe that the imperial revenues will not be able to contribute as largely as heretofore for roadmaking in Bengal, and repeats his former pledge against listening "to any proposition, the effect of which would be to throw upon the State the main burden of the cost of educating the people of Bengal." A further communication on this subject "will be made hereafter" to the Lieutenant-governor. Evidently Lord Mayo, like a skilful rider, is willing to humour his subordinate within limits. Perhaps Mr

Grey, having gone so far in the right direction, will ere long see for himself the necessity of going a little farther. He has already taken the question of the road-cess in hand.

THE Broad Arrow is rather premature in saying that the amalgamation of the three Indian armies under one head has already been decided upon. That such a decision may soon be pronounced is not perhaps unlikely; but at the present moment nothing, to the best of our belief, has yet been settled on this score.

HER MAJESTY'S Government have done the right thing in appointing a commission to inquire into and report upon the state of the slave trade on the eastern coast of Africa, with a view to the material restriction, if not the entire suppression of so crying an evil. In this commission, which has already held more than one sitting at the Foreign-office, the several departments of State specially concerned in the matter are duly represented—the Foreign-office, we understand, by Mr. Wyld; the Admiralty by Captain Fairfax; the India-office by Mr. Kaye. The services of Mr. Churchill, political agent and consul at Zanzibar, who is now on furlough, have likewise been secured. From the varied experiences of these different officers we may take it for granted that some practical recommendations will issue, tending not only to benefit the State, but to further the best interests of humanity also.

MR. G. SIMMONS, C.E., must be one of the most sanguine of men—as sanguine as England was, according to one of Dickens's characters, when she expected every man to do his duty. He seems to believe in the possibility of making English the colloquial language of India, if the paper he read before the East India Association has been rightly reported. Acknowledging the “almost superhuman magnitude” of the task proposed by him, he finds good auguries of success in the intellectual blankness of the people of India, in their growing intercourse with Englishmen, in their ready mastery of our language, and in the absence of anything like a native literature. It is refreshing to see so wonderful a hobby ridden with so steadfast a mind, but the fate of earth's chief benefactors is reserved, we fear, for Mr. Simmons. People will smile at his proposal, and leave a remote posterity to discuss his method of carrying it into effect. We for our part are content to admire the boldness of a projector, who really thinks it possible for a few thousand Englishmen to train two hundred million civilised natives to speak English in preference to their own mother-tongue. Such an achievement would certainly herald some extraordinary crisis in the world's history, if not the very comet that is some day to blow up this earthly ball of ours. It would anyhow upset all past experience, which shows that in no instance has any nation exchanged its own language for that of conquerors who were not also colonists or near kinsmen. It is possible that modern French sprang directly from ancient Latin, but the two peoples came of the same Celtic stock, and Welsh bears a marked resemblance to Latin. If Erse has well-nigh died out of Ireland after many centuries of hard struggling for existence, neither Welsh nor Gaelic is yet drawing its last breath. Russia has long been trying in vain to force her own variety of Slavonic on stiffnecked Poland. Neither Majjars nor Bohemians have yet exchanged their old tongue for that of Southern Germany. The people of Northern India never learned to speak the language of their Mohammedan masters. Englishmen retained their own language in spite of the Norman conquest. But there is no need to multiply instances of this sort; nor is there the slightest fear that the Indian Government will take up a scheme so contrary to all its traditions and its present policy. But it is odd to find so unpractical a crotchet unfolded before a body that is nothing, if it be not practical.

ONE of the latest curiosities imported into the British capital is a live Yarkander, whom Dr. Leitner has brought home with him from that Central-Asian land of Yarkand which Messrs. Shaw and Hayward have lately travelled through. Niaz Mohammed is said to be “not bad-looking for a Mongolian,” and his knowledge of languages embraces not only the various dialects of Turkistan, but Persian also, and Tibetan, to say nothing of Chinese.

DR. LEITNER himself has imparted to the public an interesting record of his own travels, in the shape of a paper read last week before the Ethnological Society. He went up into the Tibetan basin of the Upper Indus, into a country of reported cannibals, who turned out to be no worse than their neighbours. Although the tribes were fighting with each other his party was only once molested, and then their revolvers ensured them an easy deliverance. Dr. Leitner thinks these people superior in every way to the Kashmeeries. Some of the Buddhist remains were very curious. In one mausoleum he found a piece of carving in stone, strangely resembling the story of Christ's entry into Jerusalem. There was the ass bearing a figure with a halo round his head, while crowds of people strewed palm-branches on every side. Another odd coincidence is the constant presence of a virgin and child on old Buddhist emblems. There is nothing however, he asserts, to show that the Christian faith ever found its way into those regions. The people of Chilas sit on stools, are fond of dogs, and their women play no small part in public affairs. These latter have regular fights with each other, and prove dangerous foes in the field to the Maharajah of Kashmere. There is a blue-eyed race of Kafirs, evidently of Aryan birth, who speak a dialect of Sanskrit, and drink the blood of their Mohammedan foes. We should like to hear more of these wild Montegnins of the Hindu-Khoosh, whose light eyes and hair, fair complexions, and well-shaped heads bespeak them true descendants of the stock which afterwards peopled so large a part of Europe.

ON Wednesday last an important decision was pronounced by Vice-Chancellor James, which will no doubt have special interest for a large number of Anglo-Indian policyholders. In 1861 the Family Endowment Society was absorbed into the Albert, whose recent failure so many people have had cause to deplore. General Pott, however, who had bought two annuities of the older company in 1849 and 1850 was determined to see whether his claim on the one company had been done away or no by its absorption into another, and the result has justified the venture. It has been ruled by the Vice-Chancellor that the Endowment Society had not ceased to exist, that General Pott had never entered into any contract with the Albert, and therefore that the society must pay its own obligations or be wound up. An order for the winding-up was accordingly given. Such a decree will bring new life to the heart of many a sufferer from the management that ended in the downfall of the Albert. Whether the shareholders of the absorbed companies will draw much comfort from this resuscitation of old liabilities is another question. Meanwhile justice has been done, and our Indian friends will know how to use the weapon thus provided them.

THE official enquiry into the loss of the Carnatic has resulted, as we foresaw, in a verdict unfavourable to Captain Jones. His certificate is suspended for nine months. On the first half of the question—namely the captain's conduct up to the moment when the ship struck—the Court seem to have had no doubt whatever as to their decision. They rejected the plea of an unknown current as “unsatisfactory” in face of the captain's neglect to take a single bearing of the Ashraffi Light, which was plainly visible two miles off. With regard to the other question, touching the long delay in disembarking the passengers, the agreement of opinion was less exact. On the whole however the Court were “greatly inclined” to blame the captain for having lost some hours at any rate of the last morning between the time of his sending the passengers to the fore-castle and the breaking up of the ship. No reference seems to have been made to the story of his racing with another steamer.

It appears that the Order on which we commented last week is less sweeping than we thought, inasmuch as the officers on the general lists all date from after the year 1858.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We regret that General Briggs's letter came too late for the present issue. All Letters for insertion in Allen's Indian Mail should be legibly written on one side of the paper only, and accompanied with the real name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Anonymous letters will not be inserted. The columns of the Indian Mail are open for free, but temperate discussion on all Indian topics of public interest, and especially all matters regarding the Services, Civil, Military, or Uncovenanted. The Proprietors and Editor wish it to be distinctly understood that they do not hold themselves in any way responsible for the opinions that may be expressed in the Correspondence Columns.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, December 1, 1869.

THE SADDLE ON THE RIGHT HORSE.

Les absens ont toujours tort. The Friend of India joins some of its contemporaries in their blind attack on the "indefensible" extravagance of the India-office in respect of military stores. The charge for these, it says, has more than doubled since 1861, and although half of the increase since 1865 can easily be traced to the inclusion of miscellaneous stores and malt liquor under the head of military stores, nevertheless the remaining half remains unaccountable both by the public and the Finance Minister himself. How does it happen, it asks in effect, and why does the Home Government make no effort to explain the mystery or to check the extravagance?

It is certainly curious that not inspired journalists only, but even the guardian-in-chief of the Indian Exchequer, should plead so utter an ignorance of facts about which the Indian Government might reasonably be expected to know more than other mortals. The mystery, if any there be, is altogether of Indian making. It is the Home authorities who have the most reason to plead ignorance on this particular point. You might as well blame an agent for carrying out his employer's direct instructions as the India-office for answering the indents made upon it for military and other stores. In this instance the expenditure deals mainly with commissariat supplies and clothing materials. It may seem "indefensible" to furnish the soldier with proper food and clothing, but even then it would not be the India-office that deserved the rod. No supplies of that sort are ever sent out to India at the mere will and motion of the Home Government. All they do is to act on the requisitions received from India, and it is doubtful whether a single barrel of beer or a piece of cloth is ever provided without a formal demand from the local Governments. The Home authorities in fact are little more than agents in transactions of this kind. Their critics in India look much too far off for the light that ought to be shining on their very faces. Due economy in the outlay on military and other stores can only be brought about by cutting down the requisitions made in India. It would be neither safe nor possible for the Secretary of State to cut them down here. That official cannot for example be called on to decide whether a soldier in India should be allowed a pint of porter a day or a pint and a-half; nor would he act wisely in sending out at a venture a hundred bales of cloth in the face of a requisition for twice that amount. All such questions of detail must of necessity be dealt with on the spot. It will be time enough to blame the Home authorities when they are found to exceed their instructions, or to charge extravagantly for the goods supplied in accordance with those instructions.

In making these remarks we would not be understood as deprecating economy in any way. Far from it. Our aim is to put the saddle on the right steed, to indicate the true source whence the economy should begin. Instead of throwing out dark hints and twitting others with the fruits of their own carelessness, the Indian Government would be better employed in mending their own financial ways, and in remembering that goods indented for are not equivalent to charges paid. On the other hand, we trust, with the Friend of India, that the time is close at hand when the balance-sheets and estimates will be so made up as to display the receipts and expenditure in England and India side by side.

HOZIER'S ABYSSINIAN CAMPAIGN.

IF we were led to smile at the Lord Mayor's attempt to exalt the conqueror of King Theodore at the expense of Xenophon and Napoleon, we may yet allow that Lord Napier's last campaign deserved a historian of its own. Vixere fortes ante Agamemnona, and we may congratulate the victor of Magdala on the good fortune still denied to the armies of the Sutlej and of Central India. Even Delhi remains unsung except in the dry official narrative of Colonel Norman. Lord Napier however has not only found his "vates sacer" already, while the popular interest is still comparatively fresh, but he has found a historian at once competent to sing his praises, and capable of securing a wide audience. Captain Hozier, having already served his apprenticeship, literary as well as military, in the Seven Weeks' War, has once more proved his twofold capacity in respect of the Abyssinian Campaign.* Claiming for his work only the merit of greater accuracy than other writers on the subject could pretend to, he has proved himself their equal in that literary workmanship which is seldom likely to be the soldier's forte.

A concise but clear and accurate survey of past ages in Abyssinia, followed by a careful narrative of Theodore's own times, forms an interesting prelude to the main theme of his book. Sparing of direct comment, the author makes his facts speak for themselves; his very silence being often eloquent. One readily sees, for instance, how cruelly Captain Cameron was doomed to suffer, from no fault of his own, for the carelessness of home officials on the one hand, and for Theodore's unjust if not quite unreasonable suspicions on the other. His visit to Bogos and Kassala, inspired by the same chivalrous motives which had led Plowden thither not very long before, was unluckily followed the next year by an Egyptian inroad with which of course it had not the faintest connection. But just then Theodore was smarting under the contemptuous silence which was all the answer his well-meant letter to her Majesty received for more than eighteen months. Putting these things together, he naturally thought that Cameron had been tricking him from the first. Hence the beginning of those outrages which had to be atoned for by a costly war, ending in the utter extinction of Theodore's dynasty. And all this might have been averted by so trifling a piece of courtesy as the sending an early answer to Theodore's letter.

Even after Mr. Rassam got the Queen's letter, eighteen months slipped by before it was delivered. How much of that delay was owing to Mr. Rassam himself we are not told, but the account given of his proceedings and the reference to Captain Cameron's "earnest appeal," would hardly tend to allay the suspicions of a doubting critic. He may have acted for the best in staying so long at Massowah, but would Mr. Pargrave, for instance, have done the same? And why did our Government not take care to furnish him with a proper escort, if he was loth to enter Abyssinia without special permission from Theodore himself? One is the more tempted to indulge those suspicions, because further on the author himself more than hints very unkind things of Mr. Rassam. He deems it remarkable that Mr. Rassam, "who was so well acquainted with the Abyssinian mind, and who acted as Sir R. Napier's interpreter on the occasion [of his receiving Theodore's last letter], did not warn the Commander-in-Chief against the snare laid for him in the matter of the cattle, especially as Mr. Rassam had spent the previous night in the company of the released captives, and was fully aware of the demand of unconditional surrender on the part of the King on which Sir R. Napier was determined to insist."

Captain Hozier bears approving witness to the part played by the Anglo-Indian public, especially by Colonel Merewether, in urging the English Government to rescue our captive countrymen by force of arms. "Had it not been for Merewether, the captives might yet linger in chains at Magdala. He was the author of the Abyssinian Expedition." It was he who predicted that embassies "would only deliver more prisoners into the hands of Theodore." Even after Sir W. Coghlan had come round to that opinion, the Government was still "dubious and reluctant" in making up its mind. In April, 1867, it began to think about invading Abyssinia. In July Sir S. Fitzgerald was asked by telegram how soon a force might be got ready, in case of need, at Bombay. But not until the middle of August did the English Government decide to fit out an invading force. Meanwhile Sir R. Napier had been busy collecting information and drawing up a detailed scheme of action, which formed the groundwork of all that was afterwards done. Unluckily his advice was not altogether followed. The Home Government meant to entrust him with the entire management of the campaign; but it did not clearly say what it meant. Sir S. Fitzgerald would neither tolerate the interference of the Indian Government, nor accept unreservedly the counsels of Sir R. Napier. Other advisers had more weight with him; and in his zeal for economy he "sometimes failed to perceive that a large expenditure in the beginning may in some enterprises be the surest preventive of lavish waste in the issue." Hence ensued some woful bungling in the matter of the Bombay Transport Corps, which the Local Government, in spite of all Napier's remonstrances, insisted on organising in such a way that it had to be thoroughly reorganised at Zulla before it could be trusted to take the field. One result of this blunder was the delay in provisioning Senafah, and the consequent loss of weeks in the advance on Magdala.

Captain Hozier's narrative brings out more clearly than ever the genius of the commander who planned and carried out the most bloodless and complete of modern campaigns. It is still open to anyone to question the need for all that vast preparation to achieve an end apparently attainable by much smaller means. But the arguments in favour of the course actually pursued are put by the author with a force not easy to withstand; and if we assume the need for acting on so large a scale, there can be no doubt that Napier's arrangements were exactly of the kind to ensure success. No precaution on his part was neglected, no labour shirked, no weapon fit for the hands of an English officer left unused, to bring about the perfect issue of plans well considered and strenuously followed out.

STAFF CORPS AND GENERAL LIST. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—One may notice in your columns arguments about the supersession of colonels of the Queen's Service by those of the Indian, and assistant-surgeons have not been wanting in champions to battle for them, but nothing has been said about the General List of Officers, more particularly those of Bengal. These officers all entered the Service during and since March, 1859, and have been getting promotion to their companies as vacancies occur in the old cadres. This may be all very fair, but on looking into the matter closely it appears that the senior of the List ranks as a captain in July, 1867, before men who entered the Service in 1855, and so on all the way down the promotions of the General List, any one of which, up to February, 1871, places the recipient above men who entered before him, who belong to the Staff Corps. It of course may be argued that the officers need not have gone into the Staff Corps, but few could apparently resist the seductive bait held out in 1866, which allowed any officer of an old cadre to enter it if he chose. The General List was not included in this order, an examination being placed in the way as a sort of barrier, which doubtless hindered a good many from joining, not from want of ability, but very likely in a good many cases from laziness, or simply being content as they were. The run in the General List, by which some seventy have got their companies already, with still a margin of more than a year for others to be equally lucky, occurs from the fact of so many seniors having joined the Staff Corps, and being removed in their turn from the list of lieutenant-colonels. Any one taking the trouble to look will find that the senior General List captain has passed over the heads of some two hundred of his seniors belonging to old cadres. There are doubtless a number of men who, had they remained locals, would have received promotion in their old cadres, but who luxuriate still as lieutenants in the Staff Corps and captains in their old regiments; but there are still several who, had they remained as they were, would probably not have received promotion before 1871. In the promotion to major the Staff Corps man will regain his place, as twenty years' service will be necessary in either case; but in the meantime, for eight years at least, the one retains his seniority over the other.

THE NEW COTTON FRAUDS ACT.

The Indian Economist remarks that Sir Seymour Fitzgerald and Mr. Campbell regard the failure of the old Act simply as a proof that fresh legislation is required. They contend that the object of the old Act is attainable, and that it is a matter of public importance to both countries that it should be achieved. The other side deny apparently the possibility of preventing cotton adulteration by legislative action, and, therefore, the wisdom of all attempts to do so, and they would leave the evil to the action of those private interests which tend to its repression. It is replied, and fairly we think, that to deny the possibility of repressing these frauds is to beg the question altogether, and as Mr. Campbell shows, to ignore its history. The public interest mixed up herewith are so great in both countries that we cannot leave the matter to the chance correction which the private interests concerned therein may supply. As a matter of fact it is notorious that the private interests referred to are of a very doubtful order, and have not corrected the evil in the least. It is a fact for Manchester to ponder that her representatives in this country are at one with the native dealers in reprobating all legislative attempts to secure for her a supply of unadulterated cotton from this country. It may be doubted whether Englishmen as a nation are not too much given to doctrinaire views and laissez faire—for the well-being of the country. The statement that the Act will lead to oppressive interference with the people is worth very little when dispassionately considered. The very same objection may be made, and indeed is made, to almost every municipal and police regulation framed for the public welfare. If we can but suppress the fraudulent practices which destroy the character of Indian cotton, the improvement will be cheaply purchased at the risk of now and again punishing an innocent holder of the adulterated staple. As to the private interests concerned in the trade ever putting down these frauds, the hope is fallacious. It suits the native dealer better to wink at them and to practise them, than to suppress them; while it is a matter rather of sentiment than anything else to the European merchant. The public interests it is that suffer, and the Government as custodian of those interests does right to interfere in their behalf. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald and Mr. Campbell have done good service to both countries by pushing their Bill through, in face of the determined opposition which it has met with. A little legislation of the same order is very much wanted at home, for the scoundrels who sell starch instead of piece goods to the people of India, and others who vend cheap poisonous substances under the name of food, in place of it. We have had a little too much of laissez faire in these matters.

THE NEXT GOVERNOR OF THE PUNJAB.

The Mofussilite hears from well-informed quarters that the chances are a hundred to one that Sir Richard Temple succeeds Sir Donald MacLeod, and becomes Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab on the 10th January next. This will be very hard on Sir Henry Durand, but Sir Richard himself will be delighted. He will get the great object of his ambition, and will set himself forthwith and vigorously to work to clean out a house that has been awfully in want of a good brooming ever since Lord Lawrence ceased to preside in it. The neglected premises will take any amount of administrative holstoning and fumigation, and be the better the more of such treatment they have accorded them. The "old hands" of the time of the Lawrences will growl, grumble, and sneer at Napoleon of the Deficit, but they will have to bestir themselves, or Napoleon will make them "move on," or rout them out altogether. But will not being considered unfit to be again entrusted with charge of the finances humiliate and depress Sir Richard Temple? Not a bit; it will trouble him but the least in the world, and in February he will be prancing about in the train of the Duke of Edinburgh—looking as like as he can to Napoleon III. himself—doing the honours of Paris to the Queen of England or Emperor of the Russias! Indeed we shall not be surprised to hear three months hence that Sir Richard has become a sufferer from gout, diabetes, and rheumatism—the resemblance would then be so complete between him and the great man he prides himself on resembling. As to the diatribes of the press, Sir Richard Temple cares little for them. He loves newspaper edut; but like that eminent (and truly public-spirited) corporation, Mr. John Blessington Roberts, he would rather the press would abuse him than have nothing at all to say about him. Should he really obtain the coveted Lieutenant-governorship—and such seems extremely likely—his appointment, we presume, will have to be regarded as a "kicking upstairs" that had become inevitably necessary. There is no other way of getting him out of the Financial Ministership. He holds that billet under warrant of the Queen, and the Viceroy cannot give the finances to another, translating Sir Richard to some other ministership. The latter must therefore be promoted to be got out of the way, and it must be confessed that his promotion to the Punjab will be likely to redound to the benefit of that province and the empire; the man was born to be a good pushing, driving Indian provincial administrator. As to Sir Henry Durand, he has apparently lost his second grand chance; and even his own friends now think his chance of succeeding Sir Donald MacLeod a very poor one, though, according to his usual wont, no word, no hint, has yet dropped from the lips of Lord Mayo. Sir Henry's time in Council will not, however, be up until the 25th July, 1870, and by then the redistribution of the territories will have taken place, and new Lieutenant-governorships been created. One of these Sir Henry Durand will probably have the refusal of.

CHANDAH COAL.

The Times of India says that in the bed of the Wurdah river near Gorgoo a coal pit has been opened, from which several tons of coal were taken last hot weather. Of course this coal cannot be a good specimen of what its seam would yield. Coal from this pit has been exposed for ages to the action of water, and must have deteriorated. Still it was the only coal which could be readily got at; and several samples of it have been sent for trial in the locomotives of the E.I.R. and G.I.P. Railway Companies. We have not heard what happened to the sample sent for trial on the E.I. Railway, but the first one or two trials on the G.I.P. Railway were not very successful. The fire-boxes and grates of the locomotives were built for English coal. Stokers did not like trying new coal, and found it required a great deal of stoking. In fact the usual difficulties which labourers and artisans are wont to put in the way of any change or any new experiment had to be overcome. The Nagpore authorities, as promoters of the Chandah coal, were very persistent, and it seems that a recent experiment has gone far to show that Chandah coal can be made to work the G.I.P. Railway traffic. Two skilled civil engineers belonging to the Central Provinces seem to have helped the railway officers in carrying the experiment through. They altered the grate of an ordinary goods engine, so as to make the interval between the bars half an inch larger than it was before. They lit the fire, got up steam, and fed the engine with nothing but Chandah coal; and they drove her from Nagpore to Budnaira, a distance of 107 miles, with a full goods train behind her. The train was equal to a brake-van and twenty-four full waggons. They kept up to time at all the stations they passed, and got into Budnaira rather before their time. They burnt rather more than double as much Chandah coal per ton per mile as an engine usually burns of English coal. These results are, we believe, fully as good as the most sanguine could have hoped for. And this practical test can have left few of those doubts on which indolent or interested objectors might rely against a mere laboratory experiment. It may fairly be expected that much better results will follow when the engineers come to use coal taken from a pit distant from the Wurdah River, and when the railway company enlarges its fire-boxes on the system adopted some years ago by the E. I. Railway Company. But even if future trials should not be yet more in favour of this new Indian coal, still it will be an immense gain for the railway company to burn this coal in their engines from Nagpore to Bhosawul, if not also in Wurdah and on the Nerbudda length. But of course it will be quite impossible for the railway company to reckon on Chandah coal until a tramway or railway connects the coal-field with the Nagpore extension line. Such a branch line should properly start from the station of Wurdah, go through the cotton mart of Hingunghat, and thence on through the cotton country to Gorgoo or to Wurdah, thus serving two great interests at once. It is understood that there are no engineering difficulties in the way of such a line—always excepting the tedious process of bringin, the Supreme Government to action. Its length would be seventy or seventy-five miles at most, and, if made on the narrow gauge principle, need not cost more than twenty-five lakhs, and could be done within two years. If we take the cost of mining the coal at Rs. 3 per ton, and the cost of hauling it from Chandah to Wurdah at one anna per ton per mile, then coal ought to be put down at Wurdah, forty-nine miles from Nagpore, and 195 from Bhosawul, at Rs. 7½ per ton. Even if 33 per cent. be added to this, so as to make our estimate perfectly safe, but for which there does not seem any occasion, the coal would cost the company only Rs. 10 a ton at Wurdah, instead of Rs. 40 a ton, which is about the average cost of English coal used on the Nagpore extension line. Even though Indian coal generates only half as much steam as the same weight of English coal, still Indian coal at Rs. 10 a ton will be twice as cheap for locomotive use as English coal at Rs. 40 a ton.

THE PROPOSED RETRENCHMENTS.

The Indian Daily News observes that there are departments in the State which are notoriously cheaply maintained departments, which cannot be touched without being crippled, and which it would be simply madness to cripple. These are notably the subordinate executive and the subordinate grades of the upper Police Department, in whose retention in all their present integrity, and indeed in whose speedy and large extension the happiness and welfare of the native millions of India are involved. If the bringing home of justice and prosperity to the doors of the people means anything at all, it means, when stripped of all the verbiage in which it is the fashion to envelope it, that subordinate magistrates and assistant superintendents of police must be planted broadcast over the country, so as to be able to pounce on crime the moment after it is committed, and to bring hot-handed criminals to justice before delay and opportunity have clouded what clues to detection there may exist, with that mass of corruption and perjury which grows up so rankly in India. The concentration of the civil, executive, and judicial authorities of the sudder stations—and that is what the abolition of any large number of magistrates and police officers would amount to—would inevitably result in that description of centralisation which is, above all others, the worst phase of national apoplexy. It would simply shut up all sub-divisions, and put an end to that close supervision of all portions of the district which the district magistrate can now only maintain with the aid of his subordinates in the subordinate executive and the police; and it would force the people to look for justice at tremendous distances at times when any prolonged absence from their village homes means the loss of their crops. If the prompt administration of justice is a powerful element in the national life of a people, it is difficult to comprehend the wisdom of measures such as these, with which we are said to be menaced, at a time when poverty is literally raging like a pestilence in the land, and decoity and other heinous offences are certainly not on the decrease. These remarks are not intended to refer to the abolition of Deputy Inspectors-general of Police, which is undeniably a step in the right direction, but to assistant superintendents, who help to bring the advantages of our power home to the people in the remotest villages of the country. We have no special purpose to serve in singling out the Subordinate, Executive, and the Police Departments; our remarks with reference to which may possibly prove equally applicable to some other branches of the Administration that are not so prominently before the public, and whose necessities are therefore imperfectly understood by us. The broad facts to be kept in view in giving a direction to the fit of economy which has very properly fastened on the head of the Government, are, that the necessity for immediate action in the matter is not absolute but relative, deriving in each separate case a special force from the proved existence of extravagance or folly in any particular department; that our active measures in each case must bear some relation to a particular wrong that has been discovered, or a particular work that has been left undone; and that while mere economy, practised rigorously for its own sake, will not lead straight into solvency any more than monastic asceticism practised ad libitum will carry a man into heaven, it is possible that a wrongly directed parsimony may unnecessarily injure a healthy limb and irretrievably plunge the country beyond the verge of a wholesome reaction. And it has also to be borne in mind that while the prompt administration of justice is a necessity that is associated with the healthy national life of a people, public works for the most part are only its indulgences, if not its luxuries. It is better that all public works, properly so-called, should be suspended for a time than that the even flow of justice in a single district should be disturbed.

Bengal.

DOES IRRIGATION PAY ?

The area of land under irrigation in the North-West Provinces during the Rubbee season of last year was as follows :—

	1868-9.
Ganges Canal ... ..	7,97,219	acres.
Eastern Jumna Canal... ..	2,03,692	"
Doab Canals ... ..	10,494	"
Bareilly and Tamesa Canals ... ..	37,890	"
Total ... ..	1,049,295	"

The importance of these works is strikingly exemplified in these figures. We may not unfairly conclude from them that 1,050,000 acres of land were under cultivation, which would have been barren through drought but for them. Now an acre of irrigated land in the North-West will produce from 1,200 to 1,900 lbs. wheat, or the whole area irrigated an abundant supply of food for three millions of persons for a whole year. The average price of wheat, moreover, throughout the provinces for some weeks past has been about 10 seers the rupee. Thus, the irrigation of this million of acres, has resulted in a crop of food of the money value of £8,000,000 sterling :—

Acres. lbs. wheat. lbs.
1,050,000 × 1,500 × 20 per Rupee = Rs. 7,87,50,000.

Now here is a very simple sum in arithmetic, and yet how slow we all are to learn it. The total cost of the whole Gangetic system of irrigation has been, if we remember rightly, about £2,000,000 sterling, and here it is recouped four times over in a single season of drought. And yet are we warned "not to listen to the siren voices" that would persuade us to sink English capital in Indian soil ! We shall sing the same siren song we have ever sung, until some new arithmetic has been discovered that shows the multiplication table to be a mistake. In addition to this million of acres under irrigation for the rubbee crop, there were 326,114 acres irrigated for the khureef harvest, a total area of 1,375,409 acres for the two crops. What proportion of this land would have been absolutely barren but for the canal works we are not told. We may presume, probably without extravagance, that a million and a quarter of acres were under the plough, which would have been left untillied but for the water supplied by the canals. Now, if this be so, we must plainly credit the works with the crop of this vast area of land, 100,000 acres of which were sugar-cane. What is too much overlooked by us all is this : That the returns to be obtained by the State for its outlay upon such works, as upon our railways also, must be to a large extent reversionary. Let the State but retain its interest in the land, and the time will come when we may obtain £50,000,000 a-year from it, with as much ease as we now do £20,000,000—an other very arithmetical sort of fact which a troop of Indian statesmen find it impossible to master.—Indian Economist

A TALE OF THE MUTINY.

The following story is taken from the Indian Daily News :— Brigadier Sir Hugh Wheeler, who was in command at Cawnpore at the time of the Mutiny, had two grown-up daughters ; these were both with him when he was besieged with the garrison at Cawnpore. On the arrangement of terms of capitulation with Nana, the besieged were conducted by him to the river, under pretence of assisting their escape by embarkation. What actually took place there is matter of history. The men were butchered, and meanwhile the ladies were kept in confinement. After the mutineers had finished their work of blood at the ghaut, they fell upon the helpless women and children, whom they had reserved for a worse fate. It is needless to suggest how the ladies were treated ere they met a merciful deliverance by death. It is known that one of Wheeler's daughters bravely met her fate, facing death direct rather than fall into the hands of the wretches about her. She flung herself into a well. The other was reported to be missing. Her remains were never found nor heard of, and the impression was that she must have suffered the horrible mutilation and death which befell others at that miserable period. But it now appears that she survived, and is alive at the present time. She survived the massacre at Cawnpore, and has lived the twelve years succeeding it ; and for aught that appears to the contrary, may see another score of years. We have said that the Government must know of the case, and the reasons for this opinion are the following :—Mr. C—, an official of high position, while on a tour through his division, had occasion to encamp near a village called S—. While there, information reached him that the missing daughter of Sir Hugh Wheeler was in the keeping of a petty rajah in the neighbourhood, who came in under the amnesty, and thereby deprived the gallows of a legitimate victim. Mr. C— managed to send a verbal message to Miss Wheeler, to the effect that if she wished, he would remove her from her present position, and restore her to her relatives and home. Miss Wheeler sent a written reply in which she told Mr. C— that she had been for nearly twelve years living with a native in the degrading position of an inmate of his harem ; had children by him ; and could not muster the moral courage to face one of her own kind, letting alone her relatives. She wished to be entirely forgotten, and to be permitted to remain unnoticed, or, if thought of at all, "to be remembered as one in the grave." Our informant adds—"I would certainly inform her relatives with a view to some of them coming and inducing her to leave the harem, if for no other reason, at least for the well-are of her soul."

The above account will give rise to curious reflections. It is impossible to conceive that Mr. C— should not have laid the facts before Government ; and it is equally impossible to suppose that Government has taken no notice of his representations. It may not be an unnatural desire on the part of Miss Wheeler that she would not re-enter the society in which she was brought up, after so many years of involuntary degradation. Her judgment is not altogether to be trusted. Removed as she was in youth from her family and friends, and carried away to a life which her nature and training must have rendered abhorrent to her feelings, ought she to be left, even if she seems to wish it, in this truly painful position ? Her lapse from the refinements of European life to the degradation of the harem was not a voluntary one. It is not as if she had to expiate the results of perversity or self-will. The degradation was involuntary on her part, and it is not surprising that she should decline to return to what may be termed her natural life. She feels degraded, and fears the height from which she was taken. She does not express satisfaction with her lot—even though she has new ties, the strongest that a woman can feel. She "has not the moral courage to face one of her own kind." It is not the want of will—not that the hope does not exist ; but that she cannot take the initiative. Torn from her friends under circumstances so terrible as those at Cawnpore, while yet young, and during twelve long weary years, without the support or countenance of "one of her own kind," is it surprising that she should doubt her own courage to meet one even as a friend ? Should she, therefore, be left to drag out the remainder of her weary life in degradation, because she has not the courage to seek the society to which she belongs ? Unsustained by a friendly voice, or by the cheering smile of one of her own race through twelve long years—surrounded by influences calculated rather to repress than to develop the courage which her condition needs—do we discharge our duty as a nation by listening to the weak suggestions of a woman to permit her to remain as one of the dead ? Do we not owe at least one effort to restore the lost one to society ?—To give her a choice of once more enjoying the peace from which she was so rudely torn ? It may be an easy matter to take refuge from duty in pretended deference to the wishes of Miss Wheeler herself. But should her judgment be implicitly trusted ? Do we not owe something to our own views of the matter ? And ought we not rather to take steps that are the most just and proper, irrespective of the consideration as to whether they may be the most convenient ? We give publicity to the subject as it has been brought to our notice, in the full assurance that the press in India, or that of England, will not let the matter rest where it is.

STATION TALK.

DUGGAL, Oct. 20.—You wrote very justly and wisely, as you always do, when you advise the authorities to build accommodation for the troops of India among these grand Himalayan ranges. What a stimulating blood-freshening atmosphere, what beatific tempered sunshine, what landscapes of beauty in which the most highly-colouring imaginative painters would have infinite, ever-varying delight. What a dearth is there of mephitic exhalations, of burning swinniness, venomous flies and mosquitoes, &c., what omnivorous appetites we have, what fresh healthy complexions, what elastic freshness of body and brain, what an aversion to lameness, what an ignorance of lassitude, all so different from down-country experiences of blanched faces, emaciated nerves, and brains stupefied. Yesterday Major-general Beatson inspected the regiment, which was paraded at seven A.M., in drill order, each man having ten rounds of blank ammunition. They were tested in a few movements, which they executed with unswerving steadiness, precision, and celerity, and during the performance of which they blazed away their cartridges in cool and sleeking style ; after this they went through the usual drill evolutions, manual and platoon, and bayonet exercises, and marching past, all of which they did in their customary brilliant way. The general then visited the orderly-room, hospital, workshops, and school, and evinced his pleasure at the general order and cleanliness that over all things were dominant.

SAUGOR, Oct. 25.—When I wrote to you on the 8th, with the rain still pouring down, things had begun to look very gloomy, but it cleared up in the afternoon of the 9th October, and we have had beautiful weather ever since. I believe the crops are not found to be much injured, and a fine harvest of jawar, rice, kootkee and todora may be anticipated. The weather is delightful, but fever is very prevalent and fatal, more so than it has been for many years, both among natives and Europeans. Hardly any one escaped sickness of some sort this season. The Royal Fusiliers have, I hear, lost one hundred, counting men, women, and children, since the commencement of this year. The head-quarters and six companies leave Saugor en route for Aden on the 2nd December, and three companies march for Neemuch when the 19th Foot reach Saugor, which is expected to be about the end of December. The Royal Fusiliers were entertained by the station the other evening at a ball and supper as a farewell party—a compliment which their liberal hospitality since they have been at the station rendered imperative.

AGRA, Oct. 29.—The station is becoming full again, all officers and civilians having returned from leave. I see Major Peile, Chief Engineer, is in the station. I suppose he will not do much work on the new line of railway till next April, after the Budget grant has been sanctioned for work. I have noticed in the Gazette that several magistrates have had their powers augmented in order to enable them to deal with cases involving sums of Rs. 200. This is a great boon to all who have money dealings of any kind, and I think the same power should be invested in the Agra Cantonment magistrate. Great inconvenience arises if you have a suit which involves any amount above Rs. 50. You have to go to the Judge's Court some five miles distant, and four or five times before you can get your case heard or get your money, and this, too, at an expense of Rs. 4 each time for buggy hire, not to speak of the extra loss of time consequent on attending at the proverbially slow business-doing Indian Law Courts. Weather delightful; mornings cool and evenings pleasant.

UMRITSUR, Oct. 26.—The fever prevalent all over the country is becoming alarming by the ravages it is causing. Mild and comparatively harmless on its first appearance, it has assumed a fatal intensity that is causing alarm. In the town of Umrtsur the fever deaths have increased nearly 100 per cent. during the last eight or ten days, and the total number of deaths daily reported ranges from forty to forty-five, being somewhere about 300 per cent. of the normal average number of deaths. This excessive mortality has, of course, nothing to do with the condition of the town in particular. It is more or less prevalent throughout the districts bordering on the foot of the hills, within the valleys of those hills, and, indeed, far up the mountain sides. The higher you go up the Baree Doab the worse it is found, and the accounts of the sickness and mortality by travellers are simply deplorable. This is the more to be regretted as the whole energies of the people should be concentrated on their wheat sowings, the neglect of which to any extent, under the highly favourable circumstances of the late rains, will materially affect the prospects of next season's harvest. Here we are close on the 1st November with a state of things that might occasionally be looked for towards the end of September, but which is altogether abnormal a month later. The Envoy from the Turkish Sultan, who is, I observe, now addressed and assumes the style of "His Majesty" instead of "His Highness" as formerly, to the Ameer of Bokhara, arrived here en route to Lahore and Peshawur on Wednesday morning, the 20th inst. He only staid the half-hour the train remained and the honours of Umrtsur were done by the Native Extra-Assistant, Aga Kulabad, and the Tuhseeldar. At Lahore he was received by Mr. Beauchereff, the Assistant-Commissioner, and a suitable following. The Envoy is an elderly man, was dressed in orthodox green (velvet), and wore two decorations, as an indication, I presume, of his being of some rank and standing in his own country. It is certainly a curious commentary on Russian and Persian inter-communication in the vicinage of the Caspian Sea, that an Envoy whose shortest route to Bokhara would have been by Teheran, Mushed and Maimana, should have been instructed to take the circuitous way of Egypt, Bombay, Central and N.W. India, through Afghanistan and Bulkh. We also had a Yarkundee here during the second week in October, who was said to be the bearer of some semi-official communication from the Koosh-Begi of Yarkund to the Indian Government. That ruler has hitherto affected something very like contempt for British rule, but having of late been somewhat hard pressed in his North-Western frontier by his recently established neighbours, but certainly not friends, the Roos, he has thought it might be as well to establish something like a reserve, in case of necessity, within the limits of India, and so spreads a feeler in this direction to see how advances of a more serious character will be received should he hereafter find it necessary to make them. In connection with Yarkund it is well to state that the large number of inhabitants of that part of Central Asia who have been represented as passing through Leh on their way to the Palkpore fair with goods and ponies for sale, are to the number of about three hundred Mahomedan pilgrims to Mecca, who have brought a small amount of goods and many ponies, not however as articles of trade or barter, but as means of paying their way. They, or at least some of them, did call at Palkpore en route through the Kangra valley from Kooloo to Umrtsur, but finding that the fair would not commence before the 1st of November they came on to this. Finding railway communication much more to their advantage than land travelling they parted with their animals, and people wanting such had the opportunity of making some very good purchases at reasonable rates, averaging from Rs. 50 to Rs. 100. These pilgrims, who may be taken on the whole as fair representatives of the province from which they have come, are peculiarly Mongolian in appearance, do not betray much intelligence in their looks, but seemed to adapt themselves with great readiness to the altogether novel circumstances in which they were placed on a railway platform. They said that besides the animals and goods, by the sale of which they hoped to pay their way, they had also brought as much goods as they could command to supplement their wants in this respect. They appeared to have a considerable amount of personal baggage, of which their conical teapot formed an invariable part, each man appearing to have one to himself. Those who have seen the trans-Indus Pathans in their winter clothing, and who know that they never change such for six months at a time, need not be told that these co-religionists of theirs are equally filthy in their habits. One man told me through an interpreter that he had been four months on the way, and that he for one had never changed his "vestments" during that time.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DISTRESS OF MIND.—The Pioneer hears that Sergeant Winter, the poor wretch who hanged himself the other day at Ghazepore, did so in apprehension of dismissal from the stud for long-continued negligence of duty.

ECCLIESIASTICAL.—We hear that the Rev. W. Drawbridge, Chaplain of Darjeeling, is to be transferred to this station.—Jubbulpore Chronicle.—The Rev. Mr. Toussaint, lately Chaplain at Kussowlie, and recently appointed to Sealkote, is, we regret to state, lying at Umballa in a most dangerous state, and with no chance of recovery.—Indian Army Gazette.

ADMINISTRATIVE.—The proposal to transfer the Punjab Frontier Force to the Commander-in-Chief, which Sir William Mansfield has based on the somewhat suddenly changed opinions of General Wilda, is still, we hear, before the Punjab Government, which is likely to fight hard for its own views. We should not be surprised if the question were left undecided till the arrival of Lord Napier, as Sir W. Mansfield's successor, towards the end of April next.—Friend of India.

LIKE OF SIR H. LAWRENCE.—Lady Edwardes has requested the Homeward Mail to state that the Pioneer's announcement as to the completion of the late Sir H. Edwardes' life of Sir Henry Lawrence, and the preparation of a life of Sir H. Edwardes himself, is "entirely unauthorised." Lady Edwardes however does not contradict the statement, and we believe it to be correct. The appearance of the life of Sir Henry Lawrence has been long delayed, and now that Lord Lawrence has retired from Indian life there is no reason for keeping it back.—Friend of India.

FROM ASSAM TO CHINA.—Letters have been received in China from Mr. T. T. Cooper, stating that he has satisfactorily established the existence of a line of communication between China and Assam by the route he before attempted from Bathang to Zyyu and Sudiya. It was on this route that two French missionaries were murdered a few years ago. He has also ascertained that other passes exist through which commercial intercourse with China is carried on by the Abors, thus disproving the theory lately advanced by Colonel Hopkinson in England, that the mountains between China and Assam are impassable.—Englishman.

A RIDDLE.—There is a rumour abroad, says the Indian Examiner which probably must be taken cum grano salis, that the retirement of a certain Secretary of the Government of India is more or less connected with the chagrin occasioned him by finding his docketts persistently scored through whenever they contained anything in the shape of suggestions. It would not be an unpleasant thing to believe that the Viceroy has a will of his own, if one could be sure that it were his own; but it is just to say that the same rumour attributes it to a certain other Secretary, who seems destined to leave an unmistakable mark on Indian history.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.—The Rajah of Jeypore going through a quadrille is doubtless a significant sign of the times, but not more so than the Congress of learned Pandits, who the other day at Indore ruled that an Indian Chieftain might cross the sea for the benefit of his State and people, without incurring the penalty of excommunication from caste. Of a similar character is the conclave of Brahmins, which, we are told, are holding meetings at Nagpore to decide whether the eating of meat and drinking of spirits is so very unlawful as the strictest sect amongst the Hindoos would have the world believe. An authoritative promulgation of an opinion in favour of such departures from the letter of Hindooism would be a great relief to numbers of natives in Bengal, where Brahmoism, widow marriage, and European example have sapped many of the chiefest pillars of the ancient faith.—Englishman.

BUNDLEKUND.—The report of the Political Agent in Bundelkond gives a very unfavourable account of the health of the people, and the present price of provisions, but, so far as the prospects of the growing crops are concerned, it is most favourable. "Altogether," Dr. Stratton says, "the condition of the province has been deplorable, and it can scarcely under several years recover its normal condition, either as regards the means of livelihood of the poor, i.e., the bulk of the population, or the numbers of human beings and cattle." As a contrast to this gloomy picture we are told that wherever seed was sown the prospects are excellent; that in Malwa the country is "rich and heavy with produce;" that "the Khureef harvest bids fair to surpass any realised for years," and that there is good ground for anticipating favourable returns of wheat and opium. Although wheat and grain are still selling at famine prices, the bulk of the population will not be affected, as the cheaper kinds of grain on which they chiefly live are now becoming plentiful in the market.—Englishman, Oct. 30.

ECONOMY IN HIGH PLACES.—The Viceroy has set a good example in economy. In consequence of the excessively heavy charges he travelled by ordinary passenger train from Umballa to Meerut, the state carriage being attached to the train.

THE PUNJAB FRONTIER.—We regret to hear unsatisfactory accounts of the health of Kohat and Edwardesabad; at the former station cholera of a severe type, doubtless imported from Peshawur, has been rife for some time, having carried off one European officer, Mr. Bannister, and about three hundred men of our native troops. Lieutenant Plowden, Assistant Commissioner, is said to have had a sharp attack, but has now recovered. Fortunately cholera, though in such close proximity to Edwardesabad, has not shown itself in that station as yet; and, humanly speaking, this is attributable to the effective and strict quarantine measures enforced by Colonel Boisragon, commanding the Bunnoo district in conjunction with Major Jenkins, the energetic district officer. Every possible precaution has been taken to prevent spread of contagion to Edwardesabad, even to the fumigation of letters, &c., received with the mails from Kohat.—Indian Public Opinion, Oct. 26.

MAILS VIA BRINDISI.—The following notice has been issued by the Director-General of the Post Office in India:—"Arrangements having been made for the experimental transmission of mails from India to the United Kingdom via Brindisi, it is hereby notified for general information that letters and newspapers (not packets of books or patterns) superscribed by the senders with the words 'via Brindisi,' and fully prepaid at the enhanced rates noted herein will be forwarded by the route mentioned:—Letters, 10s. 8p. per ½ oz. each; newspapers, 2s. 8p. per 4 ozs. each. Letters and newspapers for countries the route to which lies through the United Kingdom superscribed with the words 'via Brindisi' and fully prepaid at the rates shown in the Foreign Post Schedule of the Indian Postal Guide for the Marseilles rate, together with two annas per ½ oz. each additional for letters and eight pie per 4 ozs. each additional for newspapers, will also be forwarded by the route mentioned. Registered covers may be forwarded by this route on payment of the registration fee of four annas each in addition to the postage."

CIVIL.—We hear that various changes are on the tapis in the higher ranks of the Civil Service. It is probable that Mr. C. F. Montresor, who is expected to return to India at the beginning of next year, will succeed Mr. C. F. Carnac, who will take furlough, as opium agent at Ghazepore. This will give Mr. C. T. Buckland the pukka appointment of Commissioner of Burdwan. Mr. O. Toogood, Judge of Beerbhoom, will take leave on furlough in the spring. Mr. Toogood will probably be succeeded in Beerbhoom, by Mr. Muspratt, at present Judge of Purneah. There are rumours that Mr. A. E. Russell will retire from the service in March next, when it is whispered that Mr. F. L. Beaufort will be transferred from the bench of the 24-pargunnahs to that of Burdwan. In this case it is likely that Mr. Bright will move from Hooghly to Alipore.—Englishman, Oct. 29.

—Mr. J. R. Hallett, Bengal Civil Service, having obtained a degree of honour in the Bengali language, has been presented with the authorised donation of Rs. 2,000. Mr. T. M. Kirkwood, of the same service, has received Rs. 1,000 for high proficiency in Bengali, and Mr. R. F. Rampini the same amount for high proficiency in Ooryah.

A PRACTICAL JOKE BY THE VICEROY.—A most laughable joke, it is reported to us, was played by his Excellency the Viceroy on his military secretary and staff on the morning of his departure from Simla. The story is that his Excellency had arranged to leave his abode at half-past five o'clock. At five o'clock precisely his Excellency came into the verandah booted and spurred and ready for his journey. The establishment was then wrapped in profound slumbers. His Excellency, without summoning any of his escort, called for his horse, mounted and galloped off. On his way through the Boileau-gunge bazaar, finding the native superintendent of police mounted and at his post, he ordered him to become his escort, and thus attended proceeded on his journey. At half-past five the gentlemen at Government House were ready and in the verandah awaiting his Excellency's coming down stairs for the journey. Seeing the military secretary walking up and down the verandah the European inspector of police took the liberty of informing him that his Excellency had started half an hour before, and must by that time be near to Syree. This information caused the gentlemen at once to mount and set off in pursuit. If his Excellency rode that morning as he usually does, at the rate of twelve miles an hour, he must have led his pursuers a hard chase. Such is the story as we have it; if our statement is incorrect we shall be most happy to give the right version of what was a capital practical joke.—Indian Army Gazette.

MILITARY.—The 26th Camerons, it is rumoured, the Englishman says, will shortly relieve the 58th Regiment at Allahabad.—The A Battery, F Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, marched from Umballa at 5 A.M. of Oct. 25, en route to Benares, after a sojourn at that place of about six years.—H.M.'s 5th Lancers were to leave Lucknow on the 1st November for Campbellpore, to relieve H.M.'s 20th Hussars, who replace H.M.'s 21st Hussars at Lucknow.—By the pr. motion to Major-general of Colonel T. Tapp, C.B., and the death of Colonel W. A. Orr, C.B., Colonel Sir Alfred Wilde, K.C.B., C.S.I., Military Secretary to the Madras Government, and Colonel T. F. Wilson, C.B., Deputy Adjutant-general, become paid Aides-de-Camp to the Queen.—Pioneer.—In reply to a letter from the Secretary of State, suggesting the establishment of some fixed proportion in the number of army staff appointments in the three presidencies, to be held respectively by the officers of the Staff Corps and local service, and by those of the Line, the Government of India have stated their opinion that the measure would be inexpedient. They concur with the Commander-in-Chief in the desirability of generally appointing the most fitting men, and of obliterating, as far as practicable, all service distinctions.—Madras Times, Oct. 28.—Referring to the paragraph in the now famous despatch of the 4th of October, in which the Government of India assert their belief that it will be possible to effect a large reduction of military expenditure without diminishing the actual numbers of the British army in India, or in any way impairing our real military strength, the Mofussilite thinks that this passage almost savours of "half-pay" arrangements being introduced. We do not believe that anything of the kind is contemplated, though it is evident that it is intended to do thoroughly whatever it may be found necessary to do.—Madras Athenaeum, Oct. 25.—Major and Lieut.-colonel Hardy, 21st Hussars, is, we understand, about to retire from the Service.—Indian Army Gazette (Simla).—It is rumoured that Major-general Beatson, Commanding the Sirhind Division, will proceed to England in April next.—Indian Army Gazette.

STATION TALK.

TRICHINOPOLY, Oct. 23.—Since writing my letter of yesterday we have had the levee, or, as the natives delight to call it, the durbar. I am sorry to say his Excellency, though kind and affable as is ever his wont, seemed to be but poorly. He had arranged to visit the new market, the moat (the Boulevard that is to be), the district jail, and the lunatic asylum early in the morning, but indisposition confined him to his room. The levee was held at half-past eleven. The European residents of the station, civil and military, were first presented to his Lordship, the former by the collector and the latter by Brigadier general Woods. Soon afterwards the durbar for the natives was held. Several native officers of the 9th and 26th N.I., many of them decorated with medals won in Burmah and during the Mutiny, were presented. Afterwards the native officials and non-officials were introduced to his Excellency by the collector. In the evening a visit was paid by the Governor and his suite to the Civil and Session Court-House. This building possesses a melancholy interest as being the place where the good Bishop Heber died. The large bath in which the Bishop breathed his last has been recently repaired and restored by Mr. Cadell. It was before in a most dilapidated state, and great credit is due to our Judge for the preservation of so interesting a memorial. After inspecting the Court-House, the party drove to the Central Jail, and looked over the finished portions of the building and also over the works which are still in progress. The drive to and from the Central Jail was across the Maidanam, the great plain on which battle after battle was fought between the English and French forces, and which the patriotic Englishmen rising from the perusal of Orme or Cambridge, or of the more recent and far more erudite pages of Malleeson, must regard as the most classical ground in all India.

MADURA, Oct. 26.—His Excellency Lord Napier, accompanied by the Hon. R. S. Ellis, C.B., Colonel Fordyce, Colonel Malleeson, and Mr. Chisholm, arrived here on Sunday morning, the 24th inst., and proceeded at once to the house of Mr. J. Arbuthnot, the Collector, whose guests his Lordship and suite were during their stay here. A large concourse of people gathered together to welcome his Excellency on arrival. Triumphant arches, bearing mottoes expressive of loyalty, were thrown across the road at various places. A bright sunshine following recent rain polished up the quaint old place, and Madura looked its best. The principal object of Lord Napier's visit was to inspect the Old Palace of Tirumala Naik, and to ascertain whether its restoration is possible. His Excellency made his official visit to the palace yesterday morning, where he was met by the principal officers, both native and European, connected with Madura. After conversing with some native gentlemen, and expressing his high approval of the interest evinced by them in the Municipal affairs of the place, and the proposed restoration of the old Palace, his lordship held a long conversation with the chief Pundarum, who retailed with unusual volubility all the old legends and traditions. His lordship then made a minute inspection of the building in company with Mr. Chisholm, the Government architect, who pointed out the means which he proposed adopting for rendering the structure sound and habitable. It appears that the Government architect believes the palace to have been constructed at different periods, and his researches in the matter leave little doubt that one portion at least was erected subsequently to the main body of the work. The space under the large dome, used as the Judge's cutcherry, portions of which are in a critical position, is the first to be secured from further decay. In the evening his lordship visited the old and new jails, enquiring minutely into all particulars connected with their administration. Shortly after dark the tippacolum (Tirumala's large tank in front of the Collector's house) was illuminated amid a display of fireworks. A finer sight perhaps could not be witnessed anywhere in the world. The tank is in itself a wonder worth seeing. It is upwards of 1,500 yards square, lined the whole way round with solid stone-work. It has an island in the centre surmounted by a Muntapum of considerable altitude, and four smaller ones at the angles. The effect of perfect symmetry of such gigantic proportions picked out by probably not less than 15,000 lights, and these doubled by reflection in the still water beneath, formed a spectacle of very rare excellence and beauty. On Tuesday his Excellency and suite went through our magnificent old Temple. Magnificent in the magnitude, the costliness, and the variety of its parts, marvellous in the lavish expenditure of misdirected labour and thought, the Madura Temple may be termed the Salisbury of Southern India. His Excellency afterwards drove to the American Mission Schools, and displayed the usual interest he takes in such institutions.—Athenæum Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

LORD NAPIER.—The Governor of Madras was expected at the presidency town on his return from his tour on Oct. 28.

RETRENCHMENT.—We learn that all works on the Coast Canal—both on the junction and northern extension—are stopped. This is economy with a vengeance, when we have an engineer whose time is being thrown away in consequence of the suspension of the works.—Madras Athenæum.

RAILWAY DEPARTMENT.—Mr. Beresford Anderson, chief engineer of the Madras Railway, is so much indisposed, that it is expected he will have to go home. If this step is necessary for the health of Mr. Anderson—we hope that it is not—we presume that Mr. Going will act for him.—Madras Athenæum.

THE REDUCTION MANIA IN MYSORE.—We are informed that Lord Mayo has written to the Chief Commissioner asking him what reductions can be made in the personnel of establishments in Mysore. Under this head the Viceroy thinks that some 15,000 or 20,000 rupees per annum might be easily saved. And so think we. Any one who takes the trouble to pay a visit to the public offices cannot but notice the scores of native clerks and peons lounging about, chewing betel nut, or else taking their "forty winks" with as much composure as ever did the fat boy in "Pickwick." A revision of office establishments not only in Bangalore but throughout the territory would do all the good in the world.—Bangalore Herald.

DEATH OF A JOURNALIST.—We regret to record the death of Mr. W. T. Starkenburgh, one of the earliest co-proprietors of this journal, which death took place at the presidency yesterday. Mr. Starkenburgh was a good specimen of an Anglo-Indian brought up in the country. He received his education in the Military Male Orphan Asylum. Thence he entered the army, and rose to a high place in the non-commissioned ranks, and was subsequently employed in the Adjutant-general's office. He joined the firm of Pharoah and Co. not long after the Athenæum was set on foot, and edited "Pharoah's Army List" for many years. He left the firm after the death of Mr. Pharoah, whose early career had resembled his own, and before the transfer of the Athenæum to its present proprietary. We may remark that, in its long career, the Athenæum has only changed hands once, and that only in consequence of the death of its original projector, though "a fortune" was often tendered to him or it.—Athenæum, Nov. 1.

MILITARY.—We regret to announce, says the Madras Times, the death from acute dysentery, on the 24th of October, at the Madras Club, of Major R. P. M. Crewe, of the Staff Corps, and wing officer of the 14th N.I. His remains were interred with military honours in St. Mary's Cemetery, the funeral party of 200 rank and file having been supplied by H.M.'s 45th foot.—We have to record the death at the Presidency of Captain Joseph Wright, of the Invalid Establishment. Captain Wright entered the service of the Honourable Company in 1825, and was invalided fourteen years afterwards, since which he has been leading a desultory, and latterly, not very comfortable, existence in different parts of the country. He was buried on the evening of October 31, in St. Mary's Cemetery, with military honours.—The appointments in the departments of the Adjutant-general and Quartermaster-general, and those of Brigade-major and Chief and District Inspectors of Musketry, are in Madras held by five British officers against twenty-six belonging to the Staff Corps and local service, or 16-129 of the former against 83-871 of the latter.—Madras Times.

PRESERVATION OF GAME.—The Madras Government have had under consideration the question of the preservation of game on the Neilgherries. It has been recommended, we believe, that a close season should be established during three months of the year on all waste lands; this arrangement will not interfere with the liberty at present enjoyed by planters and others of killing game on their own lands, while it will admit of the ravages annually made by sportsmen being supplied by young game. Such an arrangement would also facilitate the propagation of partridges and pheasants, which, we are glad to hear, are to be introduced to the Hills. Under sanction of his Highness the Maharajah, the Travancore Sirkar notified on Monday last (18th Oct.) that they now strictly prohibit the shooting, or otherwise killing, of wild elephants in the territories of the State, except as hereinafter provided. Persons convicted of transgressing the provisions of this notification will be summarily punished by the magistracy with a fine not exceeding Rs. 50, or with imprisonment which may extend to three months or with both. In special cases the Dewan will on application, grant a written permit for shooting elephants; and those who obtain such permits, and act only in conformity with their provisions, will be exempted from the above penalties. General permits will be granted on application to such subjects of the State as possess properties in or near jungles infested by wild elephants; and such subjects will be authorised by the permits to kill elephants, but in defence of their persons and properties only. Persons killing wild elephants in self-defence will be exempted from penalties provided they immediately report the circumstance to the nearest police officer. In any case, the tusks, teeth, &c., of wild elephants, however death may have occurred, will, as hitherto, be the property of the Sirkar, and be deliverable to the nearest police officer. The Sirkar will pay a reward to any person who will give information of the illicit killing of elephants, or of the appropriation of their tusks, such as will lead to conviction of the offender.—Madras Mail.

Bombay.

LEGAL.—We learn from the Indian Daily News that on the recommendation of the Government of Bombay the salary of the Legal Remembrancer here has been increased from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,000, with an office allowance of Rs. 200 per mensem.

THE GAEKWAR AS A REFORMER.—His Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda has determined to take the opinions of learned Shastrees and Pundits on the widow remarriage question. According to a native paper, he has selected a few learned Shastrees and Brahmins of Baroda on his behalf, and has specially invited some of the Shastrees of Bombay and Poona to take a part in the discussion that is to take place.

A BALL AT BARODA.—A Marathe paper states that, on the evening of the 23rd October the Ranees of the Maharaj Gaekwar, Baroda, gave a ball at her palace in Makarpoora, to which twenty-five European ladies and a like number of gentlemen had been invited from Ahmedabad, Broach, and Baroda, all of whom joined in the festivities of the evening. The Ranees was highly pleased with the arrangements made for the occasion, and at parting presented necklaces and ear-rings to ten of her female guests. This is a significant sequel to the Jeypore Rajah's quadrille at Simla.

PERSIAN GULF AFFAIRS.—By the arrival of the B. I. S. N. Co.'s steamship Burmah yesterday we learn that the insult to the British flag at Muscat has been apologised for. Immediately on hearing of the affair Colonel Pelly, Political Agent in the Persian Gulf, left for Muscat in the steamship Dalhousie, and on his arrival demanded an explanation of the firing on the gunboat Clyde. Azanbin Ghes, the present ruler of Muscat, tried to get out of his awkward position by saying that the Muscat authorities had expected an invasion from Zanzibar, and they had fired on the Clyde thinking her to be a Zanzibar vessel. That this was a mere subterfuge was however evident, for the Clyde had the British ensign flying all the time the fusillade went on; and Colonel Pelly, with his usual determination, required an apology to be made to the captain and officers of the Clyde, which was tendered on the quarter-deck of the Dalhousie. On the arrival of H.M.'s steamships Daphne and Nymph at Muscat, it is expected that they will be despatched to Bahrein to chastise the Shaik of that place for some recent offences against British subjects.—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 6.

MILITARY.—H.M.'s Indian troopship Euphrates, Captain Curm, from Suez on the 17th, and Aden on 23rd (October, arrived in Bombay Harbour on the afternoon of the 1st November, with 46 officers, 10 ladies and 8 children, 926 non-commissioned officers and men, 105 women, and 179 children of the 9th Brigade of Artillery, under the command of Colonel Romer. The Euphrates had a very pleasant passage, steaming half-speed all the way. There were three births and one marriage during the voyage. H.M.'s ship Jumna was passed on the 17th October, after leaving Suez.—We hear from Poona that Brigadier-general Smyth and Brigadier-general Domville (both officers in the 14th Brigade R.A.) have been ordered to proceed to England with their brigade, which will embark on the 15th November on H. M.'s ship Euphrates. Brigadier general Addison, C.B., will, in consequence, be transferred to the 1st Class Brigade at Belgaum, while Colonel C. Adams, 49th Foot, will become a Brigadier-general on the establishment, and take the command of the Brigade at Poona.—Captain Gillespie, at Kurrachee, has been tried before a civil magistrate, the charge being one of "causing grievous hurt," and, according to a telegram, was acquitted.—Times of India.

THE COTTON CROPS.—Mr. Melville, general manager of the Mofussil Press and Ginning Company (Limited) sends the following report dated Bombay, 5th November:—"Having had an opportunity during the last three weeks of personally visiting the cotton districts of the Central Provinces and the Berars, I am glad to be able generally to confirm the favourable accounts which have hitherto appeared in this circular. Throughout the districts of Khamgaum and Oomrawuttee the cultivation has almost exclusively been confined to that of cotton and jowaree, while the one has been so closely sown into the other that the eye can see nothing but one unvarying stretch of green. The description of cotton grown in the neighbourhood of these towns is mostly the 'Bunnee,' and the cotton is now fast ripening in the bursting pods. In the direction of Akote it is the 'Juree' description that is mostly sown, and from Akola to the hills of Akote the fields are covered with very fine plants nearly five feet high. These plants as yet are only in flower, and the first pickings can only be expected to arrive in the bazaar in January. On crossing the Wurdah into the Central Provinces the fields look much less promising. Continuous rains in some places seem to have prevented weeding operations, and many cotton fields have been allowed to grow rank. Neither is there the same density of cultivation here as in the Berars, and much valuable land is still lying waste. Throughout the Hingunghat and Wurdah districts the plants are now fully ripe, and a considerable quantity of cotton lying on the ground. The ryots have a great objection to begin picking till after the Dewallee, and it is only after then that any quantity of kuppas is likely to be collected into the villages to go through the tedious system of cleaning by the native churka. The reports from Chandah and Zedallabad are extremely encouraging, and a considerable quantity of fine cotton may be expected from the Nizam's territory." The following reports have reached me in usual course:—"Carwar, 29th October.—There have been heavy showers falling to-day, and there has been a pretty good fall lately above the Ghauts, but nothing sufficient to give rise to any such report as that to which your telegram of yesterday refers. Oomrawuttee, 3rd November.—We have still a continuance of fine weather, and the cotton plants are ripening rapidly. Khamgaum, 3rd November.—Since my last report a strong breeze on Sunday afternoon from N.E. brought up heavy clouds, and we had some showers of rain. It is not supposed that any serious damage has yet been done to the crops, but these showers may throw back the receipt for a fortnight. Broach, 4th November.—The weather during the last fortnight has been rather warmer than usual at this season of the year; and within the week heavy showers of rain have fallen in the neighbourhood of Baroda, Vagsud, and Etola, and at Ahmode, in the Broach collectorate, causing some damage to the ungathered bajree and rice and to jowaree. The cotton crop is in very fine condition. Surat and Rander.—The crop is doing well under the influence of fine weather. Ahmedabad has been visited by heavy rain, which has injured the cereal crops to a slight extent, but cotton has escaped without damage. The latter is in a more forward state here than in the other parts of Guzerat, and the plants have already begun to flower freely. The prospects of the crop are very favourable, and kuppas is expected to be ready in December and January."

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

REMITTANCES TO ENGLAND.

Fort St. George, Oct. 19.—No. 343.—The following letter from the Government of India to the Controller of Military Accounts, Bengal, dated Oct. 1 last, No. 51, is published, in continuation of G.G.O. No. 193, dated May 19, 1868:—

"In reply to your letter, No. 889, dated August 20 last, inquiring whether officers may be allowed to make remittances to England through the Government Treasuries for the benefit of their adopted or step-children, I am directed to acquaint you that step-children may be considered to come under the term children, and remittances made through the Government Treasuries for their benefit.

"As regards adopted children, a reference will be made to the Secretary of State."

CIVIL ABSENTEE ALLOWANCES.

Simla, Oct. 11.—No. 3,904.—The following is substituted for the resolution No. 1,717, passed in this department on June 30 last:—

In the resolution No. 409, passed in this department on May 7 last, it is provided that the rate of absentee allowance admissible to a civil officer proceeding on leave shall, in all cases, be shown in his last pay certificate by the accountant-general of his presidency; but in the case of a covenanted civil servant, or military officer in civil employ, whose appointment has been changed within the period on his average salary for which his furlough allowance is to be calculated, the rate of furlough allowance will sometimes depend on the date on which he may make over charge of his office, and the accountant-general of his presidency will not be aware of that date at the time the last pay certificate is prepared if the absentee intends to embark at a port in a presidency other than that in which he is employed, and has not to pass through the accountant-general's station on his way to that port. For cases in which, for these reasons, the accountant-general is unable to specify the rate of absentee allowance, the Governor-general in Council is pleased to lay down the following in lieu of the rules prescribed in the sixth paragraph of the above-mentioned resolution. The accountant-general of the absentee's presidency must send him a document in the form A appended to this resolution, leaving the fifth, sixth, eighth, and nine spaces on the face of the form blank, and forward a duplicate of it to the accountant-general or district officer at the port at which the absentee intends to embark for Europe. Before the absentee's departure from his station, the district officer in charge of the treasury from which he last drew pay must fill up the sixth space on the face of the original form, and fill up and attest the certificate at the end of that form. The accountant-general or district officer at the port at which the absentee intends to embark for Europe must act up to the instructions in the letter to his address on the back of the form, must copy the entry in the sixth space on the face of the original form and the entries and signature in the certificate at the end of that document into the duplicate form, and must return the original form to the absentee. If he be an accountant-general, he must, moreover, forward the duplicate form to the local government for transmission to the Secretary of State, and forward a copy of the certificate at the end of the form to the accountant-general of the absentee's presidency with a letter in the form B appended to this resolution; but if he be a district officer, he must forward the duplicate form A to the accountant-general of his own presidency, who must send it on to the local government for transmission to the Secretary of State, and forward a copy of the certificate at the end of the form A to the accountant-general of the absentee's presidency with a letter in the form C appended to this resolution.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

Simla, Oct. 26.—Resolution.—The resolution of June 15 last applies to military officers in civil employ on consolidated salaries. Military officers in civil employ on staff salaries will draw allowances during preparatory leave under the order No. 3,205 of October 22, 1860.

REMOUNTS.

No. 982, dated Poona, Oct. 25.—With the sanction of Government, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct a modification of G.O.C. No. 338, April 26, 1867, to the following extent:—

Officers commanding brigades of royal artillery and regiments of cavalry will be relieved from remount duty as directed in that order.

A committee, composed as under, will be assembled from time to time at Bombay under the orders and supervision of the brigadier general commanding the district:—

Col. Wallace, C.B., royal horse art.; Staff Vet. surg. Lamb; Major Blundell, 3rd hussars.

A veterinary surgeon will attend on the committee to examine the horses.

Staff Vet. surg. Lamb to be stationed in Bombay during the cold season, for the purpose of selecting batches of remounts for submission to the committee; the members and veterinary surgeon will then be summoned for the duty.

Officers commanding regiments of cavalry and brigades of artillery will inform Staff Vet. surg. Lamb of the total number of remounts, and the particular description of horses required, as also the number for each battery of their respective brigades.

The proceedings of the committee will be submitted to the brigadier general commanding Bombay district, under whose orders the remounts will be allotted to the branches of the service for which they have been selected, and then handed over to the commissariat department for despatch up-country.

COURTS-MARTIAL—DISCHARGE WITH IGNOMINY.

No. 976 of 1869, dated Poona, Oct. 23.—The Commander-in-Chief having observed in several instances that sentences passed by district courts-martial have been unnecessarily severe, H.E. considers it expedient to direct the attention of officers presiding over such courts to paragraph 760 of the Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army, which enjoins that just discrimination is to be used in applying the quantum of punishment to the nature and degree of the offence, so that the award may be final and carried into effect; as it is indisputable that crimes are more effectually prevented by certainty than by the length and severity of punishment.

2. Although any district court-martial may now, in addition to any other punishment which such court may award, sentence any offender to any or all of the forfeitures enumerated in the 117th Article of War, and may also sentence him to be discharged from her Majesty's service with ignominy, and to be marked with the letters B.C., it should be borne in mind that the last penalty ought only to be applied to worthless and incorrigible soldiers who are considered to be a burden on the service.

3. H.E. has no desire to interfere with the free exercise of the judgment of officers serving on courts-martial; but he wishes to remind them how necessary it is to carefully weigh and consider every circumstance connected with a prisoner's case before the extreme punishment of discharge with ignominy is awarded.

CIVIL ENGINEERS IN GOVERNMENT SERVICE.

Simla, Oct. 16.—Read the following letters:—From Central Provinces, No. 434-1590, dated April 26; from Bengal, No. 2,679, dated May 8; from Oude, No. 536, dated May 17.

Resolution.—Inquiries having been made from several quarters regarding the exact position of the civil engineers lately appointed to the department by the Secretary of State under a five years' covenant, with reference to promotion, the Gov. gen. in Council desires to place on record the views of the Government of India on the subject.

These engineers are bound to serve Government for five years, if the Government decides to keep them. At the end of the third year, either their services are dispensed with, or they are put on the ordinary footing of civil engineers in the department. One question that has been asked is, whether they are entitled to promotion during the first three years of their service, or only during the last two, or not at all during the five years. The Gov. gen. in Council observes that these gentlemen can claim no promotion whatever during the term of their covenant. It may also be presumed that the grades and salaries assigned to them on their appointment are fairly commensurate with their claims at that time.

If, however, on grounds of merit, it is considered that they should be selected for promotion, viewing their general claims with those of other officers in like positions, local Governments are quite at liberty to promote them in ordinary course, at any periods after the commencement of their service, to fill vacancies, and local administrations may bring forward their names in the half-yearly recommendation rolls. In any special case which seems to justify such a course, their promotion may be recommended to the Government of India as supernumeraries when there are no vacancies.

From the questions asked by two engineers in Mysore, it would appear that there is an impression with some officers that mere length of service is sufficient ground on which to base an unanswerable claim for promotion. This is a view which should be entirely abandoned. The rule laid down for guidance on the formation of the public works department, which received the distinct and marked approval of her Majesty's Government, was that promotions should be made by merit and merit only. This should be impressed on the department generally—on the one hand to suppress unfounded hopes based only on length of service, and, on the other hand, to exclude the idea that any injustice has been done when an officer with shorter length of service may be promoted before one having a greater length of service. Ceteris paribus seniority may properly be allowed to have weight, but not to the extent of preventing the advancement of younger men whose superior abilities and usefulness are acknowledged. The contrary practice would inevitably lead to inefficiency and embarrassment.

The Gov. gen. in Council has also had brought before him the question of requiring these civil engineers to pass in the languages before they are promoted. It seems to his Excellency in Council that the ordinary rules on this subject must be relaxed in the case of gentlemen entering the service in mature life, whether civil or military. Those who commence their professional career in the department, or enter young as assistant engineers, or as fourth-grade executives, may not unreasonably be required to conform to these rules; but if a person is of such standing in his profession as to justify his appointment to the department in the superior grades, the rules are certainly inapplicable. Such engineers should, however, be encouraged to pass the colloquial examination, or other high tests, and those who do pass should be regarded as having a superior claim to promotion. There are no doubt certain posts for which a more intimate acquaintance with the language is essential, such as those connected with canal management. For such posts as these, engineers who had not passed the usual language test would be incapacitated; but for the ordinary executive duties of the department a more moderate amount of knowledge will suffice, and obstacles should not be placed in the way of the advancement of experienced engineers otherwise deserving and capable merely on technical grounds of this description.

The service of the civil engineers before referred to, within the period of their agreement, will be allowed to count towards leave and pension under the uncovenanted service rules, if they are retained in the service of Government after the expiry of three years.

To remove some uncertainty that has been expressed, the Gov. gen. in Council desires it to be made known that the fourth and fifth years' service is compulsory on the engineer under the terms of his agreement; but the Government has the option of dispensing with his services at the end of the third year, without assigning any reason.

CANDIDATES FOR THE STAFF COLLEGE.

Head Quarters, Simla, Oct. 20.—In continuation of G.O. No. 1 of 1868, the following correspondence is published:—

Copy of Despatch from the Secretary of State to the Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council, dated London, August 18, 1869.

I have considered in Council your letter dated June 10, 1869, and have been in communication with the Horse-guards respecting the application of Captain —, of the — Bengal Cavalry, to become a candidate for the Staff College at Sandhurst. A copy of the correspondence which has taken place on this subject is enclosed for the information of your lordship. You will observe that the shortest period which an officer of the Indian Army, admitted to the college, would be required to spend in England is two years and three months, so that it is impossible for an officer holding a staff appointment in India to go through the requisite course during his furlough without forfeiting his appointment. In these circumstances, I fear that it will rarely be worth the while of Indian officers to compete for admission to the college.

Should Captain — be still desirous of becoming a candidate, it will be seen that he cannot be allowed to enter the Staff College without forfeiting his appointment.

Copy of a Letter from the Military Secretary, India-office, to the Military Secretary, Horse Guards, dated July 29, 1869.

I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to transmit, for the information of the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, a copy of a letter dated June 10 last, from the Government of India, with its enclosures, on the subject of an application from Captain —, of the — Bengal cavalry, to become a candidate for the Staff College.

It will be in the recollection of his Royal Highness that when the subject of admitting officers of the Indian army to the Staff College was under consideration in 1861, it was felt that few officers would be able to avail themselves of the privilege, inasmuch as the Secretary of State did not think it advisable, as observed in Colonel Baker's letter of April 8 in that year, to extend an officer's leave of absence sufficiently to enable him to go through the whole course of instruction, including the time during which he would have to do duty with other arms of the service.

Since the date of that correspondence a new set of furlough rules has been issued, by which an officer in Capt. —'s position may obtain leave of absence for two years, retaining his appointment in India; and at the same time the permission granted to officers abroad, to pass the preliminary examination without coming to England, has lessened the time which an Indian officer would necessarily have to pass on the completion of the course of instruction.

I am therefore desired to request that the Duke of Argyll may be informed what is the shortest period which must be spent in England by an officer who goes through the Staff College, including the time that he would be attached to other arms of the service.

Copy of a Memorandum from the Council of Military Education, dated August 2, 1869.

The Council of Military Education have the honour to return the correspondence referred to therein by the Military Secretary on the 30th ult., and to state, with reference to paragraph 4 of Major-general Pear's letter of the 29th, that the period which an officer of the Indian army, who competes successfully for admission to the Staff College, would be required to spend in England, is two years and three months, including the time that he would be attached to other arms of the service after quitting the College. The Council, however, have to observe that the examination of this year for admission to the Staff College in February next is already concluded, and that Capt. —, therefore, cannot be examined until July, 1870.

STAFF.

Head Quarters, Simla, Oct. 23.—The attention of British officers holding Staff appointments in this presidency is invited to the orders indicated below.* Officers who are allowed, under the existing regulations, to continue in their appointments on the departure of their regiments to England, in order to complete their five years' tour of service on the Staff, should observe the instructions contained in paragraph 4 of the Right Hon. the Secretary of State's despatch of December 30, 1865, No. 390. "It will rest with the officers affected by this decision to take means for ascertaining whether their remaining in India after the departure of the regiments meets with the approval of the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief."

Those who had to vacate their Staff situations under similar circumstances must rejoin their regimental head-quarters in sufficient time to

REPORT ON THE RESULTS OF THE ANNUAL EXAMINATION OF THE THOMASON COLLEGE AT ROORKEE FOR THE YEAR ENDING AUGUST, 1869.

GOVERNMENT N.W.P.

*Public Works Department, dated Nynce Tal, Sept. 25.—No. 1,597A.—*Read the report of the principal, giving cover to the tabular results of the examination and statement of distribution of passed students.

Observations.—The results exhibited in the tabular statements are favourable in a high degree. For the engineer establishment seven have passed, viz.:—Three military officers, and four non-military young men of European extraction.

2. The military officers are—Lieut. S. J. Dunlop, 23rd R.W. fusiliers; Lieut. W. M. Story, 2nd Sikh infantry; and Lieut. W. H. Browne, 7th fusiliers. The non-military men are—Mr. C. Evans, educated in England; Mr. L. O'Toole, educated in Lawrence Military Asylum; Mr. R. Nelson, educated in La Martiniere College, Lucknow; and Mr. H. Beahan, educated in R. C. College, Vizagapatam.

3. In the upper subordinate establishment forty-seven have passed. Of these thirty-six are European soldiers, three are non-military men of European extraction, and eight are natives. No less than fifteen of these have gained certificates as sub-engineers, viz.:—Thirteen soldiers, one non-military, and one native.

4. For the sub-overseer establishment twenty-seven have now passed, and twenty more were sent out during the session as qualified, and were drafted into the public works department.

5. For the engineering classes three military officers, ten non-military students, and three natives successfully passed the first year examination, and will rejoin the College for their second year's course.

6. In the sub-overseer class forty passed the first year examination.

7. The following students obtained the prizes of the College:—

Engineer Class.

1. Mr. Evans, Council of India prize, Cautley's gold medal for mathematics, Col. MacLagan's prize for physical science, Principal's prize for civil engineering.

2. Lieut. Dunlop, Thomason gold medal for best design; prize for drawing.

Upper Subordinate Class.

1. Private Higgins, for general merit.

2. Private Collins, for civil engineering and surveying.

3. Corporal Pearson, for mathematics.

4. Sergeant major Hill, for drawing and physical science.

5. Sergeant Robinson, for Oordoo.

6. Sergeant McGenity, for photography.

8. The projects for a line of road, by Mr. Evans and Lieut. Dunlop, appear to be very well drawn up, and the notes recorded by these two gentlemen on the railway works visited by them indicate intelligent observation, and are excellently illustrated. Both these gentlemen have done well, and the Lieut. Governor feels confident that they will distinguish themselves in their future career.

9. The drawings executed by the students, which the Principal has sent up for the inspection of Government, are nearly all remarkably clever and neatly executed; the photographs very fair.

10. The encouragement of free hand sketching by the Principal is considered very judicious.

11. The appearance of the native candidates in the engineering class is gratifying, seeing that there has been no successful student in this department for several years. It is creditable to St. John's College, Agra, that the two best of these three are its elevés.

12. The Lieut. Governor desires to convey his congratulation to the Principal and the educational staff of the College for the successful results of the session.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of the foregoing, with Principal's report and enclosures, be forwarded to the Secy. to the Govt. of India, Public Works Department, for information.

Also that copies be forwarded to the Principal and visitor of the Thomason College, and to the officers noted below, for information. [Secy. to Govt., Bengal, Public Works Department; ditto, Punjab, Public Works Department; ditto, Oudh; ditto, Central Provinces; ditto, to Agent Gov. gen. for Central India, Public Works Department; Secy. to Agent Gov. gen., Rajpootana.]

(Signed)

C. J. Hodgson, Col., R.E.,

Secy. to Govt., N.W.P., Public Works Department.

The undermentioned passed military students of the Thomason Civil Engineering College are appointed to the Upper Subordinate Establishment of the Public Works Department as overseers of the 1st grade, on probation, and posted as follows (Sept. 29):—

To Bengal.

To the North-Western Provinces.

Private J. Higgins, 20th hussars; Lance-corporal R. Read, 1-5th foot; Lance-corporal J. Tuer, 20th hussars.

To the Punjab.

Bombardier F. Horne, F-C, R.H.A.; Colour-sergeant J. Giles, 102nd foot; Gunner W. Newland, B.A, R.H.A.; Sergeant J. McGenity, 92nd foot; Private J. Cook, 3rd battalion rifle brigade; Private G. Shaw, 38th foot; Private P. Morley, 105th foot; Lance-Corporal P. Byrne, 1-11th foot; Lance-corporal J. Storrier, 104th foot; Private T. Spratt, 107th foot; Private J. Quealey, 102nd foot; Private T. Gerroghy, 41st foot; and Corporal J. Power, 88th foot.

To the Central Provinces.

Gunner C. Graham, E-16, R.A.

To British Burmah.

Private P. Collins, 105th foot.

To Central India.

Corporal W. Keeley, 102nd foot; Corporal P. Hannay, E-16, R.A.

To Rajpootana.

Bombardier M. Heenan, C-19, R.A.; Private J. Dwyer, 2-12th foot; and Gunner J. Byrne, G-F, R.H.A.

The following men are graded as supernumerary overseers, 1st grade, and their services are placed at the disposal of the Lieut. governor of the North-Western Provinces for employment in the Thomason College:—

A DISTURBANCE AT BAGDAD.—There has been a small rising of the people at Bagdad, owing to a system of conscription being enforced by the Governor in that city. It appears that the new measure was extremely unpopular; and rumours of discontent and approaching disturbances were rife during some days, but were disregarded as unworthy of notice. Between seven and eight of the evening of the 28th August it was reported to the Governor that an armed mob had taken possession of the eastern quarter of the city. The official measures however seem to have been promptly and effectively taken. Troops were marched to guard the chief streets and public buildings, and the bridge of boats severed so as to cut off communication with the agitated quarter. This done, the general in command proceeded to the scene of riot, but only to find that the mob had dispersed! About one hundred persons were arrested in the course of the next few hours. All was quiet by the last accounts, and the conscription was being carried on without fear of further disturbances.—Pioneer, Oct. 29.

THE FAMILY ENDOWMENT SOCIETY.

A petition, which involves some very important interests, was presented, in the Court of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. James, by Major-General Pott, unpaid annuitant, in respect of two annuities which in 1849 and 1850 he had purchased from the Family Endowment Society, praying to have the society wound up under the Act of 1862. The society was established in 1835, and was never registered. In 1861 its business, and all its money, property, credits, securities and effects were transferred to the Albert and Medical Life Assurance Company, now the Albert Life Assurance Company, which has lately been ordered to be wound up. The main question was whether the obligation of the shareholders in the Family Endowment Society to pay the petitioner's annuities had ceased.

The Vice-Chancellor said that the petitioner's annuity having been in arrear to more than the sum of £50, and the society having ceased to carry on business, the case had so far been brought within the Act of Parliament. The answers to the petition had been three: first, that the petitioner had ceased to be a creditor of the society; secondly, that the society was not a company capable of being wound up under the Act of 1862; and thirdly, that the Court ought in the exercise of its judicial discretion to leave the petitioner to his legal remedies. The first question was one of fact, and in his Honour's opinion the petitioner had entered into no new or substituted contract with the Albert. Upon the second his Honour thought the society had not ceased to exist, and that the office of the Albert was to all intents and purposes the society's place of business within the Act, and so that there was no difficulty as to the jurisdiction. As to the third suggestion, his Honour considered he could not properly or justly leave the petitioner to his remedy at law; and upon the whole he considered that the petitioner had made out his case, and was entitled to the common winding-up order with costs. The respondents, other than the directors, would have only one set of costs, the Albert to take its costs out of its own estate.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.

On November 15 a paper was read containing an Account of the Bheel Tribes of the Vindhya and Satpura Ranges, by Lieut. J. Waterhouse. The writer starts from a popular tradition among those tribes, according to which the originator of the Bheel race is said to have been a vicious and deformed son of Mahadeva, who, on account of having killed his father's favourite bull, was sent off to the jungle and uninhabited wastes, and told to cultivate where he chose. From this tradition, combined with the well known legend of the Mahabharata and Shri Bhagavata, by which the Nishadas are said to have descended from the Rajput King Vena, Mr. Waterhouse concludes that the Bheels had originally been settled in Judhpur and Marwar, but being driven thence by Rajputs, they emigrated southwards and established themselves in the mountains of Malwa and Candeish, in the Vindhya and Satpura ranges, and on the rugged banks of the Nerbudda and Tapti, where, protected by the natural conditions of the country, they had since dwelt, subsisting partly on their own industry, but mainly by inroads into the surrounding plains. Moreover, it was stated in the history of the princes of Judhpur and Oodeypur, that the Rajputs originally conquered their country from the Bheels. These are then divided by the writer into three classes—the Village, the Cultivating, and the Mountain Bheels. The first are said to consist of a few only, who, being scattered over the villages on the plains, were generally considered as honest and trustworthy, and often employed as the watchmen of their villages. The cultivating Bheels continued to live peacefully in hamlets under the rule of their Turwees, though still preserving traces of a ruder and wilder state, such as was prevalent among the Mountain Bheels, who, owing to the difficult nature of the places inhabited by them, had never been altogether subdued, and subsisted only by plunder. Notwithstanding these distinctions, the Bheels were one people, and their different tribes intermarried, though with certain restrictions. Polygamy was the rule with them, and it was by no means uncommon to find men with four or five wives. Many children were born, but a large portion died young, owing, perhaps, in a great measure, to the malaria in the jungles, where fever and diseases of the spleen were common. The writer then proceeds to give a brief description of their dress and arms, their language and some of their customs. The Bheels are said to be very vindictive, and to keep up feuds for many years, sometimes for generations. "Blood for blood" is their general maxim. The life of a man can, however, be made good to his relatives by payment in kind or money of 120 rupees, or of a woman of 60 rupees. In each community the head Bheel is called Turwee. His office is hereditary, and the police arrangements of the village are carried out by him. On the succession of any of the Rajput chiefs it is considered essential the head Bheel Turwee should make a mark with his blood on the forehead of the chief, without which ceremony no succession is considered complete. By the Rajputs intermarrying with the Bheel women a race results called Bheel-alahs, to which most of the chiefs of the Vindhya Bheels belong.

In consequence of their descent from the Rajput conquerors they obtain superior rank and authority among the Bheels, though, as is generally the result of a blending of different races, they seem to combine the viciousness and roguery of the subdued Bheels with the arrogance and haughty bearing of the conquering Rajput. The reading of Mr. Waterhouse's paper was followed by a lively discussion, in which several of the members present took part, who, from a residence in the places occupied by the tribes in question, were able to supply some new and interesting particulars with regard to their dialect and manners.

THE LOSS OF THE "CARNATIC."

A number of persons interested in the case of the loss of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's vessel Carnatic were in attendance at the Greenwich Police-court on Saturday. Seated near Mr. Maude, the magistrate, before whom the inquiry has been carried on, were Captains Baker and Hightman (nautical assessors), and Mr. O'Dowd (solicitor to the Customs, who conducted the inquiry on the part of the Board of Trade). Mr. Watney, of the firm of M'Leod and Watney (in the absence of Mr. Watkin Williams), appeared for the master and officers of the Carnatic; and Mr. Brown- ing for the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. The captain (Mr. Jones) was not present.

Mr. Maude said: The inquiry as to the loss of the Carnatic and the conduct of the master divides itself into two questions. First, the conduct of the master up to the settlement of the ship on the reef; and secondly, his conduct after this latter event. The first question calls for very little remark, the circumstances from which a conclusion is to be arrived at are very few, and are all agreed upon. The weather was throughout fine—a slight breeze in the direction of the ship's way—a clear sky overhead, with shining stars; and though there was the usual Red Sea haze on the surface, the headlands and islands, along which the course lay, were visible; above all, the Ashraffi revolving light, within two miles of which the ship passed, clearly visible throughout up to the reef, and on the reef; an experienced master, well acquainted with his course, and with the reef on which he struck, on the bridge during the whole of the passage. These are the circumstances which occasioned the calamity. The master gives no explanation but this:—That he steered the same course which he had done on his previous voyages, and he suggests that some unknown current must have drifted him to the westward. This would have been indicated had a single bearing of the revolving light been taken, but this was not done. Without suggesting any other more probable course, the Court cannot but consider the explanation unsatisfactory, and have no alternative but to pronounce the master guilty of a grave default. Upon the second question—the prudence of all the measures which the master took to secure the safety of his passengers and crew—the Court do not feel competent to give a precise and unanimous decision. He was placed under circumstances of great difficulty, and had only the choice of alternatives, each of which offered certain risks and disadvantages as well as advantages—under circumstances in which two equally experienced and sagacious officers might have arrived at different conclusions. It may, perhaps, be fairly contended by the master that on the 13th, the ship not appearing to have suffered any injury, and apparently lying undisturbed, the prudent and best course was for all to stay by her for a time. But before two A.M. on the 14th this state of things was greatly altered. The evidence was very conflicting between the officers of the ship, on the one hand, and the passengers examined at Bombay on the other, as to the bumping and slipping which the ship underwent; but it was quite clear at two o'clock the forces had been at work, and were probably going on, to what extent no one could say, which made the condition of the ship very precarious; and so sensible was the master of this that he called all his passengers to the fore-castle of the ship. The stern cabin and saloon were then filling with water, and the forehold was full. Here came the critical moment for the master's determination, whether the boats should at this time have had the provisions, water, and other supplies furnished to them, and the crew and passengers be started off from the ship at day-break, or whether it was most advisable to wait until nine or ten o'clock before such a step should be taken, as was done. There was some risk from the surf and breakers in the former; but was this likely to be lessened by waiting, and was not the risk of a sudden break up of the ship more to be apprehended? The Court greatly inclines to the former course, excluding entirely from consideration what really happened subsequently, and taking into account only the state of the facts as known at the time. In conclusion, the Court beg to express their concurrence with some of the passengers examined at Bombay, that the master and his officers in their exertions to secure their passengers' safety did all that experienced and brave men could do. The Court with great regret feel called upon for the default above mentioned under the first head to suspend the master's certificate for nine calendar months from this day.

Captain Baker: I think it right to state that I do not agree with the sentence.

Mr. Maude: I should perhaps have added that this sentence is only that of the other assessor (Captain Hightman) and myself.

Captain Baker: I wish it to be understood that I do not differ from the judgment. My objection is to the sentence.

It was generally understood, but not expressed openly, that Captain Baker considered nine months too long a period for the suspension of the certificate.

Miscellaneous.

MONT CENIS RAILWAY.—Owing to heavy snowstorms, the railway over Mont Cenis has been blocked up, and all communication by that route interrupted. On Friday last no English mail had been received in Florence since the previous Monday. The Brindisi mails arrived at last on Monday morning.

PURCHASE IN THE ARMY.—It is not impossible that the recommendation of the Royal Commission on Purchase in the Army, which advised that appointments to the rank of regimental lieutenant-colonel should in future be made by selection without purchase, may be definitely adopted and carried into effect next year.

OFFICERS FOR PERSIA.—Her Majesty has sanctioned the employment of British officers in Persia to aid in the organisation and drill of the Persian army. There will probably be four officers thus employed—one with the local rank of brigadier, as commander, and three with the rank of colonel. One of the latter will belong to each branch of the service. It is rumoured that Major Moore, of the Bombay Staff Corps, and Major Peyton, of the 7th Dragoon Guards, may be employed on this service.

GOOD SERVICE PENSION.—The distinguished service pension vacant by the appointment of Major-General Sir R. Walpole, K.C.B., to the colonelcy of the 65th Regiment, has been awarded to Colonel C. J. Foster, half-pay, late 16th Lancers. Colonel Foster, who has been thirty-three and a half years in the service, was present with the 16th Lancers during the campaign in Afghanistan under Lord Kane, including the siege of Guznee. He also served at the battle of Maharajpore on the 9th of December, 1843, and in the campaign in the Sutlej in 1846, including the battles of Buddiwal, Aliwal, and Sobraon. He is in possession of the Afghan, Maharajpore, and Sutlej war medals.

NEW SCHEME IN THE WAR OFFICE.—There would seem to be every reason to believe that the War Office Committee will recommend the junction in one office of the duties now discharged by the Adjutant-General and the Quartermaster-General. Whether this new "Chief of the Staff" is to absorb also the post of Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief is not so clear. But evidently the whole arrangement is merely preliminary to the not far distant day when the whole of the Military Staff, Commander-in-Chief, Military Secretary, Adjutant-General, and Quartermaster-General, will be combined in the person of one Military Under-Secretary of State at the War Office.—Broad Arrow.

THE SUZ CANAL.—The unfavourable rumours respecting the Suez Canal, which recently caused a fall in the price of the shares on the Paris Bourse, have called forth a statement from M. de Lesseps himself who characterises them as absurd. Under date Ismaïlia, the 26th Nov., he telegraphs that within the previous ten days fifty vessels, representing 35,000 tons, had passed from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea, and that no damage had been done to the banks. Another telegram of the same date from Ismaïlia states that the ordinary navigation was to commence with the Noel sailing vessel, bound from Bordeaux to Bombay. Two mail steamers bound to India had met in Lake Timsah, a Dutch ship from Java, a steamer from Réunion, and three merchant vessels from the Red Sea.

RUSSIA AND KHIVA.—The Russian papers continue to speak of the necessity of sending an expedition against Khiva. The Moscow Gazette declares that Russia, "in order to secure her commercial interests," cannot much longer postpone "placing Khiva in the same relations towards her as Bokhara and Kokhand." At the same time the Gazette considers that the conquest of the two latter countries would require too great a sacrifice on the part of Russia, and that all purposes would be met equally well if she maintained her relations with them on the present footing. "Of late," it says, "a great change has become visible in the disposition of the Khawates of Central Asia. They fear no Power so much as Afghanistan, especially since England has given her a subsidy; and in view of the danger which thus threatens them they rest their hopes on Russia."

THE MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The report of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, which has been issued in anticipation of the meeting, states that the works have made satisfactory progress during the half-year, although the period is that in which, from inability to carry on out-door operations vigorously, least can be done. A financial statement, embodied in the report, shows that the total amount of guaranteed capital received up to the 1st inst. was £999,666, the sum of £334, to make up £1,000,000, being due from holders of shares in India. The amount received up to the 1st inst., on account of the loan of £600,000 from the Secretary of State, was £418,000, making, with the above £999,666 guaranteed capital, a total of £1,417,666, out of which there has been expended and transmitted to India the sum of £1,388,494. There remains, therefore, unexpended, and not in transitu, of the guaranteed capital, and loan from the Secretary of State in Council, a balance of £211,172.

MILITARY.—Surgeon A. Vans Best, Bengal Medical Service, has been permitted to retire.

TELEGRAPHS TO INDIA.—The following letter appeared in a contemporary:—"Old Broad-street, E.C., Nov. 24.—Sir,—the East India merchants have just cause to complain of the condition of telegraphic communication with the East. For many weeks past messages have been coming with the most fitful irregularity, varying from nine to fifteen days and more, and, as long as we believed all were in the same boat, we have borne the inconvenience with only grumbling; but when we see that the Indian Council get messages through from Bombay in about thirty-six hours (vide the welcome telegram concerning Dr. Livingstone), we felt inclined to do more than grumble, and to inquire when matters are to improve. As an instance (one in many) of the present condition of the line, I may name that last Monday's mail from Bombay, with letters dated the 30th October, brought my firm copy of a message of the 23rd October, the original of which has never reached us, and is probably "delayed in Turkey," or elsewhere. Meanwhile the officials at each end receive our messages and money, but the telegrams themselves constitute a living example of a leap in the dark, as there is no possibility of obtaining any assurance that they will reach their destination at all.—Your obedient servant, A MERCHANT."

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on Nov. 24, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street; Mr. J. F. Leith in the chair. The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, congratulated the proprietors on the continued increase in the traffic, although in the past half-year the increase had not been in the same ratio of former years. The cause was stated in the report, and referred to casualties arising from violent storms, and especially from two cyclones that had seriously affected their traffic. At Dacca alone it was stated that eight hundred boats and vessels had been destroyed, and as a considerable portion of their through traffic was brought by steamers and other vessels to the company's stations at Kooshtea, the accidents and damage thus caused had prevented a large amount of traffic being brought to the railway. Famine and disease had prevailed in the North-West Provinces, and to a great extent in Northern Bengal also, affecting both passenger and goods traffic considerably. One of the company's steamers (Prince Alfred) had been laid up for eight months in consequence of damage, causing an outlay of £1,400 to place her again on the line. Notwithstanding those casualties, the railway and steamer traffic showed an increase of £2,301 as compared with the corresponding half of 1868. The sanction of the Government to making a short branch from the railway of 1½ mile in length to the Hooghly had been delayed in consequence of the site of the proposed bridge across the Hooghly not yet being decided. It was believed, however, that the short branch would be placed about 2½ miles above Sealdah. The Secretary of State for India had left the decision as to the site of the intended bridge across the Hooghly to the local Government, as being best qualified to settle that question. The directors expected that it would not be long before they received an answer from India as to the site of their branch line to the Hooghly. There was another matter spoken of with respect to the extension of the company's line to Darjeeling, which had been suggested by a former Governor-general of India, who had strongly recommended that the construction of that extension should be confided to the Eastern Bengal Railway Company. (Hear, hear.) He then explained the financial position of the company. Mr. H. H. Berens seconded the motion for the adoption of the report and statement of accounts. In reply to questions it was stated that the open line, rolling stock, and steamers earned on the average 4½ per cent. per annum on their cost of £1,981,842. The resolution was carried unanimously.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

MILITARY EXCHANGES.

The Broad Arrow shows that a man in England has to pay more than he ought to procure an English substitute for India, while an officer in India has to accept less than he ought for staying beyond his time in that country; and it is evident that if the officer in England who wished to stay there could be placed in direct communication with the officer in India who has made up his mind to remain where he was, both would be gainers. This is so obvious a desideratum that it seems strange that no more systematic steps are taken to bring it about. The order of relief in India is always known many months before a regiment starts on its homeward journey, while equally long notice is given to regiments ordered out to India. It would be easy to organise a system by which the names of officers in the home-bound regiment who are willing to stay in India should be communicated to those in the outward-bound corps who are anxious to escape Indian service, and in these days of rapid postage there would be ample time for entering into arrangements from which mutual advantage would result. On the other hand, the English and Indian Governments are plainly interested in facilitating such exchanges by whatever means they have in their power. In the first place, they save the double passage money of the outgoing and incoming officers. This saving is direct and immediate, but the advantages to the State do not end here. Its gain would be equally great in health and contentment. The officers who desire to remain in India are evidently above the average in their taste for the country, and also have found by experience that it is not irretrievably prejudicial to their health as it is to a percentage of all new comers. They have also at least some little knowledge of the people, and of the methods of dealing with them. If to this we add that by effecting exchanges in the usual manner between officers in England inter se and in India inter se, four transfers instead of two are needed, we think we have made it clear that the powers that be are directly interested in assisting to improve the agency by which exchanges are at present effected.

THE REDUCTION OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.

The Times understands that Sir William Mansfield has for some years past entertained a decided opinion that the armies of Bengal, Bombay, and Madras ought to be amalgamated, and that an unnecessarily large force is maintained in India. Next year may witness that amalgamation. Formerly, the difficulties of inter-communication rendered it desirable to have the army required for each Presidency complete in itself. But railways and telegraphs have so completely altered the conditions that no practical difficulties would occur if all the forces of India were controlled by one head, and borne on one establishment. Under this arrangement there would be unity, uniformity, and simplicity, instead of division, diversity, and complication. Economy would unquestionably result from the suppression of two out of the three sets of establishments. The question as to the desirableness of extensively reducing the strength of the military forces in India is by no means so simple as that of the amalgamation of the armies. If the native army be large, the British troops must—bearing a relative proportion to it—be large also. Consequently, the governing question is, has the native army been reduced to the lowest limits compatible with the safety of the country? What should be the proportion maintained between the British and the native troops? Manifestly the proportion was too small at the time of the mutiny. But since that period the native army has been diminished, while the British troops have been augmented until the proportion has risen to somewhere about two Europeans to five natives. The maintenance of ten thousand men would not amount to one-third of a million sterling a year. It is on stores and establishments that savings can and ought to be made. Though troops may be stationed in India, they are to a certain extent practically part of the forces of the kingdom, for in any emergency they would be drawn upon, as they were during the Crimean war. If, then, there should be a large withdrawal of troops from India, it is to be hoped that no sudden or wholesale reductions will be made in them.

Mails to India, &c.

The Mails to all parts of India, via SOUTHAMPTON, are now made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those via MARSEILLES every Friday, at 6 P.M.

For Ceylon, China, Straits Settlements, &c., the dates of despatch up to the end of December will be as follows, viz. —

Via SOUTHAMPTON, at 8 A.M., on the Saturdays, October 2, 16, and 30, November 20, and December 4 and 18.

Via MARSEILLES, at 6 P.M., on the Fridays, October 8 and 22, November 5 and 19, and December 3, 17, and 31.

The postage on letters may either be paid in advance or left to be paid on delivery, at the option of the sender; but in all cases where the postage is not fully pre-paid, the Letters will be charged, on delivery, with one additional rate of Ninepence, besides the usual postage.

This increase of postage will not affect the Letters of Officers of the Army and Navy serving in India and Ceylon; such Letters will continue to enjoy the privilege of transmission at the reduced postage of Sixpence the half-ounce, via Southampton, and Tenpence the half-ounce via Marseilles.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth.

A French line of Mail Packets leaves Marseilles every fourth Saturday. Postage for Letters and Papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English Mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these Packets must be specially addressed—"By French Mail Packet from Marseilles."

Up to the end of December the dates of despatch from London will be the Thursday evenings, September 30th, October 28th, November 25th, and December 23rd, and by Supplementary Mails on the morning following.

Supplementary Mails will also be made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday morning, via France and Italy to Brindisi, and thence by Italian packet to Alexandria, but should they not reach the latter place in time, the departure of the regular Mails for Suez will not be delayed. The postage of letters will be at the rate of 1s. 4d. for each half-ounce, and of newspapers 4d. for each four ounces.

PLEASANT, IF TRUE.—Just as we thought we had discovered an effectual remedy against being poisoned by the use of copper cooking-utensils a gloomy correspondent writes and informs us we are mistaken. When enamelled iron ware was first introduced it was a genuine and innocuous material that was used. Subsequently spurious imitations sprung up, and a composition, of which arsenic forms a very large portion, is used by some manufacturers, which, if it chips, as it will sometimes do, becomes mixed and dissolves with the food, and is as dangerous as the use of a dirty copper vessel. Great care should, therefore, be taken to ascertain that the enamel is genuine enamel. Our correspondent unfortunately omits to say where the real article is to be procured.—Madras Mail, Oct. 28.

THE EAST INDIA RAILWAY.—The Indian Daily News understands that progress is making with the Chord line of the E.I. Railway, though not much has been heard of it lately. There is, it hears, every prospect of an engine being able to traverse the distance between the Burrakar and Luckie Serai by the commencement of the new year, though the line may not then be ready for general traffic. A few months more, however, will see this great chord in working order, and it will be found of immense advantage, not only in saving distance, but in relieving the line, which, like all other great lines, is inconveniently crowded as it approaches the capital.

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, November 13; Agra and Calcutta, November 9; Madras, November 8.

The Viceroy was due at Calcutta on the 11th November, the departments and their heads having already arrived there. The 12th was fixed for the first meeting of the Legislative Council after its return from the Hills. Its business will probably begin with Bills for raising the income-tax everywhere, and the Salt duties in Southern India. Sir R. Temple landed at Bombay on the 8th November, and started the very next day for Calcutta. In due time we shall probably hear his version of the financial muddle discovered by his colleagues during his absence in England. It is thought however that Mr. Strachey will deliver the coming exposition of things as they are in the department he has lately been administering.

THE work of retrenchment proceeds apace. Orders have been received from home to reduce the Bombay Army by five regiments, the 26th, 27th, 28th N.I., the 3rd Sindh Horse, and Jacob's Rifles—two frontier corps. It is further rumoured that the divisional commands in Bombay will be cut down to two, and that Nuggur and Deesa will lose their brigadiers. On the Madras side seven regiments will probably be reduced, making nineteen in all lopped off in ten years from the only native army which proved quite trustworthy in 1857. Of course in both Presidencies indignation, if not widespread, is loudly expressed through the local journals. Retrenchments are always hard on somebody, but the question is whether these particular reductions are impolitic. If so many native regiments are disestablished, who will do the ordinary garrison work? It would surely pay better to reduce the British garrisons by a few thousands.

THE Madras Army has lost its Adjutant-general, Colonel James Robertson, who died of quinsy on the 7th November. He was senior Lieutenant-colonel of the 21st Fusiliers. From the Bombay Presidency we hear of the death of Brigadier-general Taylor, who has commanded the Deesa Brigade since INDIA in these days seems to be the land of new discoveries. It has shown us how to make gas from vegetable refuse, and even from sewage. It has offered to our study a new mineral akin to meerschauum. It has lately struck upon immense beds of coal in Central India. An Indian officer has found out a way of preserving steel and iron from rust. And now another officer, Lieutenant F. Pogson, seems to have discovered a way of making glass out of rice-husks. The rice-husk is heaped together and set on fire. The rice silex thus evolved answers to the white sand used in England for making the finer sorts of glass. It is fused with soda in a crucible, and the result is glass of a very fine quality. Lieutenant Pogson declares that every village in the rice districts of Bengal, Burmah, and elsewhere, could be taught to produce bricks of crude glass for sale to the glass factories. At present it seems that for every thousand tons of rice sold six hundred tons of rice-husk are thrown away as worthless. If the discovery should bear fruit, India would soon be able to supply herself with glass, instead of being dependent on this country for the commonest articles of that kind.

CHOLERA still prowls about Peshawar, and fever is so rife in the cantonments that scarcely a house has escaped its visits. In eight weeks, says the Delhi Gazette, the loss among our troops in that valley "would have made any frontier campaign disastrous." If Peshawar cannot be freed from epidemics, is there no way of securing the health of its garrison? The Delhi Gazette thinks there is a way, leading into the Cherat Hills. Cherat itself is only thirty miles from Peshawar, amidst a range of hills easy enough to climb, if a good road were made through them. That job could soon be done by English working parties in the cool season of the year. Cherat has a pleasant climate even in July. In September and October, the two deadliest months at Peshawar, the bracing air of Cherat would restore the jaded soldier to health and strength, while its height above the valley would save him from the periodical fever of the riceswamps surrounding the city. Scarcity of water seems to be the only objection, but that might surely be overcome. At any rate, some kind of sanitarium ought somewhere to be found for our unfortunate soldiers, scores of whom yearly fall a sacrifice to the sickly season at Peshawar.

If the Madras papers are frequently short of news, they make up for the defect by frequent bursts of waggishness, vented with so grave an air as sometimes to pass for earnest with unwary editors in this country. The latest joke of this sort is contained in a letter to the Madras Mail, which purports to give the "true explanation" of the Byron mystery, as learned by the writer "just fifteen years ago" from his father, who heard it from one of Byron's "most intimate friends." The grave air is well sustained throughout, from the prefatory appeal made to "a few exceptional minds" by an "obscure individual, wholly unversed in the methods by which the opinion of the impulsive public is created, modified, and controlled," down to his expression of wonder at the "unsuitable silence," preserved by many as well acquainted with the facts as the writer himself. The simple story makes out that Lord Byron's alleged outburst to his wife on their wedding day, that she had "married a devil instead of a man, and would soon find it out," did not express a mere figure of speech. The handsomest man in England had in fact "a small tail, a pair of rudimentary into two parts." This was owing to a fright his mother had received in looking at the famous picture of Satan Spurned in the La Haye Gallery. Lady Byron soon found out these peculiarities, was very unhappy, talked of separation, and at length carried out her threat because Byron stoutly refused to undergo a surgical operation. "In justice to his memory, it must be remembered that the art of producing local anaesthesia had not then been discovered." The story we have here condensed is told with a grave precision of dates and particulars, and a show of logical deduction from airy premisses, humourously suggestive of Mrs. B. Stowe. And, indeed, as far as adherence to facts and reason goes, she might as well have written the one story as the other. The caricature is hardly more absurd than the original.

INDIAN officers who wish to enter the Staff College had better turn their desires elsewhere. From the Horse Guards at any rate they can get no encouragement, and the India Office declines to enlarge for their behoof the liberal limits of the new furlough rules. A captain of Bengal cavalry, who sought to enter the Staff College without losing his Indian appointment, has been informed by the Secretary of State, after due correspondence with the Horse Guards, that two years and three months is the shortest period which any officer would take to pass through the Staff College at Sandhurst. No officer therefore who desires to keep his appointment will go to Sandhurst. But may not India have a Sandhurst of her own? If a Staff College is good for one country it must be good for another, and India already boasts an excellent school of engineering at Roorkee. A better place for studying the whole art of war the Northern Presidency could not easily furnish. If a more central site were needed, we must look for one nearer Jubbulpore.

We are sorry to see that the Commander-in-Chief of Bombay has had to warn officers on Courts-martial against dealing out too heavy punishments for comparatively small offences. He very properly observes that "crimes are more effectually prevented by certainty than by the length and severity of punishment." It seems that some officers on recent courts have been awarding the double sentence, so to say, of dismissal and branding against other than "worthless and incorrigible soldiers." If they have done so, the rebuke is well deserved. Too much caution could hardly be exercised in the awarding of a punishment so hard to justify even in the worst cases. Branding is an utterly brutal and degrading penalty, not because it inflicts bodily pain—from that point of view there is nothing to say against it,—but because it implies a sort of property in human beings, which neither the laws nor the moral sentiment of the day can tolerate. It marks a man for life moreover, and destroys what last traces of self-respect might still be lurking in the vilest nature. Military men of course argue that branding is the only way of dealing with the worst characters, but they said the same thing about flogging, and the British Army has survived the loss of that.

A TELLING instance of the harm that may be done by raising the export duty on some important staple of trade comes to us from British Burmah. It is not long since we commented on the wonderful progress made by that province in the last ten years. During that time the trade of British Burmah has more than doubled in value, while its customs' revenue has risen nearly four hundred and fifty per cent. Its population has increased seventy per cent. to its present figure of two and a-half millions, and the cultivated area has grown at the same rate. But there is a cloud visible in this blue sky. One of Mr. Massey's farewell gifts to Burmah was an increased duty on rice, the great staple of the province. One anna a maund sounds little enough, but it means in this case nine per cent. on the value of an article whose sale depends on its cheapness. The increased duty swelled the customs' revenue for the year by fifty or sixty thousand pounds; but it threatens to starve out the rice trade of Akyab and Rangoon. The temporary briskness caused by an unusual demand from China has passed away, and a formidable competition has sprung up in Cochin China, Saigon, and Siam, where the duty is merely nominal. The Rangoon merchants have expressed their fears in a memorial to the Viceroy, which is said to be endorsed by the Chief Commissioner himself. It is to be hoped that relief will be granted in time to save the rice trade of Burmah from sharing the doom of the Indian trade in saltpetre. That was killed by Mr. Wilson. The course of trade is like the "facilis descensus Avernus"—its fall is easy, but its recovery is very slow indeed.

EACH new mail from Egypt tends to remove some cause for doubt as to the ultimate success of the Suez Canal both in developing traffic and repaying its own outlay. A correspondent of the Daily News shows on good authority that if two ships of 1,500 tons each pass through the Canal each way daily throughout the year, the annual yield on ten francs a ton would be £873,000. An offer has already been made to keep the canal in order for £40,000 a-year. After paying interest on the shares held by the public there would remain a balance of £273,600 for salaries and distribution among the parties concerned, at the rate of one-seventh to the Viceroy and six-sevenths to the shareholders. From all we hear the daily average of ships passing through will much exceed the number thus assumed, and as ships of 2,000 tons burden have already made the passage, others of equal size are sure to follow them. Not a few of our large merchants and shipowners have begun to speak confidently of the advantages offered by the new highway from England to the East. On the engineering side of the question, the prospect seems equally encouraging. The removal of the Serapeum Rock, which still partially obstructs the Channel, the extension of one of the piers at Port Said, and the walling of some thirty miles of bank, besides what dredging remains to do, will not altogether cost two millions sterling, and most of this work can be done by degrees.

THE Report of the Royal Commission on Military Education is now under consideration at the War-office. Pending its decision on the changes recommended by the Commissioners, no selection will be made of candidates for the Queen's Indian Cadetships.

ACCORDING to present indications, it is probable that the Abyssinian War medals will not be ready for delivery before next year. Those officers of the Indian Army who may be on furlough at the time will receive their medals from the India-office.

WE understand that the troops who took part in the Bhotan Campaign and in the Hazara Expedition of 1868 are to share in the grant of the India medal, recently awarded for services on the North-Western Frontier of India.

THE Report of the Special Committee on Field Artillery Equipment for India has recently been issued, and the recommendations of the Committee are now under the consideration of H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

WE regret to hear that Sir Robert Vivian, K.C.B., was shot in the eye by accident, while out shooting on the estate of his brother, Lord Vivian. He has lost the sight of one eye and the other has been injured. His presence in the India Council will thus, we fear, be missed for some time to come.

RASH PRETENSIONS.

WE are obliged to General Briggs, whose letter appears in another column, for the fresh proofs he has laid before us of Mr. W. Hunter's over-boastfulness in respect to his contributions to Indian Ethnology. It is not at all surprising that one who had gone deeply into that subject when Mr. Hunter was still cutting his first teeth, should protest against the notion that this gentleman's book on the Non-Aryan languages of India, "for the first time in the history of India, places the governing race in direct communication with eighty millions of its Non-Aryan subjects and neighbours." So bold a pretension can only be compared with Canning's famous flourish about "calling the New World into existence to redress the balance of the Old." Both announcements must be taken very figuratively indeed. Reduced to its simplest terms, Mr. Hunter's statement probably means that he was the first to publish a full vocabulary of the Non-Aryan tongues of India, just as Canning merely meant to claim for himself the credit of having been first to acknowledge the independence of the South American Republics. It is perhaps only a magnificent way of putting a plain thing, to say that in publishing a new vocabulary you have placed the governing race in direct communication with eighty millions of its subjects and neighbours. Mr. Hunter may be congratulated on so happy an illustration of the grand style. Nor would any one begrudge him the merit due to a painstaking labourer in the philological vineyard, a distinguished follower in the steps of Mr. Bryan Hodgson, General Briggs, and others. But if he meant to claim for himself any higher honour than that of an expert compiler, building on other men's foundations, and making large if certainly brilliant use of other men's materials,—if he set up for being the great discoverer his words seem to imply, then we can only say that Mr. Hunter claims a good deal more than his due. Many years before he went out to India the records of more than one learned Society teemed with evidence of the discoveries made in the same field by successive Anglo-Indian explorers. To Mr. Hunter cannot even be assigned the praise of having been the first to point out the common origin of all the wilder races that crop up more or less largely all over India. As far back as 1846 General Briggs seems to have developed that very thesis in the transactions of the Asiatic Society. In two lectures delivered before that body in 1852 he supported the same views by a mass of evidence, linguistic and physiological, culled from the scattered writings of older observers among his countrymen, as well as from his own personal researches.

Meanwhile, as so often happens in like cases, another explorer, Mr. Bryan Hodgson, some time Resident in Nipal, had come independently to the same conclusions as General Briggs. His first papers on the subject seem to have been published in 1847 and 1849, after the first of General Briggs's had been read before the Ethnological Society. Whichever of these two really anticipated the other, it is quite certain that Mr. Hunter could not have been "the first to place the governing race in direct communication with its non-Aryan subjects." At the most he has but brought together fresh proof, founded mainly on Mr. B. Hodgson's papers, of the fact proclaimed by at least two forerunners, that in language, manners, and physical traits, all the aboriginal tribes in India come from the same Tamilian or Tibetan stock, which was spread all over the country before the advent of the Aryan Hindus.

ENGLISH SPELLING OF INDIAN NAMES.

How to reproduce Indian names of places and persons in English characters which shall neither shock the scholar, nor puzzle the general reader, is a problem yet unsolved. For the learned indeed there remains small difficulty about the matter, since the labours of successive philologists from Sir W. Jones to Professor H. Wilson have resulted in establishing a pretty uniform system of rendering Indian letters by their virtual equivalents in the Roman character. For any one who has studied that system in the works, for instance, of the late Dr. Forbes, it has become possible to translate any Hindustani or Sanskrit word out of its English into its native dress with perfect accuracy. But then the system itself, however based on sound principles, contains much that is purely conventional, and hard of mastering through one's inward consciousness. No untrained eye would readily guess that Khānpūr stands for Cawnpore, Mandraj for Madras, or Chhattagrām for Chittagong. An ordinary reader would not at once catch the identity of Srinagar with Sreenuggur, or of Fathigār with Futtighur. Even many an old Indian might be excused for stumbling over such names as Tallangambadi and Tiruvangodu, which are commonly disguised as Tranquebar and Travancore. And if an Englishman had never heard of Jalown, he would probably pronounce Jalaun as if the last syllable rhymed with jaun instead of rhyming as in German with crown. Fifty or eighty years ago, when the taste for scientific spelling was in its infancy, there was much less difficulty about the matter. People wrote of Tippoo Sultan, the Cauvery, Cawnpore, Mohammud Ally, and so forth, with a happy disregard of anything but the claims of phonetic accuracy. They never hesitated to adopt the simple rule of spelling Indian words in English with reference solely to phonetic results. They never stopped to consider whether C was the right equivalent for K, or "au" for "a," or "b" for "w," but, except in such a word as "Nabob," which Englishmen are sure to accentuate wrongly, their mode of spelling did generally convey to English ears a pretty good imitation of the original sounds. After a time however new forms of spelling grew into fashion. Scholarship began to wage an uncertain war with popular usage; each new writer aimed at some sort of compromise between the phonetic and the scientific system; and the general result, still further complicated by the anomalous modes of spelling our own language, may be found by reference to any Indian newspaper, gazetteer, or history.

Perhaps the first attempt to popularise the scientific system was made some twenty years ago by the editor of the Lahaur Chronicle. A good deal of laughter among Anglo-Indians was the natural result of so bold an innovation; but the paper held its ground, and the bold example was followed however haltingly by some of the editor's contemporaries in the press and the public service. The Punjab Government itself, if we are not mistaken, went some way in the same direction, although it has since apparently retraced its steps. Anyhow in these latter days we may note the tendency of many writers to waver between the old and the new modes of spelling. We have learned to spell Khan and Ali, Kabul and Nawab as they are spelt in India. Amritsar and Ambála crop up now and then in other pages than those of the Lahore Chronicle. The Punjab has lost a superfluous vowel, but is only half way as yet towards its final destination, the Panjáb. The Gaikwar of Baroda is trying hard to supersede the Guicowar, but finds a stout opponent in the Gaekwar. In some cases the change has proved even phonetically for the better, but on the whole not much has been gained in that direction. Kabul is nearer the true sound than Cabool, but the unlearned would find surer guidance in Kaubul. Ambála would roll correctly out of a Scotch or German mouth, but the average Englishman would be less likely to go wrong with Umballa. On the whole, it may be said that the new ideas about spelling have resulted mainly in illustrating the number of new faces which old proper names can be made to wear, and thus adding to a writer's perplexity as to which of several modes of spelling he ought to adopt.

These remarks are suggested by some which have lately appeared in the Friend of India on the best way of spelling names in the new Indian Gazetteers. The system or want of system visible in older works of this class may at once be set aside as out of harmony with modern scholarship; but the compilers of those now instituted by the Indian Government should beware of making too many sacrifices to the new demand for scientific accuracy, in a work designed for the general public no less than for scholars. It would never do to ignore the popular spelling of such words as Calcutta and Cawnpore, because science insists on knowing only Kálicháta and Khánpúr. There is no need of course for acknowledging all the different ways of spelling places named after Sikandar for example, or Phirozit, or beginning with Muzáfar; but some reference should at least be made to forms so common as Moozuffernuggur, Ferozepore and Secunderabad. How many readers would guess without special guidance that Munnipore and Puttiala should be looked for under the alias of Manipur and Patiala? Would any one accustomed to Kurrachee turn by instinct to its proper form, Karáchi? If the compilers adopt the scientific forms of spelling, they ought at any rate to help the unlearned in their efforts to find what they want, either by means of a prefatory table of rules, or by placing the phonetic names in their alphabetic order, followed by a reference to their scientific substitutes, or else by giving the old-fashioned forms of spelling in the index. If the second rule be adopted, the order of the English alphabet must of course be followed throughout the work. Indeed, we may fairly assume that under any circumstances that order will be observed in preference to the order of native alphabets, if the gazetteers in question are designed for the general information. Any one or two of the plans we have suggested would satisfy any reasonable stickler for philological precision, while the less learned many would gradually be taught to spell Hindustani names according to some kind of understood rule.

THE ABORIGINES OF INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I perceive in your last number you have remarked on the pretensions of Mr. W. W. Hunter to be the original discoverer of the aboriginal race of India, which he claims in his preface to the work on the languages of that people in the following words:—"The long series of Indian conquerors—Aryan, Afghan, and Mogul—have in turn laboured to extirpate them; the English are now endeavouring to reclaim them. But in order to civilise, it is necessary for us to understand them; and this book, for the first time in the history of India, places the governing race in direct communication with eighty millions of its non-Aryan subjects and neighbours."

Now in this passage there are two inaccuracies. The first, and most important, is the novel discovery of these races by the author; the other, less important, as to their number, as well as the assertion that "the Aryans, the Afghans, and Moguls have in turn laboured to extirpate them." It is admitted that the Aryans crossed the Suleimani Mountains at a very early period, and wrote the Vedantic hymns several centuries before Christ, and found a black race of people in the Punjab, whom they designated as Dasyas—a term which may mean inhabitants, or slaves; but it is certain the latter were subjugated, though not destroyed, but deprived of their lands and treated as adscripti glebæ, slaves of the soil.

It is believed that the Aryans, about the tenth century before Christ, crossed the Sutlej and the desert, and entered on the fertile plains of India proper, gradually subjugating its inhabitants to their rule, occupying their lands, and employing the original race residing in the plains as cultivators of their own lands for the profit of their conquerors. It was not until several centuries after that the Aryans (now called Hindus) occupied the upper region of India north of the Vindayan Mountains, a tract lying between Bengal and Guzerat, in the latitude of the Northern tropic. This historical fact is recorded in the Institutes of Menu, a work usually ascribed to the eighth century before Christ. The Hindus, after some length of time, pushed their conquests further south; but there existed a king of the older race, according to W. Wilkes, the historian of Mysore, at Talkand, a city twenty miles east of the modern capital, as late as the tenth century after Christ. Now, so far from the Aryan Hindus striving to extirpate this race, they employed those in the plain as police in every village or township in India, as civic guardians, as well as to oppose the invasion of their own race driven to the hills, who to this day claim the right of invasion into the lands from which they had been driven. Now, this is the state of things anterior to our occupation of the country, and it has endured for at least three thousand years. The discovery however is not new, as you have shown, in quoting Outram, Hall, and his successors in Mairwara, Campbell and Macpherson among the Khonds, and others. In the transactions of the Royal Asiatic Society you will find two lectures by myself on the Aboriginal Races of India, abstracts of which were read in 1847 and afterwards published in the Transactions of the Ethnological Society, and subsequently in those of the British Association. In case you may not think it worth while to refer to these authorities, I send a copy of two lectures, published in the proceedings of the Royal Asiatic Society in 1852, by which you will perceive how inaccurate are some of the statements of Mr. W. W. Hunter. That gentleman applied to me for information on the Aborigines when in England, and I sent him a copy of that which I now submit for your inspection. In his work he has casually mentioned my name, he has occasionally quoted my authorities, and, in returning his thanks for the assistance he has received from no fewer than thirty-seven authorities, my name is mentioned as "affording him some valuable suggestions." He was, therefore, fully aware that he was not the only one "who had for the first time in the history of India placed the governing race in direct communication with its non-Aryan subjects," but he was in possession of this fact as quoted by me from the words of Mr. B. Hodgson, whose labours and opportunity exceeded my own. That author quoted by me declares "his conviction that all the Aborigines of India are northmen of the Scythic race, and belong to the Thibetan branch. They are, says he, all of the Tamilian family, and now, for the most, British subjects. They are counted by millions, extending from the Snows to the Cape (Comorin). Yes, in every jungly or hilly tract there exist hundreds of thousands of human beings, not materially different from the Germans as described by Tacitus. These primitive races are the ancient heritors of the whole soil, from all the rich and open parts of which they were driven by the usurping Hindus."

GENERAL LIST AND STAFF CORPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Your last week's correspondent, "S. C.," is apparently surprised that although superseded colonels and assistant surgeons have had their champions, no one should as yet have taken up the question of Staff Corps versus General List. To me the reason why seems obvious enough—namely, that between those two bodies of officers there are, or ought to be, no grounds of difference. However, as “S. C.” is evidently not of the same opinion, and has come forward on the Staff Corps side, I trust that you will kindly permit me to reply in behalf of the General List. The grievance is simply this: that a number of General List men have been promoted before certain Staff Corps officers, who were their seniors in the Service. Such is undoubtedly the case—and, may I ask, why not? “S. C.,” though complaining of the fact, leaves us to form our own conjectures as to where or why it involves any injustice to Staff Corps men. The mere fact of the General List being junior in the Service by two or three years is no argument at all. Was it ever a rule, even in the good old days which Indians are so given to regretting, that men should always retain through life the relative positions they held to each other as cadets? Were there not lucky and unlucky regiments, and were not men over and over again promoted in one Corps years and years before their seniors in another?

Now how does the question stand with regard to the General List? These officers on entering the Service were left unposted, simply because posting them to regiments, whose fate was uncertain, would only have had the effect of making confusion worse confounded; at the same time, they were told that they should each in their turn be promoted as vacancies occurred. The principle is perfectly simple and perfectly fair. For instance, if a vacancy as captain occurs in a regiment which has not any lieutenants, as there is no one else to be promoted, a General List man steps in. What other course could be followed? Not to fill up the vacancy would be most unfair, and to bring in officers from other regiments would be worse than unfair; for common sense at once points out that had General List men been posted, one or other of them would as a matter of course have gained the step. Strange, is it not, that what is thought to be a grievance now would never have been considered a grievance at all had they only been posted; the disparity might have been twenty years instead of two, yet no one would have dreamt of calling it unfair.

Again, what has the “seductive bait” of 1866 to do with the question? It certainly was a very pretty bait, and very greedily swallowed. It enabled the know-nothings (in a Hindustani point of view) to enter the staff corps on equal terms with passed men—it looked very tempting, and a perfect shoal was immediately netted. It showed clearly that “old birds” are not always proof against “chaff,” and really “S. C.” seems more than half inclined to be indignant that the young birds of the general list were prevented by a “sort of barrier” from being caught as well. Why this barrier (in the shape of an examination) was erected no one knows; perhaps some kind soul behind the scenes was watching over youth and inexperience; or, possibly, the Secretary of State, like a true sportsman, was anxious to preserve the young birds, with an eye to their affording him future sport. However, as I said before, this is outside the question, for even when a man enters the staff corps, he still leaves his name in the cadre of his old regiment, to regulate (i.e. in plain English, to check) promotion, and over this name the general list man is not, under any circumstances, allowed to pass. In consequence of the removal of Lieutenant-colonels, it doubtless often happens that a Staff Corps officer's name travels up the cadre of his regiment at a more rapid pace than his unfortunate owner is able to climb the Staff Corps ladder. This certainly is very galling. For a man to see only his name promoted and to feel that had he acted differently it might have been himself, is very hard lines; nor is the reflection that he alone was the author of his own misfortune calculated to soothe his feelings. It tends to make him chew the cud of bitter self-reproach; it makes him very wary in the matter of “seductive baits” for the future; and it sometimes even makes him so far unreasonable as to complain that General List men are passing over the heads of officers belonging to old cadres, while he remains perfectly oblivious to the fact that no General List man can obtain a step in any cadre until every one of the officers of that cadre have been promoted, either by name (if they belong to the Staff Corps) or in person (if Locals). I therefore most emphatically deny that there has been any supersession. Of course, it frequently happens that a General List man obtains a higher position in one corps than his senior of the Old Service in another; but if this can be called unfair, then every officer in the Old Service, from time immemorial, who was unlucky, may equally consider himself to have been the victim of supersession. Unfortunately, General List men, from the fact of their never having been posted, are looked upon as a kind of social pariahs. They are often taunted with having signed some agreement on entering the service which is supposed to prevent their claiming rights, and they are, therefore, supposed to have none. I have, however, been given to understand, that if a bond is too sweeping or indefinite, it is sometimes apt, on that account, to become void in the eye of the law. Whether the agreement signed at the India House by unsuspecting schoolboys was of this nature or not is, perhaps, a question that the nation will, one of these days, be called upon to decide. Meanwhile, General List men cannot be too thankful that the umpires will, in any case, be their fellow-countrymen in England, and not their comrades in India. S. B.

THE COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF “ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.”

SIR,—Now that so many complaints are made of the system of cramming which is carried on in the preparation of candidates for the above examination, it is surely but fair to examine these complaints attentively, if by doing so we can show that the grievance they mention is not nearly so serious as they wish to make us believe. Now their chief ground of complaint is that these examinations have now reached a point at which the examiners are forced to set questions quite out of the course of ordinary reading, because if they did not do so too many of the candidates would be able to answer them, and those who had really read very deeply would have no advantage over the rest. Further, they say that the questions which they do set in pursuance of this object are such that without an extraordinary amount of cramming no candidate could possibly answer them.

But though complaints are frequently made on this subject, I have never seen any examples given us of such “cram questions,” and all my own knowledge of these examinations has led me to believe that on the whole the “cram system” does not succeed; but that if a man passes, he generally, if not always, passes on subjects like classics or mathematics and English, which he has been working at for several years before he goes up. For I should certainly not call it “cram” if a man has worked two or three years on a subject, however recondite his researches may have been during that time. What I should define that somewhat vague term to mean is, the sudden and hurried getting up of a number of separate facts or ideas without any clear perception of their import or of their connection with each other.

Now, this sort of knowledge is very seldom of use in any examination, but least of all in the one I am now speaking of, for even if a man, by some sort of miracle, manages to do his papers by this “cram,” without displaying his true ignorance, yet a fiercer ordeal awaits him in the viva voce, in which he is certain to be detected; after which the examiner, of course, marks his papers as they really deserve. I would, therefore, say again that though I have known many candidates going up for the examination, I never knew one who got through owing to “cram;” and I should strongly advise no one who wishes to pass to rely much on what are called “tips,” for the examiners are much sharper in discovering them and in appreciating them at their real worth than the generality of people believe. The great error frequently made is in not distinguishing between real knowledge and “cram,” between (for instance) a quotation from Shakespeare aptly introduced, and another from Layamon, or some other out-of-the-way author, pulled in somehow, evidently just to show that the candidate knows it. The first pleases an examiner and appears natural, whilst the second is at once marked as “cram,” and does more harm than good to the rest of the paper. On the whole, therefore, I think that the complaints made against the present system are unfounded, and I should at least like to see more evidence adduced in their support.

THE SUEZ CANAL AND INDIAN TRADE.

The Englishman remarks that up to the present moment ship-owners seem unable to realise the true character of the impending revolution in the mode of conducting the trade between India and China, and the busy communities of the West. No sooner was it known along the coasts of the Mediterranean that the Canal would be completed at the time fixed than the trading enterprise which of old distinguished their many cities awoke to a new life. Italy pressed with renewed vigour the claims of Brindisi as a port of departure for passengers to the East. France saw a new chance of securing that direct trade with India for which her merchants and manufacturers have so long sighed; and even Austria saw her opportunity, and set about the building of a fleet of steam vessels specially adapted for the work they will have to perform. To the old centres of trade with the East the opening of the Canal appears as a golden opportunity for disputing on fairer terms than was heretofore possible the commercial supremacy of England. But England, although less enthusiastic, less quick of apprehension than the people of the South, is not behindhand. The dockyards of her great ports resound with the note of preparation, and she will, as soon as the opening of the Canal shall have become un fait accompli, pour down the dreaded Red Sea such a fleet of steamers as will make her rivalry almost as formidable in those waters as it now is on the longer route by sea. This seems likely to be the first great result of the opening of the Canal. Sailing ships cannot for months together successfully navigate the Red Sea, hence steamers have become a necessity, and hence, should the Canal be the success it seems to be, the seaborne trade of India is likely to be deflected in a large measure to the Canal. The Eastern ports are likely to be thronged with steamers competing for cargo. The effect of this competition will soon be felt in reduced freights, that is, cheaper transit. Indian produce will reach the European markets in a shorter period, and orders will be completed within a few weeks of the date on which they may be given by telegraph. All these are signs of a revolution in the commerce of the East, which those concerned would do well to ponder over in time.

AN INDIAN LOCAL ARMY.

The Bombay Gazette supposes that some time or other the British nation will return to a rational state on the subject of the proper military institutions for India. In due course, when the failure of the staff corps system, coupled with its tremendous expense, has been more manifestly felt and acknowledged, statesmen will begin to appreciate the double blunder which cursed the land with amalgamation, and destroyed the regimental system; for we cannot regard the present plan as a regimental system. The paucity of European officers is an evil that will tell heavily against us should we chance upon a war; and the only excuse for its adoption is the sincere belief of our rulers that a millennium of peace has dawned upon India. But the scanty supply of officers is not the only evil. Perpetual change is another of equal magnitude, for it is impossible that regiments in which the body corporate of officers, so to speak, is not maintained, can be so effective in a military point of view as one where it is maintained. Then consider the absurdity of the relation between the European and native regiments in regard to officers. The European regiments are so amply supplied that there is often, at least on paper, one officer to twenty men. It might be supposed from this proportion that it was the Europeans and not the natives who required the most leading. The theory of our present establishment would seem to be that the native is the superior soldier, best able to take care of himself in battle, most efficient on detached service, more likely, if deprived of his European officers, to bear himself with prudence and courage and address in moments of supreme difficulty. It assumes that the Briton, on the other hand, is a poor creature, needing a great many gentlemen to show him the way, to keep up his courage, to nurse him through peril. But the theory is notoriously untrue. If the British soldier—who is not the worst in the world—requires from thirty-five to forty officers, surely the native soldier, who is not the best, though good when fairly treated and fearlessly led, demands at least as many. But the truth, we take it, is, that the British army is over-officered—an evil arising partly from the purchase system, under which an officer is not paid for his services, but simply gets interest for money expended; and hence he looks for comparative indulgence and considerable periods of leave. The Prussian army—not a bad army, as times go—is nothing like so overlaid with officers as the English army. Surely it would be politic to diminish the number of officers in British, and to increase the numbers in native regiments, at the same time encouraging men to stay with corps in whose fortunes they have cast their lot. We believe it was also a great mistake to abolish the local European army. Of course there are many and powerful objections to such an institution; but, on the other hand, the advantages it conferred on the country were manifold. The European regiments were the fixed heads of the presidency armies, and gave them a tone, and spirit, and standard. They had Indian traditions—good and bad, no doubt—but good on the whole. They included officers permanently stationed in the country and interested in the people. The ranks and the non-commissioned ranks furnished supplies of men for various occupations and uses, and as they attracted a class of men superior to the ordinary private soldier, a career was opened to men of some education, whose families had fallen into misfortune, not to be found then or now in the Royal army. And their presence here saved the Indian Exchequer great expense. They were never relieved at considerable annual cost; the sole expense of their maintenance in strength being the transport of recruits to India, and the transport of retired or discharged soldiers to England. How much we should save if we had a Local European Army, and if the Royal regiments were sent out sufficiently strong at first to stand in need of very few supplies in order to keep up their normal strength! We observe that there are some who think it possible, by the demoralising bounty system, or other plan, to detain in India a large number of men who volunteer from departing corps. It is a delusion. Many, of course, will volunteer, but at the best they are a very sham kind of local force. Moreover, they are not the same kind of men as those who formed the old Locals. If the service were restored on a sound and liberal footing, we are certain that there would be no difficulty in getting recruits of a superior class. In fact, we believe that the recruiting officers would be able to pick and choose to an extent beyond the dreams of the Royal army recruiters, and that service in India would become popular.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

The Madras Times protests against the local management of the army, and the local government of the presidency being placed in the same category. There is no analogy between them. The army is an Imperial institution that can and ought to be governed from its Imperial head-quarters. It has no local interests, no necessity for varying treatment in the different parts of India, such as would make it necessary that expensive head-quarters should be maintained in each presidency. But with the administration of the civil government it is different. Each presidency has its own characteristics that require to be treated in a special manner. It has its own capabilities and its own requirements, that can only be understood and successfully treated on the spot. As the Friend reminds us, India is as large as all Europe, exclusive of Russia, and we would add that the different sections of its populations have interests and capabilities almost as various as the different nations of Europe. Yet the Friend evidently contemplates with pleasure the establishment of a system that will place the government of so extensive a country in the hands of one central authority with mere agents stationed in the various presidencies. We should regard such a proposal, if put seriously forward, with some alarm. We are unable to remember any instance of a Government attempting with success to exert its influence over so wide an area, although there is no difficulty in calling to mind many that have failed in the attempt. History seems to tell us that governments are like soap bubbles—they may be expanded to a certain limit, and if inflated beyond that limit they must burst. We believe that were the Government of India to undertake the work of local administration that is now, with much interference, performed by the local governments the attempt would be disastrous to the country. It seems to us that what is needed is more centralisation than at present in one direction, and less of it in another. In all that relates to the domination of Great Britain, and more especially in all relating to the management of the army and of our political relations with neighbouring powers, we cannot have too much centralisation; and in all that relates to the well-being of the people of the several parts of India we cannot have too little. A Commander-in-Chief at Calcutta or Simla having the complete control of the whole army could make of it a more perfect military machine than if it were broken up into separate chief commands; but we hold that the very reverse of this would attend any attempt of the Viceroy to govern the whole of India. The degree of centralisation that has already been attained has greatly reduced the fiscal productiveness of the country by applying unsuitable taxes, while it has greatly increased the expenditure by depriving the local governments of all incentives to economy.

A GOOD IDEA.—The Ahmedabadees have set a novel example to the rest of India. We all know what we should do when we want to show our approbation of our public officials—to testimonialise them at once. But it has hitherto been a mystery what ought to be our course when we are minded exactly the opposite, and this mystery the people of Ahmedabad have lately solved to our satisfaction. Their deputy magistrate—a Parsee, by name Cooverjee Cowasjee—had made himself obnoxious, so much so, that judging from accounts we have been receiving for the last twelve months, the man would have made a capital Legree if he had been the foreman of a gang of slaves. This deputy magistrate has been lately translated to a new post, so that while leaving Ahmedabad, his loving friends of the city showed their sense of his merits after a novel fashion. They assembled in force at the railway station on the morning of his departure with trays of sweetmeats, and distributed them amongst the crowd in token of rejoicing at having at last got rid of him. In England, perhaps, they would burn his effigy.—Native Opinion.

STATION TALK.

FAIZABAD, Oct. 25.—Captain Saxby's prediction as far as Faizabad was concerned does not appear to have been altogether without foundation, although the 5th, the date fixed for the atmospheric disturbance, was a calm and almost cloudless day with us. During the night dark heavy clouds made their appearance, and rain commenced falling very early the following morning (the 6th), and with slight intermissions continued the whole day. The succeeding night was the same, with the sole difference that at intervals it poured in torrents. On the 7th it rained again all day, ceased for a couple of hours in the evening, and then set in again for the night, and continued till about seven o'clock next morning (the 8th), when it also partially cleared up. At about half-past three in the afternoon dark heavy clouds again appeared, accompanied by a somewhat severe gale, which only lasted for about five minutes, but nevertheless left some tokens behind. Several trees were torn up from their roots, and some damage caused to others. The rain continued to fall till about 6 p.m., at which hour the wind, which had hitherto blown from the east, veered round to a north-westerly direction. The clouds began to disappear, and a fine starlit sky supervened. We have had more rain than was needed, and we began to hope that we should have no more, but we little expected what was in store for us. A little before 11 p.m. I was woken by a high wind blowing from a north-easterly direction, accompanied by heavy rain. The gale increased each minute, and for four full hours a perfect tempest blew. I have never experienced the like in the Upper Provinces, and we were all in mortal dread of the roofs of our dwelling-houses being blown right away. At about three in the morning (9th) the wind abated somewhat, but a gale continued blowing and kept up all the day. The rain fell in torrents all the morning, and it drizzled off and on throughout the day. On the 10th clouds were still hanging about, but by evening they had disappeared, and we have been blessed with fine weather since. The destruction to trees was immense; I may safely say they fell in hundreds; and gardens that had had years of toil devoted to them were reduced to wrecks in that short while. House property also suffered considerably, and huts in the town fell in numbers, while a still greater number were rendered untenable. At Ajudhia, owing, I suppose, to its not being so sheltered as the city, the destruction was worse. Happily accidents to human life were, figuratively speaking, nil. I have only heard of one death, caused by the falling of a tree, and a few persons were injured, but not seriously. The standing crops have suffered very much.

SAUGON, Nov. 3.—The fine weather which we are now enjoying at this station seems to have set numbers on the move either for business or pleasure. Detachments of troops, convalescents and invalids, have proceeded on their journey for England or the hills, and the regiment located here, H.M.'s 7th Fusiliers, are busily preparing for their transit to the Bombay Presidency. The head-quarters and seven companies march on the 3rd December next, and the remaining three companies, when relieved by the 1-19th, proceed to Nee-much. The former are destined for Aden, I believe, preparatory to their onward progress next year to England. Auctions are now plentiful, every one anxious to sell, but there are no buyers except the auctioneers themselves, "Parsees," who are purchasing at their own prices with the view of realising immense profits from the 19th Regiment. Bungalows are very highly priced in rent and a great many are empty. On the arrival of the regiment the officers would do wisely to call for committees previous to occupying them. They will find this a very dear station, as compared with the Punjab, in provisions as well as houses. The new barracks, which are half completed, are now monuments, so to remain in their unfinished state, until the great deficit in our revenues is made up, or until the G. G. or the acute financier can frame a new tax or develop the resources of the Central Provinces, which means, I suppose, raise the wind to such an extent as to enable the continuation of the works. In the meantime, executive engineers, sub-engineers, overseers, and their subordinates, are singing, like the frozen-out gardeners,—

Oh! dear! what is to become of us!

We have no work to do! &c., &c.

But the poor coolies, men, women, boys and girls, who used to throng the roads morning and evening, going to and from their daily labour, are now no longer to be seen. They have disappeared, and with them, I imagine, their daily bread, for it may be safely presumed they were dependent for their food upon the wages earned in building the new barracks. We have no amusements here now, not even a theatre or a reading-room, no races, no cricket, nothing to drive dull care away; but work, work, everlasting work, and fever very prevalent. The general and his staff have gone to Jubbulpore.

MEERUT, Nov. 6.—General Troup and family have returned to the station from Simla. Three batteries of artillery have left us. The officers of the two native regiments are selling off their equipages and household furniture. Vehicles, horses, almirahs, tables, chairs, bedsteads, &c., may be had at almost any price. The new batteries of artillery are not to be here for some time. When they come, they will have to pay for their chattels at very different rates from those which obtain now, as dealers must have their profit on the things which they buy on speculation.—Dr. R. W. Berkeley, Assistant Surgeon, Royal Artillery, a man highly esteemed for his skill and his earnest devotion to the duties of his profession, has gone with his battery to Barrackpore. He had just been appointed Staff Surgeon to the Divisional and Brigade Staff. As he was not in robust health, the march will probably do him good; but we sincerely hope to see him back again in Meerut and it is understood that some arrangements are on foot which may lead to this result. After the pig-sticking at Ghurmuktesur, the Viceroy arrived here on the night of the 3rd, slept in his railway carriage, which contains a bedroom, and glided away quietly to Ghazecabad, en route for Allahabad, at five o'clock on the following morning. His Excellency had left before any one but the railway authorities and one or two others knew of his arrival. I have not yet heard any particulars of the sport. "Ill news travels fast," and if any of the hunters had come to grief, the fact would have been known here ere now. There have been no more cases of cholera among Europeans since the death of Davis, a soldier of the 105th Light Infantry, on Tuesday evening. It is most difficult to find out what happens in the city, which is separated from the European lines by a mile and a-half. Of course the heads of the police know, but their knowledge is not communicated to the public. Now and then the truth oozes out; but the military order is still in force which prohibits soldiers and their families from entering the city, and undoubtedly it will be withdrawn when the Brigade Major ascertains that such a course can be adopted with safety. The weather is perfect; there is not wind enough while I write to stir a rose-leaf. Temperature 55 deg. this morning at sunrise. One can enjoy a brisk walk before breakfast now.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MOVEMENTS OF MR. MORRIS.—Mr. J. H. Morris, Officiating Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, arrived in Allahabad on the 5th inst.—Pioneer, Nov. 8.

SIR W. AND LADY MANSFIELD.—The Mofussilite hears from Simla that Sir W. Mansfield has for some time had completed all his arrangements for England next March, and that Lady Mansfield leaves in a few days.

RANGOON.—From Rangoon we learn of the death of Mr. D. G. Nicolson, a well-known barrister in practice at the Rangoon Courts. Mr. Tarrant, the Officiating Recorder at Moulmein, who was lately struck down by apoplexy, was still very ill.

AN UNPLEASANT VISITOR.—Tigers must be turning over a new leaf, for one was met in Dacca at the church door. Its little game may have been quite orthodox, but we agree with the local newspaper that the tiger had no business to be there, any more than Russians have to be in Saghalien.—Pioneer.

A WANT SUPPLIED.—A want long felt in India is about to be supplied in an efficient as well as a cheap form. We allude to an edition of "Unrepealed Acts of the Legislative Councils of India and Bengal, with Notes and Index," by James W. Furrell. The work will be published by Messrs. Newman and Co.—Englishman.

SIMLA.—We give the very last piece of gup from Simla for what it is worth. Rumour there has it that Sir Richard Temple will succeed Sir Donald McLeod as Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, and that Sir William Mansfield on being relieved by Lord Napier of Magdala will take his seat in the Council as Finance Minister.

HIGH COURT OF BENGAL.—It is now, we believe, almost certain that Sir Richard Couch will succeed Sir Barnes Peacock at Calcutta. Who will succeed Sir Richard? No answer to that question can be given. More than one judge in India, besides Mr. Westropp, is said to be anxious for the appointment. Let us hope that the Home Government will give us a man strong in law, and also strong in tact.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The crops in the Central Provinces still continue flourishing, and in many places where the cotton had suffered from the heavy rain it was rapidly recovering. In Wurdah the out-turn of the cotton crop was expected to be very good. We are sorry to add that the reports from the majority of the stations say that fever is very prevalent.—Englishman.

DANGERS BY ROAD.—Recently, whilst the wife of Lieut.-Colonel Macbean, 92nd Highlanders, was travelling at night between Jubbulpore and Nagpore, she was alarmed by the horses suddenly turning off the road, so suddenly indeed that the gharry was upset. Fortunately no one was injured. The cause of the fright of the horses was the rush of a tiger across the road under their very noses.—Indian Army Gazette.

REWARD OF MERIT.—The following order, issued by the Government of India, in the Foreign Department, has been republished for general information:—In consideration of the liberal spirit which Mussamut Mitho Bisi and Mussamut Mandar Bisi, the wives of Rai Sah Baniwari Lal Bahadur, of Chaprah, have evinced in offering to give Rupees 10,000 each towards the construction of a gate and well in the serai at that place, his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council has been pleased to confer upon each the title of "Jawad-ul-Nissa, Saludab-i-Khandan," as a personal distinction.

NEW ORPHANAGE AT MUSSOORIE.—Government has sanctioned a grant-in-aid of Rs. 15,000 towards the erection of an Orphanage in Mussoorie for Roman Catholic boys, on the condition that Rs. 15,000 in addition be raised by voluntary subscriptions. The Orphanage is planned to accommodate 300 boys, and a subscription in its aid has been opened here by the Roman Catholic chaplain. Indian orphanages have saved many a young Christian from a doom of horrid vagrancy, mayhap of crime, and, despite sectarian considerations, should meet with the support of all.—Mofussilite.

RUNNING DRILL.—Captain Stockwell, the Director of Military Gymnastics, reports to the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India very favourably on the new institution of "running drill." It was practised regularly by almost every European regiment in India for three months of last cold season, and in no case did either the commanding or medical officers attribute any ill effects to it. The running is carried to the length of 900 or 1,000 yards. Captain Stockwell concludes that it may be considered "a valuable agent of sanitation." We are very glad (and not surprised) that the exercise is found healthy; because, valuable agent of sanitation or not, running drill would have to be learnt if English regiments are to be as efficient as French.—Pioneer, Nov. 10.

MR. J. H. COHN.—Another of the well-known old inhabitants of Calcutta has passed away in the person of Mr. J. H. Cohn, the news of whose death was telegraphed from Galle yesterday (5th). Mr. Cohn had been unwell for some time, and was ordered to sea for a change, but died on the passage between Madras and Galle. Mr. Cohn had been a resident of Calcutta for nearly thirty years, and was the pioneer and founder of the German trade, which is now annually increasing. His business talents and reputation are too well known to need comment, but many a poor family in Calcutta will have cause to regret his loss, as his hand was never closed to an application from the needy, and his assistance was given in a manner which enhanced the value of the charity. "We could better have spared a better man."—Englishman.

AN ODD EXPERIMENT.—A correspondent of a Calcutta paper makes a curious suggestion to tobacco smokers. Alluding to the alleged discovery by a Parisian chemist that watercress is a perfect antidote to nicotine, he says:—"It lately entered into my head to try how some of it dried would smoke. To my great satisfaction I found that, when put into my pipe, after a couple of days' drying in the sun, it had all the flavour of the best cavendish without the treacle, and it was even stronger than cavendish! Here, then, is a perfect substitute for tobacco without the deleterious and deadly poison so freely contained in the latter, and it is at the same time cheaper. Watercress, with its fine stalks and leaves, when dried, requires no cutting to fit it for the pipe; and whilst a pound of cut tobacco ranges from Rs. 2 to Rs. 4, here we have an article a rupee's worth of which, when dried, would weigh more than a couple of pounds."

NO REST FOR THE UNEMPLOYED.—The first annual relief of general-duty field officers takes place immediately. Umballa loses two colonels and two lieutenant-colonels, and gets instead one major—fresh from leave to England. Colonel Haythorne goes to dry and salubrious Meean Meer, Colonel Gott to cool and classic Agra, Lieutenant-colonel Duffin to delectable Mooltan, and Lieutenant-colonel Wedderburn to that sheltered spot, Morar. There is no rest but the grave for—those who want a bonus! One officer (not an Umballa man) wrote to army head-quarters in a familiar friendly kind of way to know why he could not be allowed to remain where he was, where he had bought a house, set up a model farm, and altogether made himself comfortable? The answer came:—"It is out of the question. In view of your one day being required to take command of a division of the army against an internal or domestic enemy, it is essential that you should make yourself acquainted with the general strategy of the country, which you cannot do if you always remain at one station!" The recipient of this flattering communication on reading it said "he owed them one," and forthwith packed up.—Mofussilite, Oct. 28.

MILITARY.—There is at present, says the Madras Mail, an enormous amount of sickness at Meean Meer. The 85th Light Infantry and Artillery hospitals are crowded with fever patients, and the native troops are even worse. The 9th Bengal Cavalry has between 80 and 100, the 21st Punjab Native Infantry about 150, and the 25th Native Infantry some 160 in hospital, and as yet there appears to be no decrease in the epidemic.—Captain Williams, says the Delhi Gazette, Nov. 6, of the Staff Corps, and interpreter to the 92nd, put an end to his existence at Jullunder, owing, they say, to pecuniary embarrassments producing mental derangement; he cut his throat with a razor, and was found on his bed weltering in his blood. Medical aid was at hand, but it was of no avail.—From the Delhi Gazette we learn that the gallant 41st at Subathoo have suffered another sad and severe loss in the person of Dr. Yates. He died early on the morning of the 1st inst. from inflammation of the bowels; he had been ailing for some time, but nothing serious was apprehended until a short time before his death. This is the third officer the 41st has lost in two months, and, strange to say, in every instance, the seniors of their respective ranks in the regiment.—The C. Battery, 16th Brigade, Royal Artillery (says the Englishman), under the command of Major A. D. Dennis, which in course of the relief will proceed from Barrackpore to Morar, will be at Morar on the 2nd February.—Lieutenant Beatty, of the 25th

P.N.I., died of cholera at Peshawur, on the 2nd November. Mr. Beatty had been suffering from fever for some weeks, but was seized with cholera only a few hours before his death. There have also been several other cases of cholera in that death-stricken station.—H.M.'s 36th Regiment have left Peshawur for Rawul Pindee, proceeding down the banks of the Cabul river. We hear that they had one case of cholera in their camp on their journey.—The 4th Native Cavalry marched into Seetapore on the morning of the 30th October from Bareilly en route to Segowlie.—According to Indian Public Opinion nearly half the European detachment in the fort of Kangra is in hospital laid up with fever.—Fever at Meean Meer, says the Pioneer, does not seem to be abating. The troops, especially the Native Regiments, are suffering severely.

ACCIDENT TO MAJOR N. CAMPBELL.—We regret to hear that Major Napier Campbell was on Wednesday thrown from his dog-cart and had his leg fractured.—Madras Times, Nov. 5.

MYSORE.—We hear that Captain Cole, the Superintendent of Coorg, will shortly be appointed Deputy-Superintendent of the Bangalore District. Captain Thompson will probably be appointed to Coorg.—Bangalore Herald, Nov. 6.

MILITARY.—On the 27th October a detachment of her Majesty's 18th Hussars, consisting of one captain, one subaltern, one assistant-surgeon, one hundred and forty-five non commissioned officers and men, with one hundred and twenty horses, left Secundrabad for Trimulgherry.—Bangalore Herald.

PENSION FRAUDS.—Through inquiries instituted by the police Government have been informed of the existence of a number of petition writers, by whose means pensionary stipends have been fraudulently obtained. The investigations ordered by Government have resulted in the cancellation of the pensions paid to four stipendiaries.—Madras Times, Nov. 6.

MILITARY FUNDS.—We understand that the Supreme Government have informed the Madras Government that they consider it expedient that the duties of the Secretariat of the Military Funds in all the Presidencies should be vested in the Medical Examiners, and have suggested the adoption of this arrangement at Madras on the occurrence of a vacancy.—Madras Mail.

RETRENCHMENT.—The Madras Athenæum says:—"The very comfortable berth of Paymaster of Carnatic Stipends is, it is said, to be abolished, and its not very difficult duties are to be performed by the Collector of Madras. It is wonderful, when necessity forces us to economise, how easy it is to give up those little luxuries which, in happier times, we considered indispensable to our existence!"

A USEFUL BOOK.—The Madras Athenæum mentions an admirable little brochure, entitled "A Catechism on Act V. of 1869, the Indian Articles of War." It is written by Colonel A. C. McMaster, Deputy Judge Advocate-general of the Nagpore Force, and most of the questions now published have been put to the author, who modestly suggests that his work "may be of some use to the junior officers of the Madras Army."

TRAMWAY EXTENSION.—We understand that the Secretary of State for India has sanctioned the extension of the Tramway Company (Limited), at present running between Arcunum and Conjeveram, in the direction of Pondicherry. If this sanction be acted upon, we think it very probable that another Traction Engine Company will slide off into oblivion. We are further informed that the guarantee of three per cent. is to be raised to five.—Bangalore Herald.

A DISAPPOINTMENT.—In December, 1868, the Madras Government sanctioned as an experiment the establishment of a sanitarium at Nyoumjo, or Mount Joy, on the Arracan Hills, for the benefit of the British troops stationed at Thyetmyo. Scarcely eleven months have passed when the local authorities now direct the abandonment of the scheme of establishing a regular sanitarium at the above station. This is bad news for the troops at Burmah.—Madras Mail, Nov. 5.

A TIGER SHOT.—The Trichinopoly Chronicle states that Mr. Hogg, the Police Inspector of Perambalur Taluq, has shot a splendid specimen of the royal tiger, in the village of Carambur. The animal is said to have committed great havoc among the cattle, and was a terror to the villagers in consequence. It measured a little more than four feet in height, and about twelve feet from the tip of the nose to the tail.

THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.—The Madras Mail mentions that his Excellency the Governor of Madras has consented to deliver a lecture at an early date in the Evangelistic Hall, on "The Fine Arts in India." "Like the other lectures in connection with the Native Christian Literary Society, his Lordship's will be chiefly intended for educated natives, but we have little doubt that many other people will endeavour to avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing such a subject treated as it is sure to be by Lord Napier."

A SHREWD PROPOSAL.—A writer at Madras strongly advocates the amalgamation of the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, as one measure calculated to reduce expenditure and balance the Finance Minister's account without further taxation. "In years gone by," he remarks, "when the Presidency towns were practically more distant from each other than they were from London, the independent existence of each may have been necessary; but railways and electric telegraphs have changed all this. It may not be desirable that the sepy from the South of India should serve in the Punjab, but the Bengal army should be the army of the North, the united Madras and Bombay armies that of the South—one Commander-in-Chief, one staff (at Bombay of course); think of the saving, one Governor, one Council, what an increase of efficiency, what a lightening of the public funds!"

REDUCTION OF REGIMENTS.—A "well-informed" military correspondent writes to the Madras Mail:—"I see in one of your late issues that there is a report that ten more infantry regiments of the Madras army are to be broken up. I fear this is likely to prove only too true. The time has surely come for warning the Government of the danger of their suicidal retrenchments. The infantry regiments of Madras are only now beginning to recover from the stagnation in promotion that was caused by the breaking up of native regiments some years ago, and now they are threatened to be once more swamped with supernumeraries. That the sepoys are discontented is too well known to admit of a doubt. They felt in 1862 that they could not trust a Government who rewarded their stanchness and loyalty during the trying times of the Mutiny by breaking up some of those very regiments who had gallantly fought against the mutineers in Bengal. Since that time the new organisation has been introduced; the result has been a great diminution of confidence between officers and men; European officers are so constantly changed that they have not time to know their men, and the men feel but little confidence in the officers. How long is this to last? Are the powers that be morally blind, that they cannot see what all this is leading to? And now, because there has been some blunder in the Budget, the unfortunate is to suffer again."

A PEDESTRIAN MATCH.—An exciting pedestrian match came off on Thursday last, Oct. 28, between Captain Rew, 2-19th, and Captain Buckle, R.A., in the shape of a walking-match of fifteen miles. The start took place about 3.50 A.M., and the distance was walked on the old Madras road, the competitors having to go twice to a point about the fourth milestone, returning each time and finishing at the R.A. Mess. Captain Rew made play during the first two miles, and obtained a slight advantage, which he was just able to maintain to the end, he having completed the whole distance in 2 hours 51 minutes, whilst Captain Buckle exceeded it by 51 seconds only, an amount of time equivalent to about 120 yards. Capt. Rew appeared exceedingly distressed at the finish, and as his last mile's time was twelve minutes, whilst his opponent was walking at the rate of a mile in eleven, it is probable that their positions would have been reversed in another mile. Both gentlemen deserve the highest credit for their wonderful endurance, as shown by the closeness of the race, whose time is probably unprecedented in the country. We understand that Mr. Daniell, R.A., was most useful in keeping the road clear of bandies, &c., and that his cheering tones materially sustained the flagging energies of his novice.—Bangalore Herald.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, Oct. 27.—There is no truth in the statement that Captain M. Barton, of the 85th (Bucks Volunteers), has been permanently attached to the Kurrachee Depot. He has been detained here simply on account of so much sickness being prevalent at Kotree and other places on the banks of the Indus. He will proceed to join his corps at Meean Meer in the course of next month. Lieut. William Inglis Le Breton, of the Bombay Staff Corps, and Lieut. W. W. Hopton Scott, late Aide de Camp and Persian Interpreter to Lord Napier of Magdala, who arrived at Kurrachee from Bombay on the 21st instant, will leave for Mooltan next week, the former to join his appointment as Assistant Controller of Public Work Accounts in the Punjab, and the latter to join the 3rd Punjab Cavalry at Rajanpore. Colonel Mainwaring, Commandant 30th N. I., or Jacob's Rifles, who was here on privilege leave, returned to Jacobabad last Friday. Colonel Phayre, C.B., Political Superintendent in Upper Sind, will, it is reported, be in Kurrachee next month, and proceed hence to Bombay to prosecute his late chief clerk, John Barron, the preliminary investigation into whose case has not terminated as yet, owing to the number of witnesses summoned. Barron, I understand, has employed a pleader of Lahore—Mr. Gouldsbury, who arrived at Jacobabad on the 20th instant—to conduct his case. The "annual exodus" will soon take place. Our Commissioner is busily engaged in getting through all arrears, and has warned his subordinates to pack up their goods, gods, and chattels, and be ready for the approaching "march." On the 3rd proximo the blinds of the gubernatorial palace will be drawn down, and the dusty musty records connected with the Sind administration will be permitted to rest in peace for the next few months. The "heads" of most of the civil departments will follow their chief, about the middle of November, when clerkdom will have to bid a temporary farewell to Kurrachee and its pleasures. It is a pity that Sir William Merewether is unable to devise some measure for the improvement of the working of the Indo-European Telegraph Department at Kurrachee before he departs into the districts. Its re-organisation, it is said, has been on the tapis for some time past, but nothing practical towards this end has been effected as yet, and if the whispers abroad might be credited, the department has retrograded, as regards its efficiency, to a serious extent ever since the departure to England of its director, Mr. Isaac Walton. That the public are fast losing all confidence in it may be judged by the fact that its traffic receipts have actually fallen off by nearly half a lac of rupees, and unless the officer who now presides over it does something, matters will soon come to a state which it will perhaps require a Hercules to mend. There is not the slightest foundation for the reports set afloat by local alarmists that cholera is still prevailing in a virulent form at Kotree. The disease, I have the best authority for stating, has almost died out, and those who fled from the place during the panic are now gradually returning to their homes and resuming their several occupations. There is, perhaps, no public officer at Kotree who has laboured harder in restoring confidence and allaying alarm among the population than Mr. Vesey Fitzgerald, the son of his Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, and many a humble native has invoked blessings on the head of the father for the kindness and attention shown him while at death's door by the son. When the scourge was at its height, and was numbering its victims by dozens daily, Mr. Fitzgerald used to be in the midst of the people, personally ministering to the sick, reassuring the timorous, and dispensing medicines among those who needed them; and his kind manner and the real interest he manifested in their welfare so won the affections of the poorer classes, that latterly even those who evinced the strongest repugnance to the attendance of an English doctor, looked forward to Mr. Fitzgerald's visits with pleasure, and gladly received from his hands medicines which nothing could induce them to take before. The exertions of this gentleman have been made the subject of a special report to the collector and magistrate of the district, who will, no doubt, hand it on for the information of Sir William Merewether.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

CAPTAIN GILLESPIE.—From the Sind News we learn that Captain Gillespie has been appointed collector and magistrate of Shikarpore, vice Colonel Dunsterville, transferred to Kurrachee.

GUJARAT.—We are glad to learn that notwithstanding the ravages made by the locusts in Gujarat, the corn crop this year will be more than what it was last year. The cotton crop has suffered nothing.—Mitro-daga, Nov. 7.

THE RE-MARRIAGE QUESTION.—We are glad to see that the people of Gujarat and other parts have followed the example of his Highness the Gackwar, in discussing the re-marriage question. It is said that a few days ago a meeting of Shastrees was held at Poona to consider the matter.

LEGAL.—We learn that, consequent upon the Hon. J. S. White, Advocate-general, having obtained a year's furlough on sick leave, Mr. A. R. Scoble has been appointed to act for him. Mr. Green, barrister-at-law, will act for Mr. Scoble as Legal Remembrancer.

JAILS.—The Indian Daily News believes that committees have been appointed to revise the jail establishments in the Presidencies of Bombay and Madras, with a view to reduce expenditure, and that a similar step will be taken in the Bengal Presidency.

NEGRO POLICEMEN.—We hear it stated that it is the intention of the Commissioner of Police to employ in the Bombay Police Force fit persons from among the manumitted slaves brought to Bombay. Two have been already so employed, one of whom is kept on duty at the Commissioner's own office, and having been joined in the bonds of holy matrimony to a negro woman of his choice, is for the present domiciled at the Mazagon Police office.

COTTON EXPORTS FROM SIND.—We append a statement of cotton shipped from the ports in Sind, in the Bombay Presidency, to foreign external ports during the month of October, 1869:—

Quantity.	Value.	By what Ships.	To what Ports.
546,728 lbs. ...	Ra. 1,74,025 ...	Ship Parana ...	Liverpool
178,724 ...	63,825 ...	Ship Sultana ...	London

725,452 lbs., ... Ra. 2,37,850

N.B.—80 lbs. equal to 1 maund; 8 maunds equal to 1 candy.

CIVIL.—It is expected that Mr. Montresor, Commissioner of Burdwan, will take the place of Mr. C. Rivett-Carnac as opium agent, when the latter officer goes home on furlough. The great administrative abilities of the Hon. A. F. Bellasis, we believe, will secure for him the appointment of Revenue Commissioner Southern Division. The return of Mr. Rogers, by last mail, may cause a considerable movement in the Civil Service. It is probable that Mr. Havelock will return to Tanna, and that Mr. J. W. Robertson will not revert to Surat, but take up Colaba. Mr. R. H. Pinhey has been appointed to act as Judicial Commissioner in Sind and Judge of the Sudder Court in that province. He will, we presume, be confirmed in the appointment when Mr. Justice Melville is confirmed in his present office.

THE COTTON CROPS.—Mr. Melville, general manager of the Mofussil Press and Ginning Company, has sent in the following report, dated Bombay, Nov. 12:—"Central Provinces and the Berars.—The weather throughout these districts during the past week has been all that could have been wished. Picking has been very general since the Dewallee holidays, and small quantities of Hingunghaut may be expected to arrive about the end of the month. The samples of new Hingunghaut that have hitherto arrived are somewhat stained and are deficient in staple. The samples from Oomrawuttee and Khamgaum are fully equal to previous years. Broach.—The weather has become much colder during the week, which, with the winds from E. and N.E. now prevailing, is said to be favourable to the development of the cotton plants. The more advanced fields have begun to flower, and a large portion of the crop is now just twice the height it was at maturity last year. We look for a season remarkable alike for yield and quality. Surat and Randere.—Making allowance for damage caused by excessive rain, our agent is of opinion that we may assure ourselves of an excellent crop in these districts. It has, however, been retarded, and will not mature quite so early as in other parts. Ahmedabad.—The crop is in a very satisfactory condition."

"HE THAT HATH EARS TO HEAR."—A roving correspondent, writing to the Englishman, speaks of his journey from Bombay to Calcutta as follows:—"The south-west monsoon made it desirable to get out of Bombay to escape the steamy sweltering heat and seek the air of the ghâts. I chose a second-class carriage as the most airy and the cheaper. I found everything very comfortable, and room in our compartment for double our number. Half of us were white men, and the remainder well-dressed Hindoos and Parsees; and these natives soon got out. My ten days in Bombay were marked by more than one refutation of the charge that Hindoo politeness goes out in words. A Hindoo member of the Royal Asiatic Society, one of several native gentlemen who had done me generous service, took me in his carriage to the station, and stayed to see me off. Steaming northwards out of the city one reads a lesson of somebody's unfaithfulness—certainly not that of natives—in a bright red line of locomotives ordered out some years ago and never set up. There they glisten in a row, half a mile long, on a side track, to the number of not less than fifty, a nearly useless waste of money. I asked an officer of the line if they were likely to come into use. He replied that during the last three years several of them had been partly used piecemeal, to mend old locomotives, but it was quite possible that new styles would come in before they would be required. What was the cost of this job? 'Not less than ten lacs of rupees. The Government guarantee stimulates us to spend all we can on the road.' It set me to musing on the hackneyed words, 'What cheats these natives are!' and again on these even more familiar, viz., 'Whosoever does the will of my Father, he is my brother.'"

MILITARY.—Fever is very prevalent among the men of the 21st Fusiliers—upwards of a hundred of them being laid up with it. Under the present sanitation rules the hospital can hold little more than two-thirds of this number, which has necessitated the pitching of tents to accommodate the remainder. The fever however does not appear to be of a dangerous type.—Sindian, Nov. 3.

ENFIELD RIFLES.—Under instructions received, through the Government of India, from her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, all serviceable Enfield rifles of regiments about to return to England are to be retained in India, a certain proportion only of worn arms being sent home with each regiment.—Bombay Government Gazette.

MILITARY.—The G Battery 14th Brigade Royal Artillery, which arrived here from Admednuggur on Tuesday morning, consisted of three officers and 128 men, and are located at Ghorepore. The B Battery 14th Brigade Royal Artillery, arrived from Secunderabad yesterday, consisted of four officers and 118 men. These batteries will leave Poona for Bombay on the 15th inst., for embarkation to England on the following day in her Majesty's troop-ship Euphrates.—Poona Observer, Nov. 11.—It appears to be quite fixed that H.M.'s 8th Regiment should leave Poona on the 16th inst. for Nusseerabad; we regret this decision, and cannot understand on what grounds it has been made. The prospects as far as regards the famine are a shade brighter than they were last year; still, there must be great risk incurred in marching this fine, fresh, healthy body of men through Rajpootana, where the people are so reduced in strength and numbers by famine and disease. Surely it would be better to leave Nusseerabad deserted for a season than run any risk of H.M.'s 8th Regiment suffering as the 1st Royals have done.—Deccan Herald, Nov. 8.—It is rumoured at Mhow that Colonel T. P. Grant, C.B., late of the 18th Royal Irish, and who commanded the Hyderabad (Deccan) Brigade for some time, comes out with the rank of Major-General, to take up the divisional command in succession to the late General Adams. Brigadier-General Smythe, at present commanding, returns to England with his brigade, the 14th R.A., and Colonel Raines, of the 95th Regiment, as senior officer, will command the division, until General Grant's arrival.—We understand the brigade commands at Nuggur and Deesa are to be at once done away with.—Poona Observer, Nov. 6.—We regret to announce the death of Brigadier-General McKillop Taylor, which occurred at Deesa on the 2nd Nov.—We have been informed, says the Poona Observer, on good authority, that the number of divisional commands in the Bombay Presidency are to be reduced to two. One of these will be held by a Queen's officer, and the other by an officer of the Indian Army.

SOMETHING LIKE A JOB.—In the latter half of 1867 a correspondence was started between the Science and Art Department, South Kensington and the India-office,—the former asking whether the Indian Government would be disposed to co-operate with it in obtaining photographs, drawings, and casts of Indian art antiquities, and suggesting that a deputation of the Indian Council "should be placed in communication with Mr. Cole" and two others, in order to discuss some practical plan "for the consideration of the Lords of the Committee of the Council of Education and the Indian Board." In due course the plan was matured and sent out to Calcutta for execution, and the "fortunate young officer," as the Pall Mall Gazette calls him, cropped up in a very inoffensive-like little sentence occurring as it were quite innocently, and only suggesting that "if the services of Lieut. Cole, R.E., could be spared from his other duties his assistance might be asked." The uninitiated reader might—and naturally would—suppose that Lieut. Cole had for the duties to be offered him some special qualifications other than being the son of Mr. Cole of the Kensington Museum—that he was either a very talented archaeologist, giving promise of following, with honour to himself and Government, in the steps of Prinsep and Colonel Cunningham, or that at least he was a skilled artist, with special qualifications for making plans and sections of architectural remains, and thoroughly fitted to superintend the taking of casts. Nothing of the kind. Qualified men are not such as English Governments delight to honour. Lieut. Cole has gone home at the public expense to learn—at the same expense—the details of the work he got a commission to execute more than twelve months ago; and he will probably bring out—at public expense too—skilled workmen to execute the work. They could well do without his superintendence, which, however, they will enjoy—all at the public expense. Why not? If we retrench in every other direction, and lay on an extra per centage of income-tax, Lieutenant Cole and his staff may be well paid without our feeling it much. But why take so expensive a mode of executing what could be excellently done for a tithe of the money, and without sending anybody to England to learn a trade, or bringing any artisans out to make success perfectly certain under an expensively taught journeyman? There are in our presidency cities skilled formatori who would readily take a job like making casts of the famous remains at Sanchi, by estimate; and from the examples brought from Ambernath, there can be no doubt that under such men our native workmen can produce casts that would do credit to any skilled workmen from London or Paris, and such as we feel certain Lieut. Cole will not rival. Some such scheme, if properly worked, would be speedy, cheap, and satisfactory; and if Lieut. Cole had possessed any special qualifications, he might have been sent to mark with chalk the pieces to be estimated for. But of course this plan would not satisfy Mr. Cole senior; it would not entitle somebody to such high pay; and it shall be done otherwise to the man whom Government delighteth to honour—even though people do call it a job.—Times of India.

NEW POSTAL ORDER.—On Monday an order was issued by the Postmaster general, in which it is intimated that the privilege now granted to commissioned officers of the army, navy, and Royal marines, as well as superintending or first-class army schoolmasters serving abroad, of sending abroad and receiving their letters at the reduced British postage of sixpence per half-ounce, where the postage of ordinary letters is higher than sixpence, shall be withdrawn after the 1st of January. The privileges of non-commissioned officers, soldiers, and seamen, will remain undisturbed.

FAMINE IN RAJPOOTANA.—A circular has been issued by the Rev Hamilton M. McGill, foreign missionary, Secretary of the United Presbyterian Church, in which he solicits subscriptions in aid of a fund for the people of Rajpootana. Five hundred orphans, he states, have been thrown on the hands of the missionaries, and the famine continues to desolate the country. The ravages of the locusts had been unprecedented, and the destruction of the crops in the fields had been terrible. He is satisfied that within three months one-sixth of the whole population of the district in which he laboured had been cut off. Contributions will be received by Mr. James Peddie, W.S., 5, Queen-street, Edinburgh.

OFFICE TENTAGE.—The Government of India having directed the continuance of the office tentage hitherto drawn by deputy inspectors general of hospitals when on tours of inspection, Art. 413 page 62 of 2nd Appendix to Jameson's Code is hereby cancelled.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—Lieut. R. L. Price, of the revenue survey, has passed the prescribed examination in Marathi. Oct. Mr. F. Fedden, of the geological survey of India, has passed the prescribed examination in Hindustani, according to the lower standard. Oct.

BARRACK-MASTERS.—In supersession of an older arrangement, it is notified that barrack-masters, when proceeding on transfer from one station to another, must claim their actual travelling expenses under the ordinary rules of the service regarding travelling, a free pass being granted them for the portion of the journey to be performed by rail, if entitled thereto. The usual allowances will still be drawn when barrack-masters travel on inspection duty within their respective circles.

MILITARY OFFICERS EMPLOYED IN THE POLICE.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to notify that in future all military officers employed in the police departments will vacate their appointments on attaining the substantive rank of lieutenant-colonel. An officer will be eligible for re-appointment at the discretion of the Government, but such re-appointment will hold good only for a term of three years, on the expiry of which the further employment in the police department of any officer will again require the orders of Government.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—It is ordered from head quarters, Poona, Oct. 23, that the head quarters of the 1st battalion 2nd foot, including the band and staff, shall proceed at once to Bombay, and remain there until further orders. With reference to G.O. of July 22 last, it is notified that the reliefs of the three regiments of native cavalry, and of the B and D batteries E brigade R.H.A., have been countermanded for the present season.

THE THOMASON COLLEGE.—The undermentioned passed military students of the Thomason College are appointed to the public works department as overseers of the first grade, and posted to the provinces specified (dated October 18):—Quartermaster sergeant F. Robinson, 1st Madras N.I., to Punjab. Private P. Fryer, H.M.'s 38th foot, to N.W. Provinces. Mr. A. Murray, overseer, 2nd grade, British Burmah, is dismissed from the public works department. Mr. E. Le Maistre, overseer, 1st grade, is transferred from British Burmah to the N.W. Provinces. The undermentioned probationary overseers in Oude are permanently appointed to the public works department from the date specified opposite their names:—Sergeant W. Moylan, overseer, 1st grade, September, 1868. Sergeant D. Gunning, overseer, 1st grade, December, 1868. Mr. J. D. Douglas, overseer, 2nd grade, June, 1868.

CANTONMENTS.—Serious complications arise, and much expense is frequently incurred, owing to the irregular action of local military authorities in permitting "squatting" in cantonments, outside the limits of compounds and bazaars, and in granting land and privileges beyond their competency to accord. The Commander-in-Chief, in calling the attention of commanding officers to the regulations of the Government of India on the subject, is pleased to direct that on no account whatever is the erection of huts in unauthorised localities to be permitted. H.E. further desires it may be made known that all claims for compensation will have to be met by commanding officers who have admitted, in violation of regulation, huts, &c., to be erected without due authority; neither will any concessions or grants of land made by commanding officers without sufficient authority be recognised in dealing with cases that may come before the Commander-in-Chief for decision.

APPOINTMENTS.—BRITISH OFFICERS.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Poona, Nov. 10.—The following general order, by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, is published:—
No. 299.

Head Qrs., Simla, Oct. 23.

The attention of British officers holding staff appointments in this Presidency is invited to the orders indicated below.*

2. Officers who are allowed, under the existing regulations, to continue in their appointments on the departure of their regiments to England, in order to complete their five years' tour of service on the staff, should observe the instructions contained in para. 4 of the Right Hon. the Secretary of State's despatch of Dec. 30, 1865, No. 390.†

3. Those who have to vacate their staff situations under similar circumstances must rejoin their regimental head quarters in sufficient time to embark with their corps for England.

Staff officers vacating their appointments, in consequence of their regiment being transferred to another Presidency, will rejoin it on being relieved by the officers appointed in their place.

In both instances their staff appointments will be considered to be vacant from the date their regiment leaves its station, en route to England or to another Presidency, as the case may be.

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS, POONA HORSE.—The Government general order No. 924, of Oct. 9, is cancelled, owing to the relief of the 3rd Regiment Bombay Light Cavalry having been countermanded.

Official Papers.

PUBLIC WORKS BUDGET GRANT FOR 1870-71.

The following resolution of the Government of India, dated Simla, October 21, 1869, is published:—

The Governor-general in Council observes that in Public Works Department Circular No. 82 of 1869 the ordinary grant for public works for 1870-71, excluding State expenditure on guaranteed railways and ordinary outlay on State railways, was fixed at 435 lakhs of rupees, distributed as follows:—

Military	125	Lakhs.
Agricultural	60	Lakhs.
Other Services—		Lakhs.
Civil buildings	60
Communications	100
Miscellaneous public improvements and tools and plant	10
Establishment	80

This total amount, however, must be held to include fifteen lakhs of rupees on account of payments likely to be made in England for stores for the Public Works Department, which, under orders that are likely to be issued shortly, will have to be incorporated in the Indian accounts as heretofore. From this total grant, according to a resolution of the Government of India, No. 1 A—G, dated October 7, 1869, provision will have to be made for the charges on account of military and civil buildings at Bombay, together with their due proportion of charges for establishment, which have heretofore been provided for by loan under the head "Bombay Special Fund."

The grant for extraordinary irrigation works for 1870-71, with its proportion of charges for establishment and tools and plant, is fixed at 180 lakhs. In addition to this will be the charge for the construction of State railways and such other* objects as have been specially sanctioned by the Government of India as "extraordinary," the allotments for which will be determined, as usual, on actual demands.

The total grant to be distributed in these orders amount to 615 lakhs of rupees, as follows:—

Ordinary	435 lakhs.
Extraordinary	180 "

Total... 615 "

The Governor-General in Council now proceeds to notify the distribution of the aggregate allotment among the several Governments and administrations.

MILITARY.

The original grant for this head of service for the current year, including charges debitable to the Bombay Special Fund, was 240 lakhs of rupees. In passing orders on the Budget estimates, the total grant was reduced to 196 lakhs of rupees, and in the orders contained in Public Works Department Circular No. 82 of 1869 the total grant was still further reduced to 166 lakhs of rupees. For next year the grant, including the military works hitherto chargeable to the Bombay Special Fund, and value of stores to be supplied from England, has been fixed at 125 lakhs of rupees, which sum is distributed as follows, as compared with the grant for the current year:—

	Original grant, 1869-70.	Reduced grant, 1869-70.	Final reduced grant, 1869-70.	Grant, 1870-71.
	Lakhs.	Lakhs.	Lakhs.	Lakhs.

Port Blair	7-10	7-10	7-10	½

AGRICULTURAL WORKS.

The demands of the several Governments and Administrations under this head for 1870-71 aggregate Rs. 295½ lakhs; but the Governor general in Council considers that this is very much more than can be profitably spent during the year, and the demand is reduced to Rs. 240 lakhs, being fifteen lakhs more than was allowed for the current year, a large part of which it is now certain will not be required. The distribution of this grant, as compared with that for 1869-70, is as follows:—

	Extraordinary.	Ordinary.	Total.
	Grant 1869-70.	Grant 1870-71.	Grant 1870-71.

* Works for the improvement of the Port of Calcutta, Madras, East Coast Canal.

† Agricultural extraordinary, including share of establishment and tools and plant ... 233 lakhs.

Agricultural ordinary, excluding ditto ... 62½ "

In order to prevent misconception, it may be explained that the grant for extraordinary irrigation works, which includes the value of stores expected to be received from England, is intended to provide for all works debitable to loan under the provisions of Public Works Department Circular No. 94 of 1867, including a proper share of the cost of establishment and tools and plant employed on such works. Also, it may be added that to this grant the Government of India will be prepared to make additions during the year, should the progress of approved works justify such a course, and financial considerations admit of it.

The grant under "ordinary" provides for all agricultural works debitable to revenue, including embankments in Bengal and British Burmah, and State outlay on guaranteed irrigation works in Madras; as also for the maintenance of agricultural works generally.

Special care will be needed, in the preparation of the Budget Estimate for 1870-71, to provide a fair proportion of the charges for establishment, and tools and plant from the grant for extraordinary irrigation works, the grant for establishments under "other services" having been so considerably reduced.

OTHER SERVICES.
The grant under this head for next year, including charges for civil buildings and establishment, heretofore debited to the Bombay Special Fund, and fifteen lakhs on account of stores from England, has been fixed at two hundred and fifty lakhs, and is distributed as follows, as compared with the reduced grant for the current year:—

The assumption that so large a reduction can be made in the grant for establishment is necessarily an arbitrary one, and if it cannot be effected to the full extent, the further amount that may be required to bring the aggregate estimate down to the total sum now passed will have to be obtained by transfer from the ordinary grants for other heads of service, excepting military and agricultural. The several Governments and Administrations will, however, no doubt undertake at once the needful steps for a revision of their public works establishments to bring them into proper proportion with the grants now available.

It is to be understood that the several Governments and Administrations are expected to make suitable provision from the grant for civil buildings for works connected with the postal and telegraph departments. Proper schedules of the wants of these departments during 1870-71 will be circulated in due course, but the preparation of the Budget estimate should not be delayed for these.

SUMMARY.

The Table attached to this resolution shows the total grant assigned to each province. The Budget estimates should now be framed accordingly, the following conditions being observed as usual :—

I. That the grant assigned to each province for military works must be considered to be fixed so far that it is not available for increasing the other grants, although, if the share assigned to any province be not required in full, it may be reduced, a corresponding reduction being made in the total of the budget estimate of that province.

II.—That in like manner the grant assigned for agricultural works classed under the heading "extraordinary," as defined in paragraph 8 of this resolution, is not to be diverted from that purpose.

III.—That the grant assigned for "ordinary agricultural works," as defined in paragraph 9 of this resolution, is only available for the specific object for which it has been given, and for "extraordinary agricultural works."

IV.—That the sum assigned for "other services" will be allotted by each Government and Administration, according to the requirements under each head, to civil buildings, communications, miscellaneous public improvements, repairs to works (not military and agricultural), tools and plant, and establishment, excepting that portion chargeable to extraordinary agricultural works.

V.—That the amount assigned for each of the main divisions of the allotment includes value of stores from England, so that the Budget estimate for 1870-71, unlike that of 1869-70, should be prepared in the manner prescribed in chapter XVI., paragraphs 14 and 27, of the Public Works Code.

VI.—That the grant for State expenditure on guaranteed railways and on State railways will be in addition to the allotments now assigned, the estimate for each Government and Administration being framed as usual on the actual requirements of the year. Attention should be specially given to the various recent orders requiring that this part of the estimate may be considered carefully, and made as precise and definite as possible.

In conclusion, the Governor General in Council requests that all Governments and Administrations will submit their public works budget estimates in proper form and with complete punctuality, particular care being given to the recent orders on this point in Public Works Department Circular No. 90 of 1869. Attention should also be paid to the preparation of the estimate of public works revenue, which hardly received sufficient attention in all cases in the Budget estimates for the current year.

INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—A striking comment on the present working of the Indo-European Telegraph is afforded by the telegrams we received from Reuter's agent last Monday. One is dated the 13th, one the 14th, and another the 16th October; the mail, which also arrived the same day, brought letters and papers of the 15th. Other instances quite as bad might be mentioned.—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 13.

THE RETRENCHMENTS.—The reductions recommended, or already ordered by the Government of India, amount to nearly a million and a-half a-year, and if all the military retrenchments are carried out the diminution of expenditure may be expected to amount to two millions next year. Thus :—

Civil expenditure less	£300,000
Native Army	350,000
British Cavalry and Infantry	750,000

There still remain the Royal Artillery, the Indian Commissariat, and the Studs. If the expenditure on ordinary public works be kept down to  $3\frac{1}{2}$  millions, as Lord Mayo has expressed his determination to do, there will be a reduction of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  million on the average expenditure of the last few years under this head. Regarding the home charges, unfortunately, nothing can be said in this country. Leaving them out, the improvement likely to be effected by diminished expenditure and increased taxation, taking the revised estimates of the current year as a standard, will be as follows, if Lord Mayo's expectations are realised :—

Civil expenditure	£300,000
Military expenditure of all kinds in India	1,250,000
Public Works, ordinary	1,250,000
Income-tax, extra	340,000
Salt duties „ (say)	160,000

£3,300,000
Estimated deficit in 1869-70 ... 1,750,000

£1,550,000

These reductions will not tell at once, and that, we believe, is the reason for increasing the rate of income-tax in the middle of the year. But making liberal allowance for this, and taking the revised estimates of the current year as the standard for the next, we ought to have a working margin, or surplus, of a million.—Friend of India.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

The directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company have issued their report in anticipation of the annual meeting convened for Dec. 10. Some of the principal passages are subjoined :—

THE SUEZ CANAL.—The company was represented by three members of the board at the recent ceremonials in Egypt in connection with this great work, and one of its steamers, the Delta, proceeded up the Canal as far as Ismailia. The directors are careful to keep themselves supplied with the best information on all points relating to the Canal; and the proprietors may feel assured that whenever it may be for the advantage of the company to make use of it the opportunity will not be neglected.

THE PROPRIETORS' UNDERWRITING ACCOUNT.—The unfortunate loss of the Carnatic has created a charge on this account of £90,300, and the company's contribution to the general average consequent on the grounding of the Surat in 1867 has turned out to be larger than was estimated when the accounts for 1868 were made up, and the sum of £9,411. 12s. 1d. has to be debited to this year's account. These charges, with a smaller contribution to a general average on the Candia, absorb £101,392. 17s. 10d. of the annual premium on the estimated value of a floating property of the company, namely, £120,000, and the balance, £18,607. 2s. 2d., has been carried to the general reserve fund.

CAPITAL, REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE, DIVIDEND.—The share capital of the company stands at the same amount as at the date of the last annual report, namely, £2,700,000, leaving £800,000 available, and it may be convenient to the proprietors to know that no call is likely to be made during the next twelve months. The amount borrowed on debentures is £799,000, and those which fall due from time to time are readily renewed at  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. The operations of the year may, on the whole, be considered satisfactory. In the last annual report the proprietors were reminded that in 1867 there was a heavy loss, and that a considerable portion of the profits available for dividend in 1868 was due to the Abyssinian expedition. The balance at the credit of the profit and loss account this year is only enhanced to a trifling extent by the winding-up of the accounts for the transport service, and the available profit arises, therefore, chiefly from ordinary sources of revenue. It is gratifying to the directors to be able to state that the mail contract services, which have been entrusted to the company, continue, notwithstanding their many ramifications, and the great distance traversed, namely, 1,400,000 miles per annum, to be conducted with perfect regularity. The directors have now to recommend a dividend of 3 per cent., free of income-tax, for the six months ending 30th September last, making, with that declared in June, 6 per cent. per annum. The warrants will be issued on the 28th inst.

Miscellaneous.

SIND RAILWAY.—The half-yearly meeting of the Sind Railway (Indus Steam Flotilla, Punjab, and Delhi Railways) Company will be held on the 22nd December.

OUDEH AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—A call of £1. 10s. is to be paid by the 30th December on shares in the Oude and Rohilkund Railway Company, on which £2. 10s. has thus far been paid.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £387,500 in bills on India were received on the 1st inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta £347,300, and to Madras £40,200. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 11d. Tenders on those presidencies at 1s. 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. will receive about 17 per cent., above that price in full. The result shows a slight reduction compared with the previous drawings.

SILK SUPPLY ASSOCIATION.—The Silk Supply Association recently published a "Guide to Sericulture," written by its president, Mr. Dickins. It affords brief but practical information on the cultivation of the mulberry and the rearing of silkworms, and adduces evidence of the likelihood of considerably increased supplies of silk, not only from Japan and China, but from several new silk-producing countries—Australia, the Cape, Natal, Egypt, &c. Mr. Dickins insists, moreover, that even in these islands silk may become a profitable agricultural produce.

ALBERT ASSURANCE COMPANY.—The official liquidators of the Albert Life Assurance Company have issued a circular announcing that the directors of the Mutual Life Assurance Society have consented to grant to holders of policies issued by the Albert, or any of the companies amalgamated with it, new non-profit policies at reduced rates. It is presumed that parties taking policies under this arrangement will only have claims on the Albert for the extra premium, if any, they may have to pay to the Mutual; and the effect would be, if generally adopted by those whose lives are still insurable, that the claims on the Albert would be reduced to such an amount that the assets, including the uncalled share capital that can be realised, should pay a fair dividend upon. The scheme has been approved by the representatives of various policy-holders' committees, and the sanction of the Vice-Chancellor obtained to its being placed before the policy-holders.

CASTE.—A lecture was delivered before a meeting of the East India Association on Friday evening last, at the Westminster Palace Hotel, by R. H. Elliot, Esq., on the "Beneficial Effects of Caste."

EXPORTS OF BULLION.—The exports of bullion from Southampton and Marseilles to the several Indian Presidencies by P. and O. Company's steamers during the past month have been as follows:—To Bombay, per Syria, Nov. 6, gold, £32,100; ditto, per Tanjore, Nov. 13, gold, £30,800; silver, £15,500; ditto, per Poona, Nov. 7 (from Marseilles), gold, £7,400; silver, £4,000; ditto, per Pera, Nov. 14 (from Marseilles), gold, £13,600. To Madras, per Tanjore: gold, £6,738. To Calcutta, per Tanjore, gold, £20,000; ditto, per Poona, silver, £10,780. To Bombay, per Massilia, Nov. 20, gold, £8,216; silver, £5,000; ditto, per Ripon, Nov. 27, gold, £670; ditto, per Delhi (from Marseilles), gold, £4,400; silver, £9,200. To Bombay, per Nyanza, Nov. 28 (from Marseilles): silver, £6,400. To Madras, per Ripon, gold, £3,203. To Calcutta, per Ripon, silver, £5,000; ditto, per Delhi, Nov. 21 (from Marseilles), silver, £908. The exports from Marseilles by the steamers of the Messageries Impériales are subjoined:—To Pondicherry, per Moeria, Oct. 30, gold, £1,425. To Madras, gold, £1,036; silver, £320. To Calcutta, silver, £908.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—The International Commercial Congress which has been sitting at Cairo has adopted a series of resolutions, called forth by the opening of the Suez Canal. These resolutions recommend that all merchandise passing through the Canal should be exempt from transit dues; that the neutrality of the Canal should be recognised by all the Powers; that in time of war private property at sea should be recognised as inviolable, and that blockades should be limited to fortified places; that the commercial law and usages at present prevailing in Egypt should be established upon a new and solid basis, and commerce be allowed free development; that unity of tonnage for all ships should be promptly adopted; that ships exclusively laden with coal should pass through the Canal free from tonnage dues; that modifications should be made in those tonnage dues according to the distance traversed; that a new chart of the Red Sea should be prepared, and fresh lights established; that Egypt should adopt the metrical system of weights and measures, and periodically draw up reports on the productive forces of the country.

ENGINEERS' COMMISSIONS IN INDIA.—The following letter on the subject of Engineers' Commissions in India has been published:—"Punjab Northern (State) Railway Office, 9, Victoria-chambers, Westminster, S.W., Nov. 27, 1869.—Sir,—My attention has been called to a paragraph in your paper of the 18th inst., in which you quote from the Calcutta Englishman newspaper 'that a commission of 5 per cent. has been offered in writing by the manufacturer who is making the ironwork for the Lahore and Thelum Railway,' and the succeeding part of the article fixes upon the engineer at the head of the works as the party to whom the offer had been made. Mr. Lee Smith is the engineer at the head of the works in India, and went there last December, before tenders for a single contract had been invited. Since he left I have had the entire charge of the engineering department in this country (where alone the iron is manufactured), and am, therefore, in a position to know, and can with the greatest confidence assert, that no offer of any such commissions, or any commission, has been made either to Mr. Smith or myself by any manufacturer of ironwork for this railway. With the view of enabling Mr. Smith to take proceedings in India, I have written to all the manufacturers (seven in number) who have done any ironwork for this railway, calling their attention to the statement in the paper, and have received from each of them a letter explicitly denying its truth. I trust, therefore, that in justice to their characters, as well as to Mr. Smith's and my own, you will do me the favour to insert this positive denial of the statement of the Calcutta Englishman in an early number of your paper.—I am, Sir, your most obedient servant, HENRY J. WYLIE."

THE SUEZ CANAL AND THE INDIAN COTTON TRADE.—Messrs. Ellison and Haywood, of Liverpool, in their Circular of Dec. 2, say:—As to shipments of India cotton coming by way of the Suez Canal they have some remarks which will be read with interest. They say:—"Just now American cotton is relatively dearer than Surats, the margin between middling Upland and fair Dhollera being about 3d. per lb. Two months hence we should not be surprised to see this margin reduced to 2d. or less, either by a fall in American or a rise in Dhollera, or a combination of both movements. Early in the new year good Surats will become very scarce. The stock may be replenished via Suez, but it would be a mistake to look for much assistance in this direction, for it is obvious, from the latest advices, that some time must elapse before the Canal can be in fair working order. Our impression is that too much importance has been attached to the probable influence of the new route upon the movements of the Indian cotton crop. Supposing the most sanguine expectations of M. de Lesseps as to the engineering success of his enterprise to be realised, it does not follow that the Canal will be extensively used by shippers of Indian produce. Everything will depend upon the state of the markets. Hitherto the bulk of the Indian crop has arrived here in the autumn, when the supply of American is running down; but if shipped via Suez it would arrive here in the spring and early summer, when the supply of American is large. Is it reasonable to suppose that merchants will hurry their cotton forward by an expensive route to meet the competition of the cream of the American crop? If the supply of American is small, and prices are thereby enhanced, no doubt the Canal will be freely used, supposing it to be in working order; but if the supply of American is large and prices are thereby depressed, the bulk of the Bombay crop will be detained in India until late in the season, or sent via the Cape, so as to arrive here when the stock of American is approaching its minimum. Buyers of Surats to arrive are ruled by the same considerations as guide the shippers; hence the bulk of the forward contracts entered into in the course of the past month have been for cotton to be shipped via the Cape. Much of the cotton sold to arrive is sold before it is shipped; and if merchants find it less easy to sell via Suez than by way of the Cape, they will sell by the latter route, and telegraph shipping instructions accordingly. Prices will fluctuate according to circumstances."

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The twenty-first ordinary general meeting of the above company was held on Nov. 30. Mr. James Thompson presided, and in moving the adoption of the report said that the portion of the year which had passed since their last meeting was that in which, from inability to carry on outdoor work vigorously, very little could be done, as, owing to the wind and rain usually occurring between the middle of June and November, it was not expedient to commence any new work that could not be completed before the working season terminated. The engineer reported that the works between Soonkasala and Cud-dapah would be completed by July, 1871. The delay that had taken place in the works had given them an opportunity of testing the capabilities for carrying 472,000 cubic feet of water per hour. Accordingly, on the 21st of June the head sluices were opened, and the water flowed from the river into the canal; and when the water had reached a depth of six feet above the normal bed level of the canal, a serious accident occurred at the thirty-third mile, where the walls of a stone culvert under the canal gave way, and the water escaped. Of course considerable damage was done to the land, but it was gratifying to know that no lives were lost. They were then obliged to stop all further proceedings, and they had not yet heard whether the damage had been repaired. The partial filling of the canal during the last two years had enabled the engineers to strengthen several points so as to guard against future accidents. The cost for making the canal, including all charges, had been about £6,600 per mile, which he considered small as compared with many of the railways; and the canal would have the advantage of a larger traffic, at one-fourth of the expense, and would also be able to irrigate the land on both sides. The surveys which were undertaken on behalf of the Government were nearly completed. The company had laboured under a disadvantage in being obliged to carry out the works under the supervision of the Government. Had they been free to carry them on with unfettered judgment, they would have made deviations, which would have tended greatly to their interests. He was, however, happy to say that they were now working on most friendly terms with the Government, who were ready to render all the assistance required from them. The Hon. A. Kinnaird, M.P., seconded the adoption of the report, and in doing so stated that he endorsed every word said by the chairman. After some discussion, the report was adopted, and the retiring directors and auditor were re-elected.

MILITARY.—Orders have been received at Chatham garrison for various detachments from depots there to embark for India to join the service companies in India, on the 30th December. They will be conveyed from Portsmouth in the Crocodile, 3, Indian troopship, Captain George W. Watson. These reinforcements are for the 2nd battalion of the 1st Regiment, the 1st battalion of the 3rd, the 1st battalion of the 8th, the 38th, the 45th, and the 109th Regiments. Orders have been issued from the War-office that in future an advance of 45 days' pay per man will be issued to troops proceeding by the overland route to and from India. This advance will be liable to a deduction for ships rations as hitherto. The additional five days' pay will enable the officer in command of any detachment which may be on board to meet any claims which may be made against the non-commissioned officers and men under his charge for the value of all damages done by the troops while on board of the troopships, and during the transit through Egypt, as well as the value of any stores, &c., lost by them on the voyage, immediate payment for which is to be made, as directed in the Queen's regulations, and in General Order 103 of 1869.—A brevet majority is to be conferred upon Captain Augustus Le Messurier, of the Royal (late Bombay) Engineers. This officer did good service in the Abyssinian campaign, and was the discoverer of the path by which the assaulting column forced its way into Magdala.—The committee appointed to consider the supersession of colonels of the British service by those of the late Indian service has prepared its report, which is now in the hands of the printer. The gist of the recommendations will be that the local Indian rank of major-general should be bestowed upon all colonels who may be superseded by the promotion of junior colonels to the rank of major-general.—By the death of Brigadier-General J. M. K. Taylor, Bombay Cavalry, on the 2nd November, Brigadier-General J. Forbes, C.B., Bombay Cavalry, succeeds to colonel's allowances and retires from his command. Thus two brigades become vacant in the Bombay Presidency. It is doubtful whether their future commanders will be appointed until the reductions which are now being discussed have been finally decided.

upon.—In consequence of the changes proposed by the Royal Commission of Military Education, it is probable that the control of the Royal Military College at Sandhurst may be entrusted to an officer of considerably lower rank than at present—in fact, to a field instead of to a general officer, and it is rumoured that Lieutenant-Colonel Chesney, R.E., may be selected for the post.

THE EUSOFZYES.—The Eusofzyes are divided into two great branches—Eusof and Munder; and it is necessary to remember that the Eusofzye division of the province of Peshawur is tenanted by the Munder branch, while the Eusofzyes proper occupy the valleys of Swaut and Bonair. It is needful to describe briefly the character of these valleys. To the north and east of the Eusofzye plain stretches a chain of mountains, beyond which is the Chumla Valley. To the north of this valley is the valley of the Bonair, and westward of that the country of Swaut. Swaut is divided into Upper and Lower Swaut, and consists of a long valley, which, with considerable windings, may be said to run generally in a south-westerly direction, and is watered through its whole extent by the Lundy or Swaut river. This valley is a very lovely place; the lower ranges of hills slope gently down on either side of the river, almost bare of trees, but clothed with verdure as soft and rich as velvet. Behind these rise higher ranges, towering abruptly over the valley, their summits crowned with snow, and their sides supporting huge forests of the wild olive and the pine. Through the whole extent of Upper Swaut numerous little valleys branch out into the hills at right angles from the main one, each watered by its own sparkling rivulet, and abounding in fruit-trees of every description. The valley is densely populated, and there is scarcely a square yard of tillable ground which has not been broken up. The patches of land about the lower ranges of hills, and even the spurs from the higher, have been brought into cultivation, and where the approach is inaccessible for bullocks, the work has been done by hand. The Bonair country resembles Swaut in its general features. It consists of one long valley, with a stream running down its whole length, and numberless smaller valleys, beautiful and well watered, diverging on either hand, and running up into the hills. Thus the country of the Eusofzyes consists of two parts, wholly different from each other in their general features, and is by themselves divided into the Sum (a Pushtoo word signifying plain) and the Kohistan, or hilly district, comprising the valleys of Chumla, Swaut, and Bonair. In the original partition of the country, among the various divisions of the tribe it was inevitable that some should get better lands than others, and in order to rectify this injustice the tribe agreed that from time to time there should be a general interchange of lands. This was effected by the simple plan of drawing straws of different lengths by the heads of the tribal divisions, and lands were regularly distributed at intervals of ten, twenty, and thirty years. But in the narrow valleys of Swaut and Bonair the population began to press hard upon the limits of subsistence, and this interchange of lands became the cause of incessant turmoil and agitation. A division located in some fertile spot, which allowed a rapid increase of its numbers, found itself threatened with wholesale starvation when called upon to remove in a body to some less advantageous habitation. It generally refused to abide by the drawing, declared that there had been some knavery at work, and took up arms in defence of what it chose to call its "rights." To put an end to these quarrels, about sixty years ago a new system of distribution was adopted, and is still practised in the hills beyond British jurisdiction. The people of each village draw lots for their lands and village; afterwards the people of each street or quarter; and, finally, single families. In this last case, if one house is found better than another, the difference is to be made good. If, however, the two parties find any difficulty in coming to terms, each remove the effects from his house, takes away the doors, pulls down the roof, and leaves only four bare walls standing; otherwise a feud would ensue which would compel these two families and their posterity to kill each other for an indefinite period of time.—Westminster Review for October.

THE HISTORY of INDIA, from the Earliest Period to the Close of Lord Dalhousie's Administration in 1856. By JOHN CLARK MARSHMAN.

"Mr. Marshman's has the merit of being a history which it is easy to read and to remember—indeed, it is perhaps the only very readable History of India yet given to the public. Every epoch in Indian annals has been more fully treated of by Mr. Marshman's predecessors in historical inquiry, but the book is original in offering in a moderate compass a comprehensive summary of all the incidents which are most memorable in connection with our control of the Empire. The Third Volume, moreover, is especially valuable, from the fact that the Author's personal recollections carry him back to nearly all the great events which are recorded in it. . . . We may safely commend it to our readers as a work which may be perused with advantage, not less by those who are familiar with Indian history than by those who are ignorant of the subject, and go to Mr. Marshman as their first guide."—The Times.

NOTES on the NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES of INDIA.

By A District Officer. "We have never read a book on India that has interested us more; or which, to our thinking, contains, compressed into so small a space, more valuable information or so many suggestive remarks. . . . This volume should be in the hands of every one going to India. . . . In short, there is not a page in the volume on which we do not feel tempted to dwell."—Athenaeum, Oct. 23, 1869.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

STOMACH, LIVER, AND BOWELS.—In all painful affections and disordered action of the liver and bowels one single trial of these Pills will demonstrate that they possess regulating and renovating powers in a high degree. They speedily restore the appetite, lessen the unpleasant distension of the abdomen, and so prevent inflammation of the bowels, and other serious abdominal ailments. Holloway's Pills afford the greatest comfort to the dyspeptic invalid, without harassing or weakening the most sensitive constitutions, or interfering materially with the ordinary studies, pleasures, or pursuits. The simplicity and efficacy of this treatment has evoked the gratitude of all classes in both hemispheres, and commanded a sale of these purifying Pills unprecedented in medical history.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d., postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

THE PEOPLE OF INDIA:

A SERIES OF
PHOTOGRAPHIC ILLUSTRATIONS OF
THE RACES AND TRIBES OF HINDUSTAN,
ORIGINALLY PREPARED UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF
THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,
AND REPRODUCED AT THE INDIA MUSEUM
BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

EDITED BY

J. FORBES WATSON AND JOHN WILLIAM KAYE.

MEMORANDUM.

In addition to the copies of this work prepared for the use of the Government, the Secretary of State for India in Council has authorized the publication of an edition for sale.

The work will contain about 450 Photographs on mounts, in eight volumes, super-royal 4to., and it will be issued at 22. 5s. per volume. The First and Second Volumes are still on hand.

PREFACE.

During the administration of Lord Canning, from 1856 to 1863, the interest which had been created in Europe by the remarkable development of the Photographic Art communicated itself to India, and originated the desire to turn it to account in the illustration of the topography, architecture, and ethnology of that country.

There were none, perhaps, in whom this interest was awakened more strongly than in Lord and Lady Canning. It was their wish to carry home with them, at the end of their sojourn in India, a collection, obtained by private means, of photographic illustrations, which might recall to their memory the peculiarities of Indian life.

The great convulsion of 1857-58, while it necessarily retarded for a time all scientific and artistic operations, imparted a new interest to the country which had been the scene of, and to the people who had been the actors in these remarkable events. When, therefore, the pacification of India had been accomplished, the officers of the Indian Services, who had made themselves acquainted with the principles and practice of photography, encouraged and patronised by the Governor-General, went forth, and traversed the land in search of interesting subjects.

In this way the design soon exceeded the dimensions of a mere private collection; but Lord Canning felt that its importance was sufficient to warrant official sanction and development, and, therefore, placed the matter in the hands of Mr. Clive Bayley, his Home Secretary. Some of the more important results appear in the present work.

The photographs were produced without any definite plan, according to local and personal circumstances, by different officers; and copies of each plate were sent home to the Secretary of State for India in Council.

After a time, it appeared that a sufficient number of illustrations had been received from various parts of India, fairly to represent the different varieties of the Indian races. The negatives remained in India; but from the plates sent home it was easy to produce fresh negatives, the prints of which might be multiplied to any extent. The Secretary of State in Council sanctioned this operation, and the work was executed by Mr. W. Griggs, at the India Museum, under the superintendence of Dr. Forbes Watson.

In many cases some descriptive account of the tribes represented accompanied the photographs sent from India. These varied greatly in amplitude and value. But, on the whole, it may be said that they were sufficient to constitute the basis of the sketches contributed by Mr. John R. Melville, Colonel Meadows Taylor, Mr. Kaye, Dr. Forbes Watson, and others. These sketches do not profess to be more than mere rough notes, suggestive rather than exhaustive, and they make no claim to scientific research or philosophic investigation. But although the work does not aspire to scientific eminence, it is hoped that, in an ethnological point of view, it will not be without interest and value.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, November 20; Agra and Calcutta, November 16; Madras, November 15.

Lord Mayo reached his cold weather capital on the 10th November. He and his Legislative Council proceeded to business on the 12th. Their first sitting was mainly devoted to a concert of eulogies on their departed colleague, Mr. Maine. The President enlarged on his varied talents and great industry. Mr. Cowie testified to his eloquence and his practical cleverness. Mr. Strachey quoted him as a rare instance of the union of sound practice with lofty theory. Sir Henry Durand bore special witness to the soundness of his advice on all questions that arose between the Government and its native feudatories, while Mr. Taylor had still a word to say of his "unhesitating honesty." A round of compliments like these might generally perhaps be regarded as a matter of form; but few public men of our day have deserved them so well as the late Law Member of the Viceroy's Council, and the regret expressed by Lord Mayo in the name of his colleagues for the departure of one so useful in many ways was evidently sincere. "His experience," said the Viceroy, would have yearly grown more valuable, both in the Executive and Legislative Councils, at a time when the country was emerging from a state of discretionary government, into one regulated by the forms and procedure of Written Law, and of Statutes based on those principles which wise men of every age, class, and creed have thought best for the good government of mankind."

In the course of his seven years' Indian service Mr. Maine had splendid opportunities of displaying a combination of qualities at once great and seldom found together. Lord Mayo's sketch of his career shows how wide and deep was the influence he wielded in all branches of government. The 209 Acts, most of which he helped not only to draw up, but to mould and modify in their rough shape, dealt with a wonderful variety of subjects more or less important, with "questions of general and local taxation, with the administration of justice, both civil and criminal, with the organisation of the police, with the tenure and improvement of land, with our works of irrigation and inland navigation, . . . with the development of our commerce and trade, with the difficult questions of marriage and divorce, with emigration and European vagrancy." With the keenness of a pleader he seemed to Lord Mayo to combine the impartiality of the judge and the eloquence of a speaker at once clear-headed, flowing, and direct. In the Executive Council of the Empire he was "always found a wise councillor, an impartial adviser, and a minister of originality, sagacity, and resource." He was always "ready to labour on any subject or in any matter outside his own department, in which his aid was required." As Vice-Chancellor of Calcutta University, his addresses on education "will long be remembered by the youth of Bengal." Mr. Maine seems also to have won the goodwill of all his colleagues from his geniality, tact, and modesty in the discussion of "difficult and important matters."

In offering his own tribute to "the wise and accomplished statesman who, for the last seven years, has been the most brilliant ornament of the Indian Legislature," Mr. Strachey dwelt on the practical side of his friend's intellect, as completely refuting the belief that a great jurist, well versed in the theory of law, could not also be a shrewd and successful statesman. Quoting Mr. Maine's own rough definition of law as common sense embodied, he declared that such words "accurately described the character of recent Indian legislation." Mr. Strachey too bore witness to the amount of hard work which Mr. Maine had got through as a member of the Executive Council, of work which the public could not fully appreciate, because, unluckily, no member of "that somewhat mysterious body, the Governor-general in Council," has any "definite or separate official responsibility."

At the same sitting of the Council two Bills bearing on the destined increase of the salt-dues in Southern India were introduced. The next meeting, on the 19th November, would be devoted to Sir R. Temple's exposition of Indian finance. People were speculating on the manner in which he would get through the unpleasant task of acknowledging his own mistakes. He may well be trusted however to make light of his own share in the accumulated fruits of former blundering. It will be easy for him to shift the blame to other shoulders, and to make a diversion in his favour by enlarging for instance on the sums yearly wasted in the Public Works Department, and on the new barracks, which almost at the eleventh hour are found to be practically no better than the old. They are far too big for actual needs, and the second storey is virtually thrown away, the men naturally gravitating between meals to the hot upper storey where their cots are. The advantage of the second floor we never could see, except as a means of doubling the cost of the barrack. In Upper India it is certainly needless, so long as the barrack-floor is raised a few feet off the ground. Officers there live in one-storeyed bungalows; why not the men? The barracks built in Lord Dalhousie's time gave ample breathing-room to the soldier, and were not on the whole less healthy than the new ones. It is a mistake to have one style of building for all India.

BOMBAY and Madras have both been kicking somewhat against the retrenchments ordered from Simlah. The former tried hard to save some of its estimates from the knife. The Madras Government have for the moment disobeyed the order to abolish the assistant superintendents of police, an order which might never have been issued if the Bengal magnates had only been aware that the Madras districts are twice the size of those in Bengal. But this comes of the mischievous system which treats the great provinces of British India as if they were so many parishes in one county.

AMONG the many questions to which Lord Mayo has lately been directing his active mind, was the water-supply of Simlah. That picturesque and much-frequented station suffers, like so many other places in the Himalayas, from a chronic scarcity of drinking water. A few small springs and the Jakko Tunnel are all the resources at present available in that respect, and the water in the tunnel seems to be liquid filth. Lord Mayo having a natural distaste for sewage water, has constructed a tank at Peterhoff, to begin with, for his own use. He has also been stirring up the Simlah Municipality to a sense of the duty it has hitherto neglected, by inviting them to consider certain schemes for drawing fresh water from a reservoir some way down the khud. After putting their heads together, the householders accepted his proposal, backed as it had been by an offer to advance Rs. 60,000 at 5 per cent., repayable by yearly instalments.

THE very decided terms in which the Bombay Gazette spoke of the reductions "ordered" in the Bombay Army naturally led us to reproduce its statements without further inquiry. We have since learned that those statements were without foundation. The question of the reductions in the Native Army has not yet passed out of the deliberative stage. It is still in fact "under consideration" at the India Office. We have a shrewd suspicion that the work of retrenchment will come far short of the limits marked out in India. At any rate we believe that some of the highest authorities in this country are not at all inclined to carry out the Simlah programme to its full extent.

THE Duke of Edinburgh was expected to reach Calcutta about the 20th December.

AFTER many weeks of angry bickering the Grand Turk and his most powerful vassal, the Pasha of Egypt, have been brought to terms by the pressure put on one or both of them from without. The struggle which at one time seemed momentarily impending has been postponed by the Viceroy's submission, offered with manifest reluctance, to the Sultan's demands. He has agreed to levy his taxes in the name of his nominal master, to raise no new imposts without absolute necessity, and to bid for no more foreign loans without special leave from Constantinople. Such concessions may be good for the peace of Europe, which is always, poor thing, on the verge of disruption; and they may relieve the minds of those whose political or commercial credit is staked on the maintenance of things as they are in both countries. A war between Turkey and Egypt might also have proved a sorry accompaniment to the first days of the Suez Canal. But the Viceroy's subjects will not reap much benefit from the Sultan's interference on their behalf. Their burdens will not be lightened because Ismail Pasha must henceforth bleed them in his master's name instead of his own. When he wants to raise another loan, he will merely have to lay out larger sums than before in bribing the Turkish Government. If the European Powers would only stand aside for a little, his present vassalage would soon be turned into the complete independence which Mohammed Ali very nearly won in 1844. But European diplomacy insists on shirking the Eastern Question, like the coward it is; and Ismail Pasha has to swallow his leek with the knowledge that sooner or later his turn for triumph must come.

THE movement in favour of education for the ladies of India has always found its steadiest supporters among the Parsees of Bombay. One of these, named Dr. Burzorjee, who has been living in England with his family for the last ten years, is about to return to his native city; and the ladies of his household, a mother and two daughters, propose to start in Bombay a new school where girls of ten and upwards may receive a finished education on the Western pattern, without shocking the social and religious prejudices of the East. The Doctor and his family will do the teaching gratuitously, but ask for subscriptions to aid the school; donors of £250 being allowed to nominate each a free boarder, and donors of £100 a free day scholar. School fees at a low rate will be taken from ordinary pupils. The founding of scholarships and prize funds forms part of the scheme, which includes a teachership fund for qualifying native ladies to teach in girls' schools. Government looks with favour on the scheme. Subscriptions received by the Bank of England, or Messrs. Willis, Percival, and Co., will be duly forwarded to Bombay; and the money so raised will be laid out accordingly under the supervision of the Director of Public Instruction, aided by a Bombay Committee.

THE authorities at the India Office have now decided that an examination for the Indian Medical Service shall be holden in February, 1870. There will be ten appointments open to competition.

If Englishmen have small cause for self-elation at the triumph achieved by M. Lesseps over the difficulties, real and imaginary, that seemed to forbid the marriage of the Red Sea with the Mediterranean, some crumbs of comfort may still lurk at the bottom of their cup. It is another nation's turn to laugh now; but we also may be of good countenance, remembering that after all it was an Englishman who laid the foundation of M. Lesseps' successful scheme. That gentleman himself called last summer on General and Mrs. Chesney, who were then in Paris, and assured the latter that her husband was "undoubtedly the father of the Suez Canal, for he first recognised that the difference in level between the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, said to exist by the French savans whom Napoleon took to Egypt, was a mistake." He was the first—added M. Lesseps—"to prove this mistake, and in all my writings and speeches I have invariably acknowledged what we owe to him." At a subsequent meeting of his shareholders, the Frenchman introduced General Chesney as "the man who had first demonstrated the practicability of the Canal." Such is the testimony borne in the columns of the Pall Mall Gazette by Captain Charlewood, R.N., who served under General—then Captain—Chesney, in the Euphrates Expedition of 1830, undertaken partly for the purpose of finding out the best road to India. What Captain Chesney then thought of a canal through the Isthmus appears in a letter he wrote on September 2, 1830, from Jaffa to the British Ambassador at Constantinople: "Any of these routes however which may be adopted, will probably only pave the way to the realisation of the grand idea so long indulged in England and other parts of Europe, of connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea. A little time will probably remove the ill-founded apprehension of increasing the height of the former by the influx of the latter." General Chesney has lived to see the "grand idea" realised, while his own particular scheme of a railway along the Euphrates Valley remains still a vision of the future, in spite of all that Mr. W. P. Andrew has wrought and written in its favour.

A SCHEME FOR SETTLING THE NEW ZEALAND DIFFICULTY.

A CURIOUS document, dated from the India-office, and bearing the signature of an Indian Councillor, has been made public during the past week. Coming from such a quarter, and attested by a name so eminent as Sir Bartle Frere's, this new scheme for accommodating New Zealand in the interests of British India demands some notice, even if we regard it as purely unofficial. Sir Bartle's busy brain has brought forth a programme which aims at something like a feasible solution of a twofold problem—how to relieve India of her surplus troops in view of the reductions he deems inevitable, and how to help New Zealand in re-establishing peace and order among the recalcitrant Maories. India on the one hand wants, for economy's sake, to dispense with the services of a good many officers and men of both colours, while on the other the safety of New Zealand is now imperilled "for want of a few thousand men who will serve as soldiers for a few years" in that colony. The very sort of men and officers needed for such service abound in the Indian Army, among those who have been "specially trained in frontier service against semi-barbarous and active enemies in a very difficult country." By means of a triple agreement between the Indian, English, and New Zealand Governments, a sufficient number of these men might be induced to serve in New Zealand for a certain period, with the ultimate option of settling there on lands granted them for nothing or next to nothing.

The force thus raised would serve under "a military dictator" invested with full powers, civil and military, to bring the Maories into proper relations with their white neighbours and the British Crown. Without some such arrangement for the time being, peace and good government, says Sir Bartle, are impossible for the Northern Island; white and black will continue to fight and massacre each other until none of the latter hue remains alive. But where shall we look for such a dictator? Sir Bartle apparently cannot find one along the Punjab Frontier. At any rate, he objects to take one from among "men who rely habitually on an Algerine policy of reprisals and village-burning—of setting tribe against tribe, and of driving out the devil of war by the Beelzebub of bribery and bad faith." It would be rash to say for certain that this pretty sarcasm is aimed against the policy which has hitherto found most favour on the Punjab frontier; but it does hit off the main features of that policy as it would show itself in the eyes of a warm opponent. Perhaps however the taunt was really intended for the colonists themselves and their successive rulers. Still it occurs to us that south of the Punjab extends the Sindh Frontier, where the policy of village-burning and bribery has not been generally pursued. Could Sir B. Frere, as an erstwhile Commissioner of Sindh, have meant to say a good word for General Jacob or Sir H. Green, when he referred to the "many accomplished officers who have served in India and China, and there learned the art of civilising barbarous races in place of destroying them"?

To be serious, however—this scheme for supplying the wants of New Zealand from India's abundance would be well worth considering, if the colonists were only disposed to accept their share of it. But there, we imagine, lies the rub. Is it quite certain that the colonists as a body really want that aid from abroad for which some of them have lately been clamouring? Are the affairs of the Northern Island in that critical condition in which some of the colonists represent and many English journalists believe them to be? Apparently the worst of the Maori outbreak was the beginning; its strength consisting not in numbers, but in its suddenness, and the secrecy of its conception. Its origin has openly been ascribed to the intrigues of speculators eager to make profit out of their countrymen's misfortunes. Be that as it may, and supposing the colonists wish for a supply of troops from abroad, are they likely to accept the conditions which the Home Government might claim to enforce, in return for a loan granted to New Zealand in the shape of payment for the troops supplied from India? Then there is the question of a military dictator, on which the colonists may be inclined to differ widely from Sir Bartle Frere.

WOODS AND FORESTS.

THE duty of preserving and developing the forest tracts of India has forced itself more and more urgently on the Indian Government, since the day when Lord Dalhousie penned his famous minute about planting trees in the Punjab. It became a question of the first importance as soon as the growth of the railway system involved an immense consumption of timber, both for constructive purposes and for fuel in districts where English coal was too costly a substitute for the dearth of native coal. In India also, as in all countries where coal is scarce, timber of some kind is necessarily used for household purposes by all classes that are able to afford something better than dried dung. The influence of trees on soil and climate, their usefulness in feeding the springs and modifying the rainfall, and the mischief caused by their disappearance in many regions, are matters about which most men have nearly ceased to dispute. For all these reasons the Indian Government has lately bestirred itself like a wise landlord to look after the due maintenance of its woods and forests, with an eye less to its own immediate profits than to the good of the country at large. A well-considered system of forest conservancy, administered by able and active officers, has already begun to bear fruit in every province of British India.

In its care for the general good the Government has not confined its attention to one class of timber alone. The larger trees have their obvious uses, and forests of teak and sal wood under right conditions ought to yield a handsome return for the cost of looking after them. But the claims of smaller timber are not to be overlooked. In its remarks on the last report of the Forest Administration in Mysore, the Government reminds its officers that "bamboos, small wood for agricultural and domestic purposes, firewood, and a variety of other forest produce, are necessities of great importance, the consumption of which must go on increasing with the growth of agriculture, industry, and trade in the country." When we consider how much of the manure that ought to enrich the soil is used up in India for fuel, the need of encouraging within limits the growth of small jungle in the neighbourhood of every town and village appears undeniable. In many parts of Mysore, for instance, the patches of small timber are wholly inadequate to the wants of the inhabitants, and a lamentable waste of such fuel is yearly caused by firing the jungle at the foot of the hills, in order to improve the ground for grazing. The Government therefore enjoins the propriety of putting a stop, except under certain conditions, to a practice on the whole so mischievous. It is to be hoped that the forest officers, both in Mysore and elsewhere, will take the injunction and the advice alike to heart, and that "a properly considered scheme" for cultivating small jungle will soon be put in force. With regard to the prevalent practice of firing jungles, the Chief Commissioner of Oudh admits its wastefulness, but sees or assumes political and other reasons for its partial continuance. Even if Government would gain by abandoning all profits from grazing and minor forest dues, and from the land-revenue paid by certain villages, still those considerations might, he argues, "outweigh these advantages; and it may even be found that, if fires in connection with the grazing interests be entirely stopped, the dense vegetation will so choke up the forests that they will become fitted only for wild animals, and inaccessible to the Forest Department." That last consideration cannot of course be overlooked in a country where at certain seasons the vegetation grows almost visibly. But if fires are the only way of checking Nature's excessive fruitfulness, they ought at any rate to be so regulated as to do the least possible harm to the forest trees. One way of protecting these latter, by digging wide ditches round the places where they grow, has been suggested, and some such plan will no doubt be tried, wherever the firing of jungle may still be tolerated in part.

In the Central Provinces, which are yet nearer the tropics than Oudh, the same practice has in some instances been successfully put down, while in others it is tolerated for reasons more purely political. In forests bordering on the open country it has been so far repressed that not one fire was reported during the last year, and one forest has now been free from fires for four years; a fact which certainly makes against one of the excuses assigned for such fires in Oudh. Further away in the jungle, amidst the haunts of the aboriginal Gonds and Bygahs, the practice still continues unchecked, it being deemed neither wise nor practicable to interfere too rudely with the habits of the ruder races in Central India. "It is even a question"—remarks Mr. Morris—"whether the Dhya cultivator"—that is, the man who cultivates by means of fire and the axe—"is not the natural pioneer of the more regular husbandman in vast and distant tracts of uncleared scrub jungle." That question apart however, the treatment of these wild people, who, like the Irish, have never forgotten that the land was all their own some centuries back, craves wary walking. Let them only keep their hands from harming the large timber and the preserves of fire wood needed by the towns, and Mr. Morris would be loth to turn them, by too strict an enforcement of modern rules, from occasional destroyers of wood into resolute foes of established order. The lesson they have to learn must be taught them carefully by slow degrees, after long intercourse between them and the outside world, if the Government would avoid unpleasant quarrels with subjects so unruly.

The forest administration of Central India seems marked by unusual energy and ability. The marking out of reserved forests is being accomplished "thoroughly, efficiently, and cheaply." In the northern and central divisions the work is nearly completed, the sal forests only remaining to be surveyed and marked out. On the success of the protective measures we have already commented. The attempts at new plantations have partially failed, owing to the want of sufficient water. In spite of the short quantity of timber felled for sale, the forest revenue for the year increased about 40 per cent., yielding a net profit of more than a lakh and a half. In future years the revenue ought to be largely increased by better arrangements with the Public Works officers, and still more by the late discovery of new forests, one of them seven miles long. In the southern division a teak forest has been discovered fifteen miles square. Strange as it may sound, the discovery appears to be a literal fact, and may, for all we know, have been repeated in the present year. Most of the forests discovered last year belong to the outlying district of Konkair, between Raipore and Bustar, in the Eastern Division. Konkair was found to be a thriving district, well wooded, full of villages, whose inhabitants possess large herds, farm skillfully, and have more settled habits than their Goud neighbours.

At first sight one would think that a growing demand for timber for railway use would lead the occupiers of land to grow it for their own advantage. But here either the law or the popular reading of it too often stands in the way. According to some recent decisions of the Civil Courts in the North-West Provinces a tenant farmer claiming certain rights of occupancy can neither build masonry wells, nor plant trees, much less cut down timber, without special leave from his landlord, on pain of summary eviction. The reason assigned is that such proceedings may involve a claim of joint ownership on the tenant's part. Even the digging of a kacha or unbricked well seems to be regarded as illegal. Both tenants and landlords have thus been led to believe that the planting of timber-trees has some necessary connection with the rights of ownership; and hence a heavy blow has been dealt at an important branch of agricultural enterprise, by a series of decisions as absurd in outward seeming as they are contrary to the whole spirit of Hindu tradition.

STAFF CORPS AND GENERAL LIST.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Your correspondent "S. B." looks at the matter from his point of view, but he does not upset what I stated; "to supersede" is "to set above," and on that point "S. B." will hardly disagree. He says it is all by luck the General List have got on so well; so it is, "more by gude luck than gude guiding." As regards the statement that had the General List been posted it would have been the same, "S. B." will pardon me if I think that nearly the whole of them would have been in the Staff Corps just the same as others, and so all would have been in one boat. If the General List signed something different from those who had gone before, there might be some reason in their being separated from the "old birds;" but I am inclined to coincide with "S. B." that had there been anything different (and I hardly think there was) it is "void in the eye of the law," and all should have been classed together. The seductive bait certainly enabled the know-nothings in Hindustani to enter the Staff Corps, but I do not suppose there were many of them, and they were chiefly old officers who could talk the "lingo" splendidly, and would not take the trouble to pass, but the young ones have nearly to a man passed—there may be exceptions certainly. As Government never I suppose intended to lay a bait, it evidently was meant to show that they wished men to go into the Staff Corps, and when nearly every one had done as they wished they might have laid down a twelve years' service for a captaincy for all, as well as twenty years' for a majority, when the Staff Corps man will resume his position over the General List. It will be the turn of the General List to growl then I suppose, after having been senior for perhaps ten years, to lose his place again. If it is right for those who win to laugh, surely they will not deny the pleasure of grumbling to those who lose. S. C.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

INDIAN FINANCE.

The Times of India remarks that there really never has been a single sound argument advanced in support of making the present generation bear the whole burden of the cost of works that are for the benefit of many generations, and which, as far as we can see, will for the most part be completed within a limited number of years. The verbal quibble that these works are not reproductive does not tell in the least against the diffusion of the expense of construction over a long space of time: it only proves that the adoption of a sinking fund for repayments is advisable. In a certain sense, however, they are reproductive, as all improvements which tend to increase the security of life, and to promote the physical, and consequently the moral well-being of considerable classes of the community are reproductive. And it may be said of much of the expenditure on civil buildings that it is reproductive in a stricter sense, as it is clear that it is an economical proceeding to pay four or five per cent. by way of rent on the value of the buildings owned by the Government, instead of twelve or fifteen per cent. for worse accommodation, as is generally the case when those buildings are rented from others. But we will allow that as a whole the works are not reproductive in the same sense in which irrigation and railway works are reproductive. It follows, therefore, that hospitals and jails, and barracks and official buildings must be paid for within a certain time, so that no charge on them should remain. But why limit this time to the year of their construction? The Government have very rightly come to regard these works as a certain necessary burden to be undertaken with reference rather to absolute wants than to miscalculated surpluses; why should they stop short in their theory and avoid the only logical conclusion that if the accident of surpluses should not affect the carrying out of the works neither should the works affect the surpluses? There has been lately in some quarters a call made for the shipment of an experienced financier from England who would be able to devise better schemes for ensuring financial prosperity than have been recently hatched by our India-bred administrators. The one great advantage of such an appointment would be that the selected financier would be sure to possess the full confidence of the Home Government, and it might be a further gain that he would very possibly come, entirely unprejudiced in favour of the peculiar system which has made its way into fashion here under Sir Stafford Northcote's direction. To a man of this sort we cannot but suppose that the whole glaring folly of depending upon present resources for the construction of permanent works would at once stand revealed, and the necessity become apparent of totally subverting the present mode of proceeding. The struggle to make both ends meet by cutting down stationery supplies and stopping necessary works would appear equally absurd as the attempt to raise the necessary funds by increased taxation would appear impolitic, and the establishment of a loan to be repaid within a specific period would show itself to be at once the most statesmanlike and the most truly provident plan. What that period should be we will not at present attempt to define; but consideration should be paid to the very substantial nature of the majority of the works, whose probable duration is to be estimated by centuries rather than by decades. Of course, account must be taken of the errors of judgment, in choice of site or in construction, that may be committed, and of the fact that the requirements of one generation are not always precisely those of another. In fifty years' time philanthropic administrators may possibly insist that all business should be transacted at the hill stations, that no European soldier can be expected to live in India unless he has a proportion of 5,000 cubic feet of air to himself in his dormitory, and that the moral education of criminals is very incomplete without a tennis court attached to every jail. Still, making every allowance for mistakes and the progress of civilisation, we reckon that we should be doing no wrong to the grandchildren of this generation if we should leave to them the burden of completing the payment for works now in progress.

WANT OF ROADS IN BENGAL.

The Friend of India holds that the work to be done in Bengal is startlingly great. It is the fashion to suppose that the Lower Provinces do not require roads because of their water communications. This is true only of a portion of the Eastern Districts. Over nine-tenths of Bengal the heavy rains and inundations of rivers only add to the difficulty of communication. What in Hindustan would be a dry tract fit for carts, is in Bengal a hopeless puddle which prevents transit for months. To take the most recent instances, look at Orissa and Assam. To the want of roads alone was the intensity of the famine due in the former, and the labour difficulty in the latter. It seems incredible to all who do not live in the interior of Bengal, that over an area as large as France and Switzerland there are less than seventeen thousand miles of road. Of these only 1,869 miles deserve the name, for they alone are metalled, though in many cases not bridged. Two-thirds of these miles are "imperial," that is, they exist only because they form a highway to other provinces. The "local roads" are officially described as "mere tracks passable in the dry season only." Only 498 miles are metalled, and nearly one-half of these are unbridged. "There is," continues the report published by the Bengal Government on 13th May, 1868, "one mile of road to thirteen square miles of country, but of the whole only about one-tenth of the roads are metalled and nearly one half are unbridged." During the too brief period when Mr. Leonard introduced some life into the Public Works office of Bengal, he reported that it would require 29,000 miles of new road to give the rest of the country the advantage which the Patna division possesses, or one mile of some kind to each six square miles. Yet Patna owes this advantage not to Government, but to indigo planters and the necessities of the opium monopoly. There is only one parallel to this state of things, the frightful amount of educational destitution which makes a school cess even more immediately necessary than one for roads.

CENTRALISATION OVERDONE.

The Madras Times thinks the fact that the work of economising is being overdone is not the only complaint that we "provincials" have to make. The work of economising is being conducted in the blundering manner that must always characterise measures affecting the whole of India that are concocted in a corner of India that no more represents Southern and Central India than Sweden represents France and Germany. All the economies of the Government of India are modelled on a Bengal pattern, and it is not wonderful that some of them do not suit countries that are in every respect unlike Bengal. There is, for instance, the imperative order of the Supreme Government reducing the number of officers in the police force. The straitened financiers at Simla in their desperate efforts at retrenchment seemed to have overhauled the police estimates; and some one who knows something of the Bengal police force appears to have told them that assistant-superintendents could be done without well enough. If they had thereupon abolished the office of assistant-superintendent in Bengal they would have acted sensibly enough, but although they have only the means of knowing about Bengal affairs their business is to govern all India, and so the Government ordered the abolition of the office of assistant-superintendent of police throughout India. Now, what was the position of the Madras Government in this very matter? Simply this, that they could not get men enough for this very office to keep up the force in bare efficiency. The Madras police force, instead of being over-officered, is in truth under-officered; and if the supreme authority finally determines to reduce the present establishment of officers in the face of the opinion of those who know about it much better than themselves, it will undertake a serious responsibility for the lives and property of the people of Southern India. Proper men cannot be got to fill the office of inspector, and the assistant-superintendents are the links between the heads of districts and their men that prevents the whole system from falling to pieces. Here, then, is the position. The Madras Government, as we understand, considers it highly necessary to maintain the present number of assistant-superintendents, while the Supreme Government absolutely orders it to abolish the whole of them. It seems odd that so wide a divergence of opinion should exist, but it is easily explained by a reference to the circumstances under which the different opinions are formed. As we have said, the measure of the Supreme Government is founded upon a knowledge of the police requirements of Bengal. Bengal could do, it was urged, without assistant-superintendents, and therefore the Government of India ordered the office of assistant-superintendent to be abolished throughout India, overlooking the little fact that the Madras police districts are double, treble, and quadruple the size of Bengal districts. The Madras Government, seeing this, knew that to abolish assistant-superintendents will simply be to necessitate the appointment of a large number of additional superintendents at a greater cost to the country than the present system. We are, therefore, not surprised to observe that the last Fort St. George Gazette contains the usual police appointments, the order of the Supreme Government notwithstanding. This is another instance added to many of the evils of centralisation. Here is a Government in Bengal honestly trying to serve the State, but so impeded by its own natural ignorance of the requirements of distant parts of the country as to be absolutely ordering that which can only be done at the expense of ruin to a most necessary department of the public service. The only satisfactory point about such a centralised system as now prevails in India is that it is sure to produce its own reductio ad absurdum. We think that this result has been very nearly reached when the Central Government of this enormous Empire takes to fixing the numbers of the police officers in distant presidencies over which Governors in Council have been appointed to rule. Indeed, if the present tightening of the reins should continue it would be difficult to say what are the gubernatorial duties of governors, and it will certainly be impossible to find men of capacity to become the lay figures to the condition of which all the governors of presidencies are being reduced. It will be observed that the system of centralisation is being carried over the vast empire of India to a degree that is not attempted in countries of very moderate dimensions. The town and parish authorities of England would stare if the Government fixed exactly their police establishments, or cut down the estimate for a new cocked hat for the beadle. Yet this is very much what the Government of India is doing for the great divisions of India, each of which is as extensive and populous as the whole of Great Britain. All this, of course, results from the pernicious system of a common budget; and as long as the revenues of India are gathered into the Calcutta so long must the Governments of India be governed by the less shrewd, and so long must these presidencies be governed by the less shrewd, and so long must they be unsuited to their real requirements.

TWO QUESTIONABLE BILLS.

The Englishman points out that Lord Mayo has to deal with two Bills passed by the local Legislatures of Bengal and Bombay, which are now awaiting his sanction. These Bills have been passed by the local Legislatures contrary to the expressed wishes and recorded petitions of the parties whose interests will be affected; they are at variance with the soundest principles of political economy, and amount to a most injurious and uncalled-for interference with the operations of free trade; we allude to the Tea Labour Bill, passed by the Bengal Legislative Council, and the Cotton Frauds Bill, passed by the Legislative Council of Bombay. The Tea Bill was passed in the most hasty manner, and no time was given for the planters to express their opinions upon it. Since it has been passed many remonstrances have been made by the planters against it, and numerous letters have appeared in our columns pointing out the injurious consequences of passing such a Bill, and the absence of any necessity, or any good reason for its enactment. The new Bill enacts that time-expired labourers are to be placed in the same category as newly-imported labourers, as far as certain clauses are concerned regarding sanitary arrangements and hutting. The Bill and its supporters entirely ignore the fact that time-expired labourers are thoroughly acquainted with the country, and have elected to remain in it because they make more money, and are in every respect more cared for and more comfortable than they would be in their own villages. They are also so independent that if the planter did not house them well, or failed to take the necessary measures to secure their comfort and health, they would immediately leave him. They do not wish to be under the tutelage of Government, and the planters object to Government interference as being unnecessary and vexatious. It also entails upon them a great amount of work, which curtails the time required to look after their plantations. They have to keep books and make lengthy periodical returns of the number of men and women that have been sent to hospital and the particular diseases they were afflicted with. The planter admits the value of Government interference where newly-imported labourers are concerned. These labourers are new to the country, its climate, and manner of living; it is perhaps proper then that Government should take care that they are properly housed, and that the necessary sanitary arrangements should be made. But after a residence of three years the labourer can take care of himself. How long are the planters and labourers to be subjected to the interference and tutelage of the Bengal Government? We trust that Lord Mayo will see to this at once, and compel the Bengal Council to limit its interference to the newly-imported labourer, who alone requires any protection. The Cotton Frauds' Bill, passed by the Legislative Council of Bombay, is also another instance of the uncalled-for and unnecessary interference of Government with the operations of trade. If a Bill that strikes directly at the principles of free trade was ever passed in the present day, it should only be passed under the strongest necessity, and with the unanimous approval of all parties concerned in the trade. But this is not the case with the Cotton Frauds' Bill. A strong majority of cotton merchants, both European and Native, have protested against it, and a petition is at this moment before his Excellency the Viceroy, earnestly requesting him to withhold his sanction from the proposed measure, and declaring emphatically that "special legislation on the subject of cotton frauds is unnecessary and injurious to the general interests of the cotton trade." The petition also states "that such a measure is opposed to the commercial policy which has now for many years been adopted in England, and that its probable consequences will be to interfere with and discourage rather than promote the cotton trade of Western India at every stage of its progress from the fields to the European market." Surely such strongly-expressed opinions of the parties whom the Bill is intended to protect ought not to be disregarded. Both of the Bills under notice violate a great principle of trade, and are declared by the parties interested to be uncalled for and unnecessary. Can the Viceroy hesitate for a moment in his decision on the subject? We believe, and at least hope not.

INDIAN COLONELS.—"We understand," says the Bombay Gazette, "on the best authority, that the suspension of the promotion from colonel to major-general has been withdrawn; and that the Duke of Argyll has requested the Duke of Cambridge to take the requisite steps for the immediate promotion of the six senior colonels to the rank of major-generals. This is good news, and we have some reason to believe that the next mail will bring the welcome facts in the London Gazette."

RECALL OF MAHOMED AKHOOND ALI.—We (Pioneer) hear that Mahomed Akhoond Ali, the accredited agent from the Governor of Yarkand province, who is now at the Palumpore Fair, has had letters recalling him to Yarkand, and it is probable that he will soon return via Cashmere, and, adopting the winter route, reach his native State by the commencement of the ensuing spring. It certainly seems a pity that his visit to India should be so curtailed; but if he is as well treated until he leaves our territory as he has been, he will have nothing to sorrow since he set foot in Hindoostan. A news writer describes him as a quiet, pleasant-looking, middle-aged man, exercising a distinct influence over the traders at the Fair, and always evincing a desire to converse with any English gentleman who may visit him. We trust that he is but the forerunner of some plenipotentiary invested with full powers to treat with the British Government.

THE SUPREME LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

There was a meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council at Calcutta on Nov. 12, at which the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—"The Council of the Governor-General of India for making Laws and Regulations, entertaining a high sense of the conspicuous ability displayed by the Hon. H. S. Maine during the time that he held the office of Legal Member of this Council, hereby expresses to him its cordial thanks for his long, faithful and laborious services, and its deep regret at his departure, and hearty wishes for his future welfare and happiness." In the course of his remarks Lord Mayo spoke of the increase of legislation, and of the system of discretionary government from which, to use his own words, we have almost emerged. "Far be it from me," said his Excellency, "to deny that discretionary government and rule by personal influence has not performed a great mission in this country. It has great advantages, and I would go further and say that even still in some districts in India the retention of it may for some period be a necessity; but no one can deny that all government in civilised countries to be strong, uniform, and just must be administered according to those published statutes and well-known laws which in every country are considered by the wisest and best of men to be indispensable to freedom of action and of thought, and to the security of property and life." Mr. Strachey believed no one could deny the general excellences of Indian legislation. It was excellent in substance, excellent in form, and he felt confident it would retain the character under Mr. Maine's successor. It would soon be said of India that there was no country in the world which possessed such a complete code of laws. In one of his addresses to the Calcutta University Mr. Maine said that if he were asked to give a rough definition of law, he would say that it was common sense. Mr. Strachey thought that this remark of Mr. Maine's very accurately described the character of recent Indian legislation. Referring to the hard-working part Mr. Maine had taken in the general administration of the country, Mr. Strachey said, "There is perhaps something unfortunate in the constitution of the Government in that a member of the Executive Council has no definite or separate official responsibility. He may originate or he may obstruct measures that closely affect the interests of millions, but the public know him only as a member of that somewhat mysterious body, the Governor General in Council." Further on Mr. Strachey said—"The present seems the very time for a statesman like Mr. Maine to turn to good account his practical India knowledge, for England is now entering on the consideration of many matters affecting closely the condition of the people; the rights of landlords and tenants, and all those difficult questions connected with private and national rights in land. With this subject Indian Statesmen have laboured for the last three quarters of a century, and there is no man that can speak with greater knowledge and authority on it than Mr. Maine."

Before the Council meeting broke up Mr. Strachey obtained leave to introduce a Bill to enhance the price of salt in the Presidency of Fort St. George and the duty on salt in the Presidency of Bombay; and to introduce a Bill to provide a rate for the manufacture, storing and sale of alimentary salt in the North-Western Provinces, in the Punjab, Oudh, and the Central Provinces.

STATION TALK.

DELHI, Nov. 14.—Major-Gen. Colin Troup, C.B., arrived on Friday to make his half-yearly inspection of the 70th Highlanders, which he did during the day, and left yesterday morning for Agra, Muttra, &c., &c. The General does not lose much time in getting over his duties. The 21st Hussars marched in on Friday morning; they played the station at cricket on Saturday in the Queen's Gardens, and left this morning en route to Lucknow. The man charged with forging the Government stamp paper has been tried, found guilty, and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment; I am told that the neat manner in which the fraud was effected is highly creditable to the forger, and that it fully bears out the high character the painters of Delhi have always possessed as artists; but, at the same time, I heard that the actual forger, who was seized in the act, is not the only one concerned in the nefarious transaction; perhaps some who have hitherto been little suspected may turn out to be aiders, abettors, or receivers to no inconsiderable extent. My letters from Meerut mention that the station is anything but healthy. There was a funeral on Thursday evening, when a promising young officer of the 24th Hussars was carried to his last resting-place, followed by the whole regiment; I believe typhoid fever was the immediate cause of death. The weather here is very pleasant—nights and mornings very cold—picnics, croquet, cricket, and shooting all in full swing. The new croquet-ground in the once ugly "Koodseah Garden" was opened last week by some picnics given there by our Commissioner, and I hear of some more parties likely to come off soon. The wing of the 79th Highlanders will march early next month, I hear, but I do not know whether the date has yet been fixed.

MOULMEIN, Oct. 30.—The Buddhist boat-race festival has just come to a close. We had some fine races on the river, and enjoyed ourselves pretty well, seeing them for three days. An account of how they are conducted may not be without interest to your readers, that is, if they ever read my wretchedly dry letters, so I send you one. Every year about this time, say October, the Burmese have a festival called the Yathabin; this festival extends over ten or twelve days, and during it they have boat races. I should be more correct in calling them canoe races, for the boats are nothing else but canoes, and are propelled through the water by paddles. Each boat contains about twenty-eight persons; it is long and very narrow, with seats throughout its length. One of the twenty-eight steers, three or four bale water, and the rest paddle. Their paddles are of the ordinary paddle size and shape, only nicely coloured and well finished. The race-course is about a mile in length, and marked off by a line of "small boats bearing small white flags;" at one end of this line of boats is the goal-boat, having a long bamboo athwart its bows. This bamboo is hollowed out completely, and a string running through it keeps two bunches of palm-leaves attached to either end of the bamboo. The prow of the goal-boat is turned to the starting point. Two canoes at a time compete. The canoes leaving the starting place are steered one on each side of the line of boats marking the racecourse, and they race with each other without there being any chance of one fouling another. Both make for the goal-boat with its palm-bearing bamboo, and whichever crew obtains the palm leaves first is declared winner; and in the event of a dead heat they try over again. A great deal of betting and gambling goes on amongst the lookers on, but every thing is generally kept orderly and quiet; at one time they used to be permitted to discharge a gun at the conclusion of each race. This year the races were very ordinary and quiet, because the authorities did not as in former years interfere to forward them. The other night a fire broke out in the jail work-yard and destroyed, I am informed, a great deal of cotton that had been cleaned and baled. The sepays of the 37th Grenadiers under their officers rendered effectual assistance in putting it out with their engine. Of course the police were not present; they never are present where and when required. The jail people too seem to have taken it rather easy; they have a beautiful engine, and might have easily turned it into the yard, but of course they would not take the trouble; so a lot of cotton belonging to one of our merchants has been destroyed and one of the work-sheds lately raised burnt to the ground. Who pays for all this? Prison affairs sadly require looking after. Ever since the departure of Dr. Planck prison affairs have been on the decline. Dr. Planck was our first Inspector General of Prisons, and the only one who rendered work for the pay he drew. In the conscientious discharge of his duties he was brought to clash against other officers, and as his interest was not so great as theirs they frequently obstructed him. Had he been allowed his way in all things how different a tale our prison report would tell. He went away, and the reform he effected has not been supplemented in any way by his successors. We do not know what Lord Mayo's Government is going to do with Burmah. Now, if you wish to know the true state of the country's trade, don't read the trade report. I will tell you how we have been getting on with reference to trade in my next. Here we are with ruin staring us in the face, beaten out of the rice markets of this world by a heavy export duty on grain, our timber prospects nil, no reproductive public works being carried on to open out the country and promote agriculture, and the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner coolly says in the last report, "it is a question if the national prosperity has been diminished." The secretary's office has a happy way of snubbing people under it, and of talking clap-trap, but it cannot controvert what is well known and severely felt, the decline of the trade of British Burmah. That office and the one over which our Accountant-General presides always tell the public things with a bad grace and never in a straightforward manner. The other day the latter office published a statement that professed to tell people how much the British Burmah administration derived as revenue and how much it spent. The gods alone know what object it had for the manner in which it put its figures together, but it put it beyond the intelligence of any one man to understand its statement. After a deal of summing up, subtracting, multiplying, and taking ratios, one finds out we are living beyond our means—spending 90 lacs within five months, earning 83½ lacs at the same time. The establishment of a huckster's stall would not publish such statements as our highly paid Financial Department does. Now we have Mr. Rule from Bombay, and it is to be earnestly hoped that he will introduce a method of careful calculation in the office under his rule. I have hardly time to carry this to any great length, but in my next will tell you something about our D.P.W. We learn here that six Madras regiments, and not ten, are to be disbanded, the 37th Grenadiers at present in our station amongst them. Archdeacon Pratt came out by to-day's steamer, the Ara, and is to preach at St. Matthew's to-morrow. After the sermon a collection is to be made on behalf of the Additional Clergy Society. We have never seen one of the cloth here.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

DR. CAYLEY.—Letters from Cashmere inform the Pioneer that Dr. Cayley was expected in Siceenuggur on the 3d inst., on his return from Leh.

Miscellaneous.

ALLAHABAD UNIVERSITY.—Two munificent donations to the future Allahabad University have been made—one from the Nawab of Rampore of Rs. 14,800, and the other from the Maharajah of Benares of Rs. 5,000.

POLICE.—There is a chance of the Deputy Inspectors-General of the N. W. Provinces, at least, escaping the shears which the Government of India is about to apply to the Police Department. We believe Lord Mayo has promised to re-consider his order regarding them.—Delhi Gazette.

CHANDA COAL.—Messrs. Oldham, Blanford, Medlicott, and Hughes, of the Government Geological Survey, intend visiting Chanda very soon, to ascertain from personal observation the state and progress of the coal explorations now being carried on, and report on the nature and prospective yield of the coal in the several pits.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—The Rev. Mr. Toussaint, Chaplain of Kussowlie, has been obliged to take leave for three months, from severe ill-health. A few days ago the reverend gentleman's recovery was despaired of, but he has rallied somewhat lately. The Rev. Mr. Laing, of Jullunder, will officiate for Mr. Toussaint at Kussowlie during his absence.—Indian Army Gazette, Nov. 9.

THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH.—The people of Agra, deprived by circumstances of their Grand Durbar, will be gratified by learning that they are, nevertheless, to have the Duke of Edinburgh among them. His Royal Highness will be there on the 17th of January. He will be a guest of Sir William Muir's in camp, and will be entertained by him for four days. There will be a comparatively small gathering on the occasion.—Delhi Gazette.

PIG-STICKING.—"The pig-sticking at Ghurmuktesur, in which his Excellency the Governor General took part, did not," says the Delhi Gazette, "pass off without accidents. Major F. W. Dunbar, District Superintendent of Police at Meerut, broke his collar bone; and Captain the Honorable A. Stewart, Adjutant of the A Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, and of the Royal Artillery, was thrown from his horse and severely shaken. The Viceroy also received a kick in the leg from one of the horses, but no serious injury."

ORIENTAL MSS.—"Among the Delhi, Arabic, and Persian manuscripts, the cataloguing of which has been entrusted to me by the Governors of India, I have discovered two autographs of a gigantic The-saurus of the Persian language, compiled at Delhi by a Hindu of the name of Jainān Dās, son of Lālah Mangal Sen. The work is entitled Miftāh al Khazāin, and was composed during A. H. 1220 to 1240. Unfortunately, it only goes up to the end of the letter Sin. The first two letters, Alif, B, alone extend over 732 leaves quarto, closely written. We owe the best Persian dictionaries to Indians, and some of them, as the Bihār i 'Ajām, the Mutalāhāt i Shū'arā, &c., to Hindus; but this compilation is so extensively planned, and so well executed, that no dictionary should be compiled by scholars at home without the use of this work."—Extract from a Letter by Dr. Blochmann, Secretary to the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal.

CIVIL.—We understand that Mr. Andrew Ross, C.S., Judge of Myspoorie, who has just returned from leave to Mussorie, intends to go home in March, after a service in India of thirty-one years. Mr. Ross, who is a son of Sir John Ross, the Arctic navigator, entered the navy as a midshipman at nine years of age, and showed his indomitable pluck at Glazepore during the Mutiny in 1857.—Delhi Gazette.—On the return of Mr. V. H. Schalech to Calcutta—he is expected in a day or two—he will, we understand, resume charge of the office of Senior Member of the Board of Revenue. Mr. H. C. Campbell will in this case revert to his own appointment as Commissioner of the Presidency Division; his absence from the Board is not however likely to be of long duration. Mr. A. Money, C.M., we hear, contemplates taking furlough to England, and in this case Mr. Campbell would resume his officiating seat at the Board.—Englishman, Nov. 10.

BURMAH.—The Burmah papers are anxiously awaiting the result of the memorial against the rice duty from the Rangoon Chamber of Commerce. The Chief Commissioner, General Fyche, is fully alive to the immense importance of the subject, and, from what he has written in his last annual report, there can be no doubt of the support he would lend the memorial. Entrusted with the administration of a rich and fertile province, which year by year, since it came under British rule, has advanced in prosperity with a swiftness which the most forward of colonies only can equal, General Fyche has the wisdom to perceive that any blow sent home against the chief of its staples must have the most pernicious effect on its future. He has therefore wisely drawn attention to the state of the rice trade, and made the cause of the Government in the province that of merchants and peasantry. It only remains for the Supreme Government to deal boldly and wisely with this question: wisely in making a concession in time to be of real service, and boldly in breaking loose from the trammels of precedent and red tape. The Treaty Courts are working well at Mandalay, where the King has shown a marked partiality for Captain Storer just as he did for Major Slaten, and just as he will for Major MacMahon. The steamer Colonel Fyche, it is said, will take up the regular duty of keeping open the commu-communications between Mandalay and Bhamo. The King is now represented as being greatly influenced by his Conservator of Forests, Dr. Martels, and to be sincerely anxious to carry out the treaty. There is, however, a very grave screw loose as matters at present stand, owing to the peculiar advantages which Burmese law affords the debtor. The Government of India has extended to Burmah the rule obtaining in the case of Native States, that decrees of English Courts are only to be executed through the Courts of the States concerned. This rule carried out in Burmah will amount to giving debtors, against whom the mixed Courts may pronounce decrees, a practical exemption from the claims of their creditors. The Burmese law will not permit the seizure of a debtor's property, and it will permit him to be imprisoned by deputy. The question here involved is a strange as well as a delicate one, and, meanwhile, in order to secure the advantages of the Burmese law, many foreign residents of Mandalay have removed their names from the list of registered British subjects.—Englishman, Nov. 15.

MILITARY.—Sickness is very prevalent at Meean Meer. The hospitals are filled with fever patients from the European and Native troops. The 9th Bengal Cavalry, and the 21st and 25th Native Infantry seem to be the greatest sufferers. There is much fever also in Lahore generally; at Anark illee several cases have occurred amongst both Europeans and Natives.—Indian Army Gazette, Nov. 9.—Fever continues very bad in Jullundur, especially in H.M.'s 92nd Gordon Highlanders, 150 of whom are, we believe, in hospital, besides a number of out-patients.—Mofussilite, Nov. 11.—Lieut. Beatty, of the 25th P.N.I., died of cholera at Peshawur, on the 2nd inst. Mr. Beatty, says the Delhi Gazette, had been suffering from fever for some weeks, but was seized with cholera only a few hours before his death. There have also been several other cases of cholera in that death-stricken station.—By alterations which the Government of India have ordered in the dates of the march of corps to and from the Presidency in course of relief, the following force will be collected at Calcutta during the visit of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh:—A and C Batteries, 16th Brigade Field Artillery; 3rd Battery, 22nd Brigade Garrison Artillery; 11th Bengal Lancers; 2nd Battalion 19th, and the 26th and 96th Foot; the 2nd, 8th, 9th, 11th, 13th, 14th and 22nd Native Infantry.—We are glad to state, says the Indian Public Opinion, that the news from Bunnoo and the frontier is reassuring; the strict quarantine which was established by the commanding officer is still kept up, but as regards cholera there has been a marked decrease. Fever, however, still rages along the whole valley, as indeed it does throughout the whole Punjab. We are half-afraid to say that it is of a typhoid character, but certainly this opinion is held by a good many medical men. We understand that about a week ago more than eighty men of the 92nd Highlanders at Jullundur were in hospital from this disease, and that three or four deaths had occurred within a few days.—Captain Stewart, who is a younger son of the Earl of Galloway, has, says the Delhi Gazette, been appointed Aide-de-Camp to Lord Mayo during the visit of the Duke of Edinburgh. This is the third Governor-General of India to whom he has acted as aide-de-camp, an office for which he is well known to possess the special qualifications of a handsome person, refined manners, extensive reading, large knowledge of the world, and, of course, familiarity with the usages of the best society. Captain Stewart served in the expedition to China in 1860, and was present at Sihbo, Tangku, the actions near Tangchow, and the surrender of Peking, for which he received the medal and clasp.—H.M.'s 36th N.I. left by rail on the evening of Nov. 10, under command of Lieut. col. P. G. Scot, en route for Peshawur. The regiment will leave the rail at Loodiana, and march the remainder of the distance.—Cornet A. E. Gambier, of the 4th (Queen's Own) hussars, died of remittent fever on Nov. 11, and was to be buried that evening at half-past four; Mr. Gambier had very recently arrived in India, and he appeared to be one of the healthiest and most robust men in the regiment. A correspondent speaks of him as "an uncommonly fine young fellow, prepossessing in person and character." All the officers at the station off duty were requested by a brigade order to attend the funeral.

Madras.

REVISION OF SALARIES.—We hear that Mr. R. H. Hollingberry, Assistant-Secretary to the Government of India, is shortly expected at Madras to revise the civil salaries and establishments in this presidency. This gentleman is to correspond direct with the Supreme Government regarding the reductions he may propose.—Madras Mail.

JAILS.—It is announced that committees have been appointed to revise the jail establishments in the presidencies of Bombay and Madras with a view to reduce expenditure. A similar step will be taken in Bengal. This is a bad lookout for some of our model jails and jailors.

THE COMING DUKE.—It is expected, says a Madras contemporary, that Lord and Lady Napier will leave Madras for Calcutta, to meet the Duke of Edinburgh, about the 18th of December, returning early in January. The Supreme Government offered to provide a special steamer for the conveyance of their Excellencies, but Lord Napier, probably thinking both of the deficit and of his own comfort, has determined to travel by P. and O. steamer. There is a probability that his Royal Highness may visit Madras in February.

MERITORIOUS SERVICE.—Having in consideration the long and meritorious services of Captain T. R. Ardagh and Lieut. J. Craig, both of the Ordnance Department, the Commander-in-Chief has recommended them for such special reward, either by an increase of pay or pension as may be deemed most desirable. Concurring in this recommendation, the local Government has submitted the question to the Government of India.—Madras Times.

MORE REDUCTIONS.—The office establishments of the Collector of Madras and the Collector of Sea Customs it is said are to be amalgamated, under one head—whereby a certain saving monthly of Rs. 2,333 5-4 will be effected, and probably more, as it is hoped that in combining the establishment a certain number of the clerks might be dismissed and the salaries of others reduced.—Madras Times.

A RAJAH KNIGHTED.—The Rajah of Cochin has been appointed a Knight Commander of the Star of India, and Mr. Ballard has been requested to arrange for the presentation of the insignia to his Highness, with befitting dignity and ceremony. Mr. Ballard has also to explain to his Highness the Rajah the purport of the several documents, particularly the one which provides for the return of the insignia, in the event of the promotion or decease of a member.—Madras Mail.

CIVIL.—Mr. T. Weir, a junior Civilian, has been awarded a donation of 1,000 rupees, to which he is entitled under the new rules, for passing the test for high proficiency in the Tamil language. Mr. Weir only arrived in India last year. It is highly creditable to him that he should have obtained Tamil honours so soon.—The Hon. Mr. Bellasis, who was to have been appointed Revenue Commissioner, Southern Division, has, on second thoughts, reverted to his own appointment of Commissioner of Customs; it is not likely, however, that he will hold it long, as it is understood that he will retire in a few months, when, we presume, Mr. Reid will return to a post he fills so well. On the probable early retirement of Mr. Hadow, the Revenue Commissionership, Southern Division, we believe, will fall to Mr. Havelock.—On dit, says the Madras Athenæum, that the collectorate of North Arcot is to be sacrificed to the deficit, and that the district is to be divided between those of Salem and Madras.

MILITARY.—Captain W. H. Newcome, of the 2nd Battery 5th Brigade Royal Artillery, died at St. Thomas's Mount on the 6th Nov.—Lieut. F. W. Pace, of H.M.'s 45th Regiment (Sherwood Foresters), died in the fort at Madras on the evening of the 7th. This officer had been sent in sick from Palaveram some time ago, but was rapidly recovering, and every hope was confidently entertained of his entire restoration to health; in fact, he was just going out for a drive with Dr. Frazer, of his regiment, when he was suddenly taken ill, and, after some convulsions, died in about a quarter of an hour. He is spoken of as a promising and popular young officer, and his death has cast a gloom over the regiment to which he belonged.—The third officer who has died was on the Retired List. We refer to Colonel Charles Wallace Young, C.B.; he died at Palaveram on Nov. 4.—According to the Madras Times nothing is yet settled about who shall succeed the late Colonel Robertson as Adjutant-General; but it is understood that the claims of Colonel Roe, of the 60th Rifles, are under the favourable consideration of the Government. Colonel Fordyce would no doubt have been a formidable rival to Colonel Roe had he possessed the necessary qualification of five years' service in India; but he has only three years' service, and the qualification is said to be indispensable.

A MARE'S NEST.—In their mania for retrenchment the economists of Calcutta have done some queer things, and perhaps the incident we are about to relate is not the least funny of them. There is an officer in Madras who is at once a lieutenant-colonel in the Staff Corps, Government Agent at Chepauk, Paymaster of Carnatic Stipendiaries, and Translator of Persian and Hindostanee to the Madras Government. The eyes of the Bengal abolitionists lit upon the name of this fat pluralist and glistened. Forthwith was despatched to the Madras Government an inquiry whether it would not be possible to abolish the offices of Government Agent at Chepauk and Paymaster of Carnatic Stipendiaries, and to have the duties performed by the Board of Revenue. The inquiry was handed over to the occupant of these offices, with a request that he would report on his own abolition. That officer received the bowstring in the most philosophic manner, and performed the "happy despatch" with a grim smile upon his countenance. He reported emphatically in favour of his own abolition as Government Agent and Paymaster. This was pleasant reading for the abolitionists; but, unfortunately, there was a kind of postscript attached that must have made them take a different view of the matter. The officer in question thought it his duty to remark that if his offices of Government Agent at Chepauk and Paymaster of Carnatic Stipends were abolished, Government would have to pay him three hundred a month more for performing his diminished duties. It so happens that all these offices are held upon a consolidated pay which is some rupee or two less than the military pay of the occupant would be if employed with a regiment, and which is less by three hundred rupees than the pay of his rank plus that of translator to Government. We need hardly remark that the too conscientious reporter is not likely to have his offices abolished on those terms, but that he is still to have the pleasure of performing his multifarious duties on rather less than his military pay.—Madras Times.

DR. LIVINGSTONE'S LETTER.

The following letter has been published in the Bombay papers. It is addressed to the English Consul at Zanzibar:—

"Ujiji, 30th May, 1869.

"My dear Doctor Kirk,—This note goes by Musa Kamaals, who was employed by Koarji to drive the buffaloes hither, but, by over-driving them unmercifully in the sun, and tying them up to save trouble in herding, they all died before he got to Unyanyembe. He witnessed the plundering of my goods and got a share of them, and I have given him beads and cloth sufficient to buy provisions for himself in the way back to Zanzibar. He has done nothing here. He neither went near the goods here nor tried to prevent their being stolen in the way. I suppose that pay for four months in coming, other four of rest, and four in going back would be ample, but I leave this to your decision. I could not employ him to carry my mail back, nor can I say anything to him for he at once goes to the Ujijians and gives his own version of all he hears. He is untutored and ill-conditioned, and would hand off the mail to anyone who wished to destroy it. The people here are like the Kilwa traders, haters of the English. Those Zanzibar men whom I met between this and Nyassa were gentlemen and traded with honour. Here, as in the haunts of the Kilwa hordes, slaving is a series of forays, and they dread exposure by my letters. No one will take charge of them. I have got Thani bin Suellim to take a mail privately for transmission to Unyanyembe. It contains a cheque on Ritchie, Stuart, and Co., of Bombay, for Rs. 2,000 and some forty letters written during my slow recovery. I fear it may never reach you. A party was sent to the coast two months ago. One man volunteered to take a letter secretly but his master warned them all not to do so, because I might write something he did not like. He went out with the party and gave orders to the headman to destroy any letter he might detect on the way. Thus, though I am good friends outwardly with them all, I can get no assistance in procuring carriers, and as you will see, if the mail comes to hand, I sent to Zanzibar for fifteen good boatmen to act as carriers if required, eighty pieces of meritano, forty ditto of kinitra, twelve farasalas of the beds called junsain shoes, &c., and I have written to Syed Majid begging two of his guards to see to the safety of the goods here into Thani bin Suellim's hands or into those of Mahommed bin Sahib.

"As to the work to be done by me it is only to connect the sources which I have discovered, from 500 to 700 miles south of Speke and Baker's, with the Nile. The volume of water which flows north from latitude 120 south is so large, I suspect that I have been working at the sources of the Congo as well as those of the Nile. I have to go down the eastern line of drainage to Baker's turning point. Tanganyika, Nyige Chowambe (Baker's?) are one water, and the head of it is 300 miles south of this. The western and central lines of drainage converge into an unvisited lake west or south-west of this. The outflow of this, whether to Congo or Nile, I have to ascertain. The people of this, called Manyema, are cannibals, if Arabs speak truly. I may have to go there first, and down Tanganyika, if I come out un eaten, and find my new squal from Zanzibar. I earnestly hope you will do what you can to help me with the goods and men. £400 to be sent by Mr. Young must surely have come to you through Fleming and Co.—I am, &c., "DAVID LIVINGSTONE.

"A long box, paid for to Nijiji, was left at Unyanyembe, and so with other boxes."

LAYING OF THE PERSIAN GULF CABLE.—REMARKABLE STORMS.

During the operations of laying the second Persian Gulf Cable the cable vessels encountered two severe storms, or squalls, of a peculiar character, which are thus described by Mr. Latimer Clark, the engineer to the expedition:—

"The first gale occurred on the 1st November, about nine o'clock at night, when about 130 miles from Bushire. The weather had for many days been settled and fine, with a high barometer and strong morning breezes, dying off in the afternoon to a dead calm. Distant lightning and dark heavy clouds were occasionally seen in the N.W. On the night in question the sun had set, as usual on a calm sea, and the cable was being paid out steadily from a large sailing vessel, the Calcutta, towed by a very powerful steamer, the Dacca, when suddenly, and without the smallest warning, both vessels were struck by a hurricane or blast of cold air, mixed with scattered rain, which brought them up standing as effectually as if they had run against a stone wall. For a few minutes a scene of great confusion followed, it was impossible to stand without holding on to some fixed object; awnings and wind sails were carried away, or had to be cut adrift, and loose articles of every kind were overthrown and hurled along the deck; the roar of the tempest was so loud that commands were inaudible. The steamer became unmanageable, being encumbered by a steam barge which she had in tow, and had to cut adrift, and as both she and the Calcutta were presenting broad-sides to the wind, they were carried bodily to leeward. After struggling ineffectually against the storm for an hour and a quarter, and losing a good deal of cable, which was paid out in a backward direction, it was thought best to cut and buoy the cable, and the Dacca having got up more steam towed her consort in under the land for shelter. In the meantime the thermometer had fallen nearly thirty degrees, and a tempest of thunder and lightning burst over the vessels on a scale of great grandeur and beauty, which, as the vessel's mast and rigging were all of iron, could be enjoyed without any apprehension; the flashes averaged thirty or forty per minute, and the roll of thunder was incessant. Many of the flashes appeared to drop into the ocean perpendicularly as a single stream of fire, which enlarged at the point where it struck the water. From the distance and apparent height many of these flashes were estimated to have fallen 1000 feet. They were followed by rapid interchanges of electricity among the clouds above, as if the disturbed equilibrium were readjusting itself. Other flashes appeared to originate like the sources of a river, in a thousand separate streams, which, uniting together, joined into one parent trunk and fell into the sea, presenting the appearance of what is called a genealogical tree. One flash in particular extended its branches out horizontally to a wider extent than the eye could take in, so that for an instant the whole visible heavens were filled with innumerable streams of fire, converging into a common trunk, and descending into the water. All the flashes appeared to be double, and some were repeated three or four times, but at such rapid intervals that they could not be counted, but appeared, as it were, to flicker. Some flashes struck the Calcutta, and although only visible to those on board as a dazzling and blinding light, as viewed from the sister ship the whole upper part of her masts and rigging were seen to be clothed with fire. Some few flashes were seen distinctly to rise out of the ocean, and, striking straight upwards, to disperse themselves among the clouds. The lightning only lasted half an hour in its greatest intensity, and then appeared to drift away with the storm to S.E. The hurricane, after lasting two hours, changed into a gale from the E. and S.E., which by morning had subsided into a calm.

"The next day the cable was spliced up, and paying out had scarcely commenced with a strong S.E. wind, when notice was received that another violent storm from the N.W. had passed Bushire, and was on its way down the Gulf. Full steam was accordingly got up, awnings taken in, and every preparation was made for its reception. At three o'clock black clouds were seen rising, and at 3.52 the storm burst forth with the same suddenness and fury that characterised the previous one; being daylight, many phenomena were observed which were missed the previous night. As the clouds approached they gathered into a peculiar form, resembling the cap of a large mushroom, extending entirely across the heavens from one horizon to the other. The lower edge of the mushroom had a rounded and wrinkled margin, but was very sharply defined; the surface was composed of innumerable similar strata, as if melted pitch had been poured out and allowed to solidify in numerous cakes each smaller than the one below. Underneath all was a dark chaos, which soon enveloped the vessels, the wind still blowing aft; suddenly there came a profound calm, and a few hundred yards ahead the squall was seen approaching. The sea elsewhere was covered with full-sized waves, but under the influence of the hurricane it became one dead level of creamy foam, the top of every wave being swept off into spray as soon as it rose. Numerous small whirlwinds swept along the surface, carrying up waterspouts towards the clouds, and for a few moments the darkness and the breathless calm contrasting with the threatening turmoil of the approaching squall, and the lurid light of the sky still gleaming behind, formed a very impressive scene, which was heightened by the incessant roll of distant thunder. In another moment the squall struck the vessels with the same fury as on the former occasion, and the thermometer fell at once from 81 to 53 deg.; torrents of rain swept the decks, accompanied with continuous peals of thunder and lightning, and all the appearances of the previous night. The vessels however steamed ahead with full power, and were enabled to maintain their way successfully, losing however about four miles of cable. After about two hours the sky grew bright, and the wind changed into a gale from the S. E. followed by a calm.

"One or two phenomena were noticed out of the ordinary course; the barometer remained on both occasions unaffected up to the last moment, but as soon as the storm arrived it rose about two-tenths of an inch and fell again as it passed over, thus showing that the propelling power was a pressure from behind, produced by the weight of the falling rain, or some other cause, and not a vacuum in front as in ordinary storms. It was noticed that the thunder caused by those flashes of lightning which struck the vessels did not follow the flash instantaneously, but after a very perceptible interval of time, showing that from some cause the lightning travelled the last four or five hundred feet in silence. Another circumstance of a technical character still more unexpected was that the electrical instruments connected with the cable were not in any way affected during the storm, although they were of the most sensitive construction, and were arranged in a manner well suited to show any defects if they had existed. The vessel and rigging were of iron, and the cable was coiled in iron tanks, riveted to the sides of the vessel, yet even when the discharges were sufficient to burn pieces of canvas on the rigging, none of the electricity appeared inclined to enter the cable, but the whole escaped silently into the sea, without causing even a quiver of the galvanic needle; thus recalling to recollection Faraday's celebrated observation that the whole quantity of electricity in a flash of lightning is not greater than that caused by the decomposition of a single drop of water."

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, Nov. 6.—The half-yearly inspection of the 1st Battalion 21st Royal North British Fusiliers was completed by Major-General Sir George Malcolm, K.C.B., last Wednesday. The marching past in open and quarter-distance column was excellent, and the remarkable steadiness of the men was the theme of general remark. The manual and platoon exercises were gone through in a very creditable manner, and showed that the corps had an excellent adjutant and staff to teach it. The bayonet exercise was well done, and Sir George was much pleased with the series of field movements which the regiment afterwards executed. There is not the slightest doubt that in point of efficiency and discipline the 21st Fusiliers is second to none in this Presidency, and it is matter of regret that so fine a corps will have to leave Kurrachee next March. Its officers have been conspicuous for their continuous efforts in promoting sociability and amusement ever since their arrival among us, while the behaviour of the men has been, with but few exceptions, orderly and commendable. It will shortly lose one of its most popular officers, Lieut.-Col. William Pole Collingwood, who has been directed by Major-General Sir George Malcolm, K.C.B., under instructions received from his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, to proceed next week to Bombay, and thence to Madras, and report himself to the Adjutant General of that presidency for orders. It is not known for certain why this officer has been ordered to Madras, but it is believed that he has been selected to fill an important staff appointment in recognition of his past services. It is stated that Mr. Sextus Howard Puillipots, of the Bombay Civil Service, is likely to be appointed Judge and Session Judge of Shikarpoor; that Mr. Foxton, B.A., will succeed Major Dunsterville as Collector of Shikarpoor; and that Major Wallace, at present acting Collector of Hyderabad, will revert to the settlement on the return of Captain Phillips from England. Mr. R. H. Pinhey was expected to arrive here by the last mail to take up the Judicial Commissionership of Sind, but as he has not put in his appearance, there is a report afloat that he has changed his mind about accepting the appointment.

Nov. 11.—Some strange reports are in circulation here just now. It is said that the predatory tribes near the Sind frontier have not been very peaceably disposed lately; that the State of Khelat is in a state of disaffection through the intrigues of the different chiefs who, it is alleged, have entered into a conspiracy against the life of the Khan; that our Political Agent (Captain C. H. Harrison) and Assistant-Surgeon Robert Bowman have been obliged to retire to our side of the Bolan Pass; and that a squadron of Sind Horse, under the command of Captain Stevenson, has been despatched by Colonel Phayre to Captain Harrison's assistance. It is to be hoped matters will soon be remedied and settled in a satisfactory manner.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

AN ENTERPRISING PARSEE.—A native contemporary praises a Parsee tradesman for his enterprise in going to Suez to be present on the occasion of the opening of the canal with some articles of merchandise of Bombay manufacture. The merchandise consists of ivory and other work.

THE COTTON MANIA OF 1862-4—Mr. H. Rivett-Carnac, the Cotton Commissioner, thus describes the effects of cotton profits and speculation on the natives of India:—"All sorts of absurdities were committed. Silver ploughshares, and tires of solid silver for cart-wheels, made their appearance here and there. Fancy prices were paid for bullocks of a favourite colour, or possessing some peculiarity of tail. Enormous sums were squandered on marriage ceremonies, and we may rest assured that the Brahmins did not omit to profit by the occasion. All these extravagances tempted many to defer the settling-day with their creditors—a day which the 'mahajun,' or village banker, who regarded the peasant as a valuable milch-cow, was not in the least unwilling to see postponed. And there is, unfortunately, a grim truth in what has more than once been said of the native cultivator—that he is seldom so self-satisfied as when he has a heavy balance at his banker's on the wrong side of the account. The amount of his debt to the village 'mahajun' is, indeed, the gauge of the cultivator's respectability. . . . Still, after having looked at the worst side of the picture, a very large balance of substantial benefit remains. The cultivators who, rendered enthusiastic by rich harvests, thought to gratify the bountiful mother earth by scratching her back with a plough of silver were the exception, and many had the good sense to feel that the cooling shade of mango groves and other trees, planted in hundreds throughout the country, and newly-dug wells, with a plentiful supply of water to refresh the soil during the hot months, would be more highly appreciated by the parched and over-worked earth than any arrangement which gratitude for plentiful harvests and high prices could suggest. Thus the number of trees planted greatly increased, the irrigated area was extended, and much land lying waste was brought under cultivation. The people indulged in better food and richer cloths, and the demand for the rich 'dhoties' and 'sarees' of Nagpore (the loin-cloths and plaids, the chief costume of the men and women respectively) increased, and, as an old Conservative Deshpandia, when dilating to me on the objectionable turn matters had taken, expressed it—'Every coolie (or labourer) took to dressing himself like a Brahmin!' Earthen vessels disappeared before pots and pans of brass and copper, or of even richer metal, sturdy plough cattle were imported in considerable quantities from all parts of India, the dwelling-houses of the people were improved, and in many cases mud and thatch gave way before substantial buildings of brick and stone."

COURT MARTIAL.

LIEUT. R. W. W. GREENLAW, BOMBAY STAFF CORPS, ATTACHED TO THE 18TH REGIMENT BOMBAY NATIVE INFANTRY.

Head Quarters, Simla, Nov. 6.—At a general court martial, assembled at Ahmedabad, on Tuesday, the 28th day of September, 1869, Lieut. R. W. W. Greenlaw, of H.M.'s Bombay staff corps, attached to the 18th regt. Bombay N.I., was arraigned on the following charges :—

Charges.

First Charge.—For behaving in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in the following instances :—

First Instance.—In having, at Burda Chowkee, when in command of a detachment of the 25th regiment N.I., between the 22nd April and the 2nd June, 1869, misappropriated to his own use public money amounting to 266 rupees 12 annas, delivered over to his charge in the treasure chest by Subadar Ittajee Row Chowan, thereby creating discontent in the above-named detachment, by causing the issue of pay for the month of April to be delayed from or about the 6th to the 21st June, 1869.

Second Instance.—In having, at Burda Chowkee, on the 5th July, 1869, ordered Colour Havildar and Acting Havildar Major Abajee Sindh to advance to Suntoo Culloo Muccadam the sum of 60 rupees for the payment of expenses on account of Government mules, he (Lieut. Greenlaw) having in reality given this order to enable the said Suntoo Culloo to lend him a part thereof for his own private use.

Second Charge.—For conduct unbecoming an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at the place and time mentioned in the second instance of the first charge, borrowed the sum of 59 rupees from Suntoo Culloo Muccadam, of commissariat muleteers, a person serving under his (Lieut. Greenlaw's) orders; the above being in breach of the Articles of War.

Finding.

The Court finds that the prisoner, Lieut. Robert William Welsh Greenlaw, is—Guilty of the first charge in the first instance.

Guilty of the first charge in the second instance.

Guilty of the second charge.

Sentence.

The Court sentences the prisoner Lieut. R. W. W. Greenlaw to be cashiered.

(Signed)

A. C. HAWKINS, Lieut. Colonel R.A. and Colonel, President.

Ahmedabad, Oct. 5, 1869.

It appears to the Commander-in-Chief in India that the facts of the first instance of the first charge are sufficiently proved; but, according to a late ruling of the Right Hon. the Judge Advocate-General in a similar case, the omission of any averment that the misappropriation was dishonest or fraudulent causes the first instance to be an insufficient charge of scandalous conduct.

His Excellency is advised that the finding of the Court on the second instance of the charge is borne out by the evidence, and, further, that this instance alleges a false pretence, and discloses dishonest conduct. This being so, it must be held that the charge of scandalous conduct is sustained in this instance.

The second charge is proved.

Accordingly, the finding on the first instance of the first charge is not confirmed.

The finding on the second instance of the first charge is confirmed.

The finding on the second charge is confirmed.

The sentence is confirmed. (Signed)

W. R. MANSFIELD, General, Commander-in-Chief in India.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

Fort William, Oct. 30.—No. 2,269A.—The gov. gen. in Council has under consideration a revision of the present rules regarding acting allowances of officers in civil employ. As the revised rules will have to be considered in each department of the Government of India, a little delay will necessarily take place in their promulgation. Meanwhile, H.E. in Council has determined that wherever under present rules acting allowances are calculated at the rate of 30 per cent. on Rs. 2,000 of the salary of the office and 20 per cent. on the remainder, or, as in the case of the majority of uncovenanted officers, at 20 per cent. on Rs. 2,000 and 10 per cent. on the remainder, a uniform rate of 20 per cent. shall be substituted in the case of all acting appointments made on or after the 1st November, 1869.

In other respects the rules for acting allowances will remain unaltered until further orders.

SCRIPTURE READING ROOMS.

No. 768.—The following rules with regard to Scripture Reading Rooms in military cantonments, which have been approved by the Government of India, are published for general information:—

1. The rooms shall be available to soldiers of all denominations of the Christian religion, wholly apart from any sectarian bias or character.

2. They shall be placed under the immediate charge of the commanding officer of the regiment in whose lines the rooms are situated, subject to the control of the officer commanding the station, more especially in cases where more corps than one attend the rooms in question.

3. The chaplain of the station and the other ministers of religion in religious charge of, or associated with, the troops shall be freely consulted by officers in all matters connected with the good order, opening, attendance, &c., &c., in these rooms.

4. The rooms shall be made available, according to the desire of the soldiers, for the delivery of lectures and addresses by persons of the various denominations of the Christian religion, and for special meetings, the hours being fixed by the commanding officer.

5. Facilities shall be afforded to the soldiers of the different persuasions to meet specially for the purposes of prayer, and during such meetings arrangements shall be made to ensure to them the exclusive possession of the rooms.

6. Excepting when the rooms are thus appropriated to any special class, it is desirable that they shall be available to all well-disposed soldiers for the purposes of reading and of prayer. At such times it will probably be found expedient to prescribe that a strict silence shall be maintained; but in this and other minor matters it will be proper to consult the wishes of the men themselves.

7. If it is found that unanimity and good will do not prevail consequent on opening the rooms to all, without distinction of denomination, separate hours must be apportioned to the different persuasions.

SIR BARTLE FRERE'S PLAN FOR THE PACIFICATION OF NEW ZEALAND.

INDIA OFFICE, Nov. 8, 1869.

We received last week particulars of the military reductions contemplated by the Government of India. They involve the immediate discontinuance of active employment to a great number of European officers and men, all in the prime of life and efficiency, and also the reduction of a great number of efficient native officers and soldiers. Many of these officers and men have been specially trained in frontier service against semi-barbarous and active enemies in very difficult country. I offer here no opinion as to the wisdom of any reduction. I merely regard it for the moment as inevitable. At the same time we have in the newspapers an admirable letter from Lord Carnarvon, pointing out that England is risking a multitude of lives of innocent people, the ruin of a flourishing colony, permanent antagonism of two races of British subjects, and great loss of national credit and honour, for want of a few thousand men who will serve as soldiers for a few years in New Zealand. India in fact wants to dispense with exactly what New Zealand wants to acquire. Would it not be possible to arrange so that both parties should attain their object? All that seems requisite is that both parties should act in concert.

I. Let India say to the officers and soldiers she does not require: “Officers and soldiers are wanted for service in New Zealand. The Government of India desire now to dispense with the immediate services of officers and men of H.M. English and Indian armies, as shown in the Government notification of the , and up to that number offers the following terms to all who are willing to engage with the British Government to serve in New Zealand for periods of (say two, three, five, or more) years:—

1. A free passage to New Zealand. 2. Indian pay and allowances at the rates drawn last month by each man during voyage, and for three months after landing in New Zealand. 3. Service under these engagements to count as service in India for pension, &c., to all entitled to it by their existing engagements with the British or Indian Governments. 4. Officers or men accepting service in New Zealand on these conditions will not be entitled to any return passage from New Zealand, to India or England, at the expense of the Indian Government.

II. The British Government should engage:—

1. To make the agreements for service in New Zealand in conjunction with the Indian and New Zealand Governments. 2. To pay officers and men received from the Indian Government from the expiration of the three months' term after landing, debiting the amount as a loan to New Zealand. 3. To appoint, in conjunction with the New Zealand Government, a military dictator with full military and civil authority under commission from the Crown, to settle the Northern Island.

III. The New Zealand Government should engage:—

1. To repay the loan advanced by the British Government, and to respect the engagements made with officers and men. 2. To offer, free or at reduced rates, grants of land, in proportions varying according to rank, to all officers and men, natives of India or China as well as Europeans, who, after completing not less than two years' service under these engagements, may take their discharge from her Majesty's service, and agree to settle in New Zealand.

By some such plan the Government of India would get rid of the burden of officers and men it does not need in less than six months, and more completely than by any other plan, consistent with the contentment of the men and observance of existing engagements. The British Government would effect reductions in a manner which would secure a colony, and ultimately settle a considerable number of officers and men in positions where they would be a source of strength to the colony and empire in time to come, and this without ultimate cost to the British taxpayer. New Zealand would settle the Northern Island, and render it a peaceable division of a great dominion; and having reduced the turbulent natives to obedience instead of exterminating them (the inevitable alternative), might not only secure them as a contented and loyal position of the population in future, but add to them a number of valuable English colonists, with possibly a sprinkling of natives of India, China, and Polynesia. If peace and good order were restored to the Northern Island its land and other resources would, under a reasonably good government, speedily repay any outlay really necessary to effect the pacification. But permanent pacification and good government must be preceded by a clear enforcement of somebody's supremacy; and unless that supremacy is Queen Victoria's, it must, in the long run, be that of some other power of European origin, and will be enforced by a process of gradual filibustering, alternate massacre of whites and Maories, and ultimate extermination of the latter. Under Queen Victoria's supremacy permanent pacification and good government are not only compatible with, but will be promoted by, a due regard for native rights, and by everything which can conduce to the permanent benefit of the native population. What is now required is such a moderated estimate of native rights and possibilities as may be consistent with the fact that if things are left alone to drift uncontrolled, the speedy extermination of the whole race, with all their rights and capabilities, is, humanly speaking, inevitable. I believe a military dictator to be essential to the perfect success of any such scheme, because absolute authority for a time, and responsibility—ultimately to the Crown and the British nation, but during the progress of events only to God and his own conscience—is essential. I know that her Majesty possesses many such officers, capable, with a moderate allowance of men and money, of reducing to obedience the whole Northern Island, and of giving reasonable security of life and property to all who live there; officers who may be safely entrusted with the necessary amount of authority, and who, her Majesty may be assured, will exercise it with every regard for the lives, property and rights of the poorest of her subjects, native as well as European. Such a dictator will not be found among men who rely habitually on an Algerine policy of reprisals and village burning, of setting tribe against tribe, and of driving out the devil of war by the Beelzebub of bribery and bad faith. But there are many accomplished soldiers who have served in India and China, and there learnt the art of civilising barbarous races in place of destroying them—an art in which Englishmen employed in India, from the days of Cleveland to our own, have rarely been deficient. The officer employed should have ample means given him to make roads and to secure communications, as well as to fight. A corps or two of Indian and Chinese pioneers, trained to work as well as to defend themselves, would do much in this way. Every road, wisely planned and properly made, ought to pay for itself by the land it would open out.

H. B. E. FRERE.

Miscellaneous.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY.—At the meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, on Friday, a dividend was declared of 3 per cent. for the half-year, free of income-tax. The chairman, Mr. Allan, remarked that, although the rate of freight has lately been considerably below that which prevailed some time since, yet the increase in the quantity of goods carried enables the company to show very satisfactory results.

THE REDUCTIONS.—We believe that it has been settled that the reduction necessary in the infantry at the commencement of the financial year will be effected by the reduction of two companies in each battalion throughout the service.—It gives us great pleasure to hear that it is the intention to place no officers on half-pay in consequence of the reductions necessary in the army, unless such a step cannot possibly be avoided.—Army and Navy Gazette.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—A communication forwarded to the Stock Exchange on Saturday by the managing director of the East Indian Railway Company, states as follows:—"I beg to inform you that it is the intention of the board, at the ensuing half-yearly meeting, which will be held during the present month, to recommend, in addition to the usual guaranteed interest, the payment of a dividend on the stock and share capital of the company at the rate of five shillings per cent., the latter free of income-tax."

TELEGRAPH EXTENSION IN THE EAST.—Captain R. B. Oldfield, of the Royal Navy, an experienced officer, has been granted leave by the Admiralty, and has proceeded on behalf of the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company to Siam and the Malay Peninsula for the purpose of exploring certain routes by which that company proposes to establish a telegraph communication from Burmah, the Tenasserim Provinces, and Siam with Penang, so as to throw the traffic upon the British Indian Extension Company's Cable, which will be laid next year between the Straits of Malacca and Ceylon.

BOMBAY GAS COMPANY.—The report of the Bombay Gas Company (Limited), to be presented on the 16th December, for the half-year ended 30th June, states that there has been a steady, if not rapid, increase in the consumption of gas, while the cost of production has been diminished. The accounts show a net profit of £5,534, which, after appropriating £650 to the depreciation fund, will admit of an interim dividend of 2½ per cent. for the half-year, as contrasted with 1 2-3rds per cent. for the corresponding period last year.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—A notable fact in connection with the Egyptian Canal occurred on Thursday, Dec. 2. The Blue Cross, a vessel of 1,000 tons burden, cleared in London for Calcutta, via Suez. She draws only 17 feet of water, has been built expressly for the trade, and is the property of Messrs. T. and W. Smith, of Crosby-square. Captain Kennedy, her commander, has no doubt of the complete success of the venture, and hopes to be back in London on the 1st of April. The saving of time on the double voyage will be about five months. The toll for each passage through the Canal will be £560, but at least double that amount will be saved in coal, seamen's wages, rations, &c.

DEPOTS OF INDIAN TROOPS.—From rumours current at Chatham there would appear to be every probability that the commencement of the ensuing financial year will see the whole of the depot battalions abolished, the Government, it would appear, intending to form the whole of the Indian depots into one battalion, to be quartered either at Portsmouth or Chatham. On the reduction of the depot battalions the strength of the depots will be each reduced from two to one company. It is also rumoured that upwards of fifty field officers are to be placed on half-pay, a certain number being taken from the second battalions of regiments to be ultimately decided upon. With regard to the Indian regiments considerable reductions will, it is understood, be made, the staff of some seventeen regiments returning home, leaving the skeleton companies behind. Should the whole of the colonial regiments return home the depots will in all probability be very greatly augmented.

ALBERT ASSURANCE COMPANY.—The official liquidators of the Albert Life Assurance Company desire it to be stated that the arrangement with the Mutual Life Assurance Society does not extend to the holders of policies in India. An arrangement of a similar character to that effected with the Mutual is, however, in course of negotiation with another old-established office in the interest of the policy-holders resident in India, which the liquidators hope they will soon be in a position to communicate to them. Vice-Chancellor James, upon the application of the official liquidators, has extended the time within which the policy-holders of the Albert Life Assurance Company who may have paid their premiums since the 14th of August last may elect to have such premiums returned to them in full from the 1st of January to the 30th of March next.

A NEW TELEGRAPH LINE TO CHINA.—The prospectus was issued on Friday afternoon of an undertaking which is full of importance to our great commercial interests in the East. The China Submarine Telegraph Company (Limited) proposes to extend to China the great system of submarine electric telegraphs which will shortly reach, through the medium of the British Indian and British Indian Extension Companies, to the Straits of Malacca. At that point the China Submarine Telegraph Company will take up the system, and by means of a cable about 1,640 miles in length, will carry the communication to Hong Kong. The second section, about 1,000 miles in length, is intended to be laid from Hong Kong to Shanghai, touching at one or more of the other Treaty Ports. An ultimate extension to Japan is contemplated. Meanwhile it is explained that "a contract has been entered into, bearing date the 10th December, 1869, between this company and the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company (Limited), for the manufacture and laying by the latter of the cable from the Straits of Malacca to Hong Kong, for the sum of £508,000, of which £100,000 in fully paid-up shares will be reserved until this company's engineer has certified that the line has been successfully laid, and is in good working order. Upon this certificate £50,000 will be paid, and the remaining £50,000 will be retained until the line has continued in working order for thirty days." The cable is to be shipped from England in 1870, and is to be completely laid by June in the following year. The board is influentially composed, and includes the chairmen of all the companies in connection with which this undertaking will have to work.

INDIAN TRAMWAY COMPANY.—The directors of this company have issued their half-yearly report. In accordance with the resolutions of the meeting of 18th October last, it has been decided, with the approval and sanction of his Grace the Secretary of State for India, that the Carnatic Railway Company should be incorporated to take over the Indian Tramway Company's line from Arcot Junction to Conjeeveram, and carry out the contract for the extension to Cuddalore, under a guarantee of 5 per cent. upon the capital. The provisional contract with the Pondicherry Government will be transferred to the Pondicherry Railway Company, which has been formed for the purpose, with a view to securing to the present Tramway Company's shareholders, so far as they may desire to avail themselves of it, the prospective benefit of this provisional contract. The company's line has continued to be worked with efficiency and economy; no casualties of any sort have occurred. The gross earnings of the year, from July 1, 1868, to June 30, 1869, have been £4,770. 5s. 10d.; disbursements, £4,318. 14s. 10d. Four new composite carriages, and four third class, have been added to the rolling stock. The line is reported by the resident engineer, Mr. Holloway, in perfect order and condition. An extraordinary general meeting of the Indian Tramway Company (Limited) will be held at the office of the company, 62 Moorgate-street, London, E.C., on the 20th day of December, 1869, at two o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of considering resolutions for the voluntary winding up of the company, for the appointment of liquidators, and authorising the liquidators to transfer the whole of the business and property of the company which shall remain after discharging existing liabilities and expenses of liquidation (except only the benefit of the company's provisional contract with the French Government for making a line from Pondicherry) to a new company (which was registered on the 11th day of December, 1869, under the name of the "Carnatic Railway Company, Limited," with a nominal capital of £800,000, divided into 40,000 shares of £20 each), under certain conditions to be laid before the meeting. It is also proposed to authorise the liquidators or liquidator to transfer the benefit of the provisional contract with the French Government for making a line from Pondicherry to a new company, under the name of the Pondicherry Railway Company (Limited), with a capital of £150,000, in 30,000 shares of £5 each, the old company being allowed first right of subscribing for shares of the new company.

RE THE EUROPEAN BANK (LIMITED)—CLAIM OF THE ORIENTAL COMMERCIAL BANK (LIMITED); SAME, CLAIM OF THE EASTERN COMMERCIAL BANK (LIMITED).—This was an adjourned summons on the above claims, the main question arising as to four bills drawn in April, 1866, by Mr. Constantinido, agent of the European Bank at Galatz, and accepted by the bank in London at three months, and endorsed to one Vlasto at Galatz and remitted to the English firm of Melas and Co. for value. While held by Melas and Co. the European Bank failed, and Melas and Co. took up the draughts, and, holding them with protest, sold them on the 21st and 28th of March, 1867, to Mr. Demetrio Pappa, who was the managing director of the Eastern Commercial Company (Limited), having previously been manager of the Oriental Commercial Bank. The Eastern Commercial Company was duly incorporated on the 1st April, 1867, and two days after he sold to them eight bills for £800 (being for £1,000), and it was now contended that the money with which the bills were purchased was the money of the Oriental Commercial Bank, to whom therefore those bills now belonged. Both the European and the Oriental Commercial Banks were in liquidation, and on the question of the purchase of these bills there was a great deal of evidence. Mr. Pappa having been examined, and sworn that it was his own money. The broad case was that a Mr. George John Pappa, a relative of Mr. Demetrios Pappa, went to the East and collected large sums for the Oriental Commercial Bank, took in an account on his return to the liquidator, which not being accepted, he amended it, and increased the debit to the bank and purported to discharge himself of that debit by handing to the liquidator certain bills, the bills in question being purchased, as it was alleged, by Mr. Demetrio Pappa with money received by George John Pappa on account of the Oriental Commercial Bank, but handed over by the latter to the former on his return to England, the bills being now in the hands of the Eastern Commercial Bank, who also claimed them. The Vice Chancellor referred to the details of the case, and said that it was a most painful case, as well as an extraordinary one, between the holders of bills for value and parties charging fraud, robbery, and perjury; for, however the world's themselves might be avoided, the case, if proved, came to that. The European Bank being capable of paying 20s. in the pound, the bills were probably bought in that expectation. The whole thing was most extraordinary and scarcely credible, for here was a company, not two days after registration, purchasing dishonoured bills. Such charges as were here made could only be allowed upon the most distinct and perfect evidence, but here, although the case was fraught with suspicion, his Honour could not say that the evidence was such as to prove the charges made. It was an error not to let the matter drop, it having been two years ago considered by the liquidator not beneficial to the company that any proceedings should be taken. The result was that the summons of the Oriental Commercial Bank must be dismissed without prejudice to any further proceedings, and that of the Eastern Commercial sustained. The Oriental Commercial Bank must pay all the costs occasioned by their opposition; there must be two orders. The liquidator must have his costs out of the estate.

A GOLD CURRENCY FOR INDIA.—On Friday evening an Indian Conference was held at the Society of Arts for the purpose of hearing a paper read by Mr. A. Cassels on the subject of "A Gold Currency for India." The chair was taken by Mr. W. S. Fitzgerald. Mr. Cassels started with the principle that the silver currency of India was daily becoming more and more inadequate in consequence of the rapid extension of the trade of the country. The various Chambers of Commerce in India, as well as the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, had memorialised for a gold currency, and a Commission, presided over by Sir W. Mansfield, had reported in its favour. In consequence of that report, the gold sovereign was declared to be a legal tender for taxes, but the Government price of exchange being lower than the bazaars, very little relief was given by that expedient. The silver currency of India was a great inconvenience in consequence of its bulk. No native gentleman ever carried money about him, and the movement of Government treasure had kept thirty thousand native troops constantly employed. Another consequence of this silver currency was that India was gradually absorbing the silver of the world. One year's failure of the cotton crop in America would cause a silver dearth all over Europe. A coinage of mohurs and half-mohurs at an equivalent value of fifteen and seven and a-half rupees respectively had been suggested; but the idea was to introduce an Indian sovereign and half sovereign, which would circulate as freely in England as in India. Mr. F. Hendricks suggested a gold currency for India in connection with an international coinage. He contended that any gold coinage for India must be a multiple of the rupee and not a sovereign, which had a practical value beyond ten rupees. He denied that there was an excess of silver coinage in India. It was true that 250 millions had been coined since 1800, but not 40 per cent. of that sum remained now in circulation. When the sicca rupee was received into the company's rupee, under the Act of 1835, the amount brought in was five crores less than the lowest anticipatory estimate. An international coinage, based on the scheme for the alteration of the sovereign suggested by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, would, perhaps, meet the necessity, and the loss incurred would be inconsiderable. Mr. Hamilton said that the first point to ascertain was the equivalent value of gold and silver, and the best way to do that would be to go to the markets which were common to both. In England the silver shilling was merely a token, a pound's worth being only nineteen shillings in sterling value. He believed that an Indian sovereign, if adopted, must be of the value of 107 rupees. An import value of 5s. an ounce for silver, and a value of 10½ rupees for the sovereign, when issued in India would, he believed, be the proper basis upon which to establish a gold currency in the latter country. Mr. Hyde Clarke said that when contemplating a change in currency we should not confine ourselves merely to calculating the value of the bullion. The first step in establishing a gold coinage in India should be to accommodate it as much as possible to the relations of India with England and Australia, and not to study France and the other decimal countries, with which India had few transactions. His opinion was that with what was called the international system, the bullion markets of the world would be subject to greater vicissitudes than at present. He strongly objected to the introduction of the metric system of coinage into India, although he knew that the proximate introduction of a gold coinage into that country was inevitable. Colonel Smyth advocated a gold coinage for India on the basis of 10 rupees for the sovereign. The discussion concluded with the usual vote of thanks.

CHLORODYNE

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—
Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.
Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.
As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

THE READY REMEDY.—When winter sets in with all its attendants of cold, wet, fog, and other inclemencies, the human constitution undergoes many trials, from some of which disease will spring with more or less certainty, unless the blood, repelled from the surface of the body, finds organs capable of receiving it, and secretions adapted to consume it. This preservative power is admirably displayed by proper doses of Holloway's Pills, which relieve the liver, kidneys, and bowels from undue congestion by immediately augmenting their secretions, and by converting, through those natural channels, any surplus quantity of blood from a situation where its continued presence must be mischievous, even if it fall short of creating actual disease.

WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINIMENT OF ARNICA.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CONTUSIONS, WEAKNESS of the JOINTS, CHILBLAINS, &c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

Composed of the Extracts of DANDELION, TURKEY RHUBARB, and JAMAICA GINGER.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPARILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

A NOTHER CURE OF CONSUMPTION
By Dr. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.

Miss Boyd writes to Messrs. Bell and Co., 6, Cross Street, Greenock, Nov. 18, 1869:—

"My parents and seven of our family have died of consumption. My brother was declared to be in the last stage of consumption, and pronounced incurable by three medical men; but by the use of Dr. Locock's Wafers he is completely restored to health."

DR. LOCOCK'S WAFERS rapidly cure ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS, and all DISORDERS of the BREATH and LUNGS.

By all Druggists, 1s. 1d. and 2s. 6d. per box.
Beware of counterfeits.

AN ENTIRELY NEW METHOD OF
FIXING ARTIFICIAL TEETH, without springs or wires, or any painful operation, more natural and durable than any introduced, giving a facility in mastication and speech hitherto unattained. To be had only of Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, &c., 61, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from Eleven till Five.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—

JUDGED BY THE IMMENSE DEMAND, this UNIVERSAL REMEDY now stands the first in public favour and confidence; this result has been acquired by the test of fifty years' experience. These Lozenges may be found on sale in every British colony. For coughs, asthma, and all affections of the throat and chest, they are the most agreeable and efficacious remedy.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 28, 1869.

Dear Sir.—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

W. B. G.,

Apothecary H.M. Indian Medical Service.

To Mr. Thomas Keating.

Prepared and sold in bottles of various sizes.

KEATING'S CHILDREN'S WORM TABLET.—A PURELY VEGETABLE SWEETMEAT, both in appearance and taste, furnishing a most agreeable method of administering a well-known remedy for INTESINAL or THREAD WORMS.

It is a perfectly safe and mild preparation, and is especially adapted for Children and Adults.

TESTIMONIAL FROM THE REV. J. S. TOFT.

Frankton.

"My dear Sir.—I am happy to inform you that the Worm Tablets you kindly sent me have, with the blessing of God, perfectly cured my boy. I esteem it, therefore, an act of pure justice and candour that I should acquaint you with the happy result. You are at liberty to make this statement public for the benefit of others who may be similarly afflicted.—With feelings of gratitude, I remain, yours truly,
"JOHN S. TOFT."
"To Mr. Keating."

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

This Company has been established to extend to the Empire of China the great system of Submarine Electric Telegraphs between England and the East.

The first section will consist of a Cable about 1,640 miles in length, to be laid from a station of the British Indian Extension Telegraph Company, in the Straits of Malacca, to Hong Kong.

It is proposed to establish an intermediate station at Saigon (Cochin China), upon satisfactory arrangements being concluded with the French Government.

The second section, about 1,000 miles in length, is intended to be laid from Hong Kong to Shanghai, touching at one or more of the other Treaty Ports.

A contract has been entered into, bearing date the 10th December, 1869 between this Company and the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company (Limited), for the manufacture and laying by the latter of the Cable from the Straits of Malacca to Hong Kong for the sum of £508,000, of which £100,000 in fully paid-up shares will be reserved until this Company's engineer has certified that the line has been successfully laid and is in good working order. Upon this certificate £50,000 will be paid, and the remaining £50,000 will be retained until the line has continued in working order for thirty days.

The Cable is to be shipped from England in 1870, and is to be completely laid by June in the following year.

The contract provides for the payment by the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company of interest at the rate of £5 per cent per annum upon the paid-up capital, payable half-yearly, until the date fixed by the contract for the opening of the line.

It is further agreed with the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company that the second section of the Company's Cables shall be made and laid for £250,000, and be commenced when required by this Company. The capital for this section is proposed to be raised by a second issue of shares, with the sanction of a general meeting.

The Cable now to be laid is of similar type to that of the British Indian Extension Telegraph Company, but will be considerably heavier, on account of the lesser depth of water in which it is to be submerged.

The Company have it in view to continue their lines to Japan.

Traffic arrangements have been entered into with the Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta; the Anglo-Mediterranean, the British Indian Submarine, and British Indian Extension Telegraph Companies, by which these companies have agreed to give an ample rebate upon their through rate on all messages forwarded over their Cables from or to China.

It appears from recent published statistics that the English and foreign firms in Hong Kong and the Treaty Ports number 483. The Chinese firms dealing with foreigners in Hong Kong alone are 486. The foreign ships cleared and entered at Chinese ports in 1868 numbered 14,075, with an aggregate tonnage of 6,418,000 tons. The total value of the imports and exports for Hong Kong and the Treaty Ports in 1868 amounted, according to the Customs returns, to £68,000,000. From these statistics, which are exclusive of the very important local trade it cannot be doubted that there will be a well in through messages to Europe and America, as in messages between China and India, the Straits and the Eastern Archipelago, a very extensive telegraphic business ensuring large dividends to the Shareholders. It is considered premature to fix this Company's tariff at present, but it will be regulated with a view to secure the largest possible amount of traffic.

Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association, and of the contract with the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, can be seen at the offices of the solicitors of the Company, Messrs. Bischoff, Bompas, and Bischoff, 4, Great Winchester street-buildings, E.C., or at the offices of the Company.

Applications for shares on the accompanying form should be left at the Company's bankers. The deposit will be returned if no allotment is made, and if an allotment is made, will be applied on account of the amount payable on the shares allotted.

The deposits and any subsequent payments will be liable to forfeiture if the instalments on the shares are not duly met.

The subscription list will close on Wednesday, the 15th, for London, and at twelve o'clock on Thursday for the country.

The following is a copy of the Memorandum of Association:—

1. The name of the Company is "The China Submarine Telegraph Company Limited."

2. The registered office of the Company is to be in England.

3. The objects for which the Company is established are:—
The contracting for, constructing, acquiring, leasing, maintaining, dealing with and working lines of Telegraph between the Straits of Malacca or the Malay Peninsula and China and Japan, and any places or points adjacent thereto or forming or intended to form part or parts of any telegraphic route or routes between those places, or any of them, and (as and when authorised by extraordinary meeting of the members) branches from and extensions of any of those lines to such countries or places as the Company think fit; the establishment of telegraph stations, and, generally, carrying on the business of a telegraph company; the applying for, acquiring, selling, leasing, using, and disposing of such lands, telegraph lines, vessels, concessions, leases, privileges, licences, and letters patent, and any shares or interest therein respectively, as may be useful or desirable for the purposes aforesaid, or any of them; the doing of all or any of those matters or things in conjunction with any other company or person; the registration or constitution of the Company abroad as a Société Anonyme or otherwise; the subscribing for and acquiring shares of, or amalgamating with and sharing in the business or undertakings of any other telegraph company or companies, and the making and carrying into effect of working traffic and other agreements with Governments, railway, postal, steamboat, telegraph, and other companies and authorities, and the doing of all such other things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above objects.

4. The liability of the members is limited.

5. The capital of the Company is £525,000, in 52,500 shares of £10 each.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, November 27; Agra and Calcutta, November 23; Madras, November 22.

The motion for a first reading of the new Income-tax Bill was brought before the Council on Friday, November 19, by Sir R. Temple, in a speech as long as any of Mr. Gladstone's, and as jaunty as if Lord Palmerston or Mr. Layard had been the speaker. For any new light his statement threw on the position, he might as well have held his tongue. He pleaded guilty to over-sanguine estimates, and promised never to be so naughty again. But who would have thought last March, he asked, that things would turn out so very contrary? Had not the Customs' revenue been steadily rising year by year, and was it likely that opium would play us all the scurvy trick it has just been playing? As for the short yield on the Income-tax, think of all the papers that had to be waded through, and the utter darkness involving the whole question. The interest on the new loan would not, thought Sir Richard, have to be accounted for till next year at soonest. Glancing thence at other small items, he dismissed them one after another with easy acknowledgments or good-humoured explanations. His sanguine tendencies were unconsciously illustrated in his reference to the land-revenue of the North-West Provinces. The Local Government had reckoned it at £4,000,000 only, or £3,000 above the actual outturn. Rain had meanwhile fallen however, and the Finance Minister at once added £100,000 to the estimate.

EVEN Sir Richard however keeps his whipping-boy. Feeling himself unequal to the part of Atlas, or from a natural yearning for companionship, he uttered sharp sayings against the absent Mr. Bullen, who had proved his Mephistopheles in the matter of opium and customs. It was not very handsome treatment of a useful friend, especially as Sir Richard went on to argue that after all, barring "misfortunes" and "defects of system," his entire estimates had been out through actual error on his own part by no more than £100,000 in a total of a hundred millions.

COLONEL STRACHEY in his turn explained how little the Public Works Department was answerable for its own outlay. The Department had no wish to "build palatial barracks, splendid hospitals, or vast court-houses." It was merely an agency for supplying the "extravagances" of the Government at large; and the Government can always cut down those supplies as much as it pleases, as indeed it has just been doing. The controlling officers in the Department might have been somewhat lax in their methods of disbursement, but that was the natural result of lax methods employed by the Government in the making and promising of additional grants. All this may be true, but somehow the Indian public have an incurable disbelief in the whole system of public works as lately administered. The new division in the duties of the Department between those who supervise the works and those who look after the accounts should do more than anything else to allay that feeling.

MR. JOHN STRACHEY, who has been doing the absent Sir Richard's work, took a cheerful view of the financial prospect, while admitting the miscarriages of the past, which he ascribed to the inherent faultiness of the organisation in the Indian Finance Department. He declared that the last six months had more than ever convinced him of India's perfect stability on the financial side. So "prosperous and magnificent" are her "resources," that even under the revised estimates, in a year of threatened scarcity and partial famine, her total income from Land, Excise, Customs, Stamps, &c., will be half a million more than last year, two millions more than in 1864, and two and a-half more than in 1862. The causes of recent deficits he held to be easily removable, and hoped that Sir Richard would set himself to remove them with renewed vigour.

LORD MAYO's speech calls for little remark. He blamed no one in particular for the deficits of past years, but hoped that in future the needful data, which were always trustworthy when they did come, would be got in earlier from all quarters, so as to prevent mistakes of reckoning. The India Council can help him in this matter if it will. But the great blot of the present system—its over-centralisation—is left untouched except by Mr. John Strachey, who urges the adoption of "some plan for giving the local Governments some real incentives to economy." They must, he argues, have more direct responsibility, that is more power to spend on local improvements. This object can, he thinks, be attained "without the sacrifice of one iota of the authority of the Supreme Government." To which we would add, that until the local Governments have full power given them to raise revenue in their own way for their own wants, true financial economy is impossible.

THE Income-tax and Salt-tax Bills were to be passed on Friday, November 26. The raising of the Salt-tax in Madras and Bombay to two rupees a maund is regarded as a long step towards equalising the duty throughout India and doing away with the inland customs line.

An outbreak of convicts in the Central Jail of Rangoon took place on the 15th November. Eight desperate fellows suddenly rose on their guards, knocked two of them down, seized some loaded muskets, frightened away the police on duty, and shot Dr. Maingay, the superintendent, dead. One brave jailor seems to have checked their progress by calling on the Europeans in jail to help him. Two of the ruffians were shot dead and the rest finally captured. Want of blue European supervision seems in part to account for the frequency of these risings in Burman jails.

ONE conspicuous virtue of the Madras Sepoy has always been his callousness to Hindu traditions touching what he should eat, drink, and avoid. Unlike his comrades in the Bengal and Bombay armies, he will eat most kinds of animal food, and drink on the least encouragement even canteen rum—accomplishments of incalculable worth during a campaign. These facts however seem still to need impressing on the British mind, for a "Madrassee" writes in Tuesday's Times to confirm that journal's exposure of the vulgar error that Bombay Sepoys are less caste-ridden than those of Bengal and Madras. They are less so perhaps than the Bengal Sepoys, for according to "Madrassee" they would eat the flesh of rams. They turned however with stony firmness against all attempts to coax them into eating ewes. So too the Bombay Coolies would never touch a sheepskin or lift a keg of salt meat. The stomachs of the Madras Sepoys and the hands of Madras dooly-bearers were far more accommodating, as anyone acquainted with the habits of either class in cantonments would have expected as a matter of course.

ENGLISH ideas of the boundless fertility of Indian soil will be rudely shocked by the statements contained in a recent number of the Indian Economist. What will people say for instance to the fact recorded by Mr. Grant in his Settlement Report of Nursingpore, in the Central Provinces, that the "average wheat produce of the Nerbudda Valley is six maunds per acre, where the Doab produces at least eighteen?" In plainer English that means the difference between 500 lbs. and about 1,500 lbs. Mr. Grant's inquiries in the former case were carefully and thoroughly pursued. The average yield of wheat in England is said to be twenty-seven bushels, or 1,620 lbs. an acre. Other witnesses confirm the truth of Mr. Grant's estimates with regard to the "rich black soil" of the Central Provinces. Once upon a time the soil in question better deserved its name, yielding in 1824 from fifteen to twenty fold instead of only four. Careless tillage, scorning all rotation of crops and the use of manure, is gradually exhausting the soil. Even in the North-West Provinces the average yield per acre from the best irrigated land seems to be less than the average yield on all kinds of English soil, while the dry wheat lands yield barely half the produce of our English fields. Can nothing be done to arrest the growing evil? Is there no Indian Liebig to warn his countrymen against the suicidal folly of their farming ways?

THE Dispensaries in the Punjab are steadily advancing in numbers and general popularity. They rose from 55 in 1865 to 82 in 1867. The number of patients treated was 439,785 in the latter against 342,277 in the former year. In 1865 more than two-thirds of the cost was defrayed out of the Imperial revenues. In 1867 for every six rupees paid from that source, two were obtained from private subscriptions and six from the Local Funds. In due time it is hoped that periodical charity will be superseded by an endowment fund for each dispensary. Ten dispensaries have now been established within easy reach of the border tribes, thousands of whom come in from Swat, Bonair, Bajaur, Badakshan, and even Kabul, to be cured and sometimes fed at the public expense. Some of them will come scores of miles to get medicines for a sick comrade, and their trust in the Feringhi methods is wonderful to see. It was the kind treatment received by some Yarkandi pilgrims at Ladakh that brought the first kafilah of Central Asian merchants into British territory in 1867. The Punjab Dispensaries have so nearly outgrown the supply of native doctors available, that twenty-nine youths are now qualifying themselves in the Lahore Medical School, at the cost of the local funds, for the posts of Native Doctor and Sub-Assistant Surgeon. Some even of the native "Hakims" have been induced to distribute simple European medicines among their neighbours, and to bring up their sons as apprentices in dispensaries, or as Native Doctors in the Lahore School.

THE death-rate of the British troops in Upper India for 1868 fell to the low average—for India—of twenty and a trifle over per thousand; exactly the same rate as that of 1866, the healthiest year then recorded. The next lowest average was 21.10 in 1864. Both these years were free from cholera, which loaded the death-rate for 1867, and will be found to have loaded it for the present year. On an average of the last three recorded years, liver disease accounts for seventeen out of every hundred deaths, fever and heat apoplexy for about fourteen each, cholera for nine, "injuries and deaths out of hospital" for eight, consumption and dysentery for more than seven each. Nearly seven in every hundred died of heart disease—owing to tight collars?—four of respiratory complaints, and two of delirium tremens. Only one died of diarrhoea. Of every thousand men on the Bengal side 68 were daily sick—11.6 from venereal disease, 9.9 from fever; the proportions of sick from other complaints being much smaller. A careless observance of the rules for checking the spread of venereal disease has swollen the sick-list in several stations, while a strict enforcement of the rules has in others led to a marked decrease in the number of patients. Of 33,293 men in all, 2,113 are returned as intemperate, against 30,585 temperate, and 594 "abstainers." The proportion of invalided for the year was only 45.49 per thousand, of whom not more than a third were lost to the service. The good effect of working parties on the Hills has again been attested by the officers in command of them. The death-rate of the women fell to 31.60 per thousand, in spite of the unusual number that died in childbirth. Children, however, were not more fortunate than usual, 86.70 having died in every thousand, a great many from that most fatal of childish complaints in India—convulsions.

AMONG the native soldiers the mortality for the year was 16.19 per thousand, or, if we except the men away from their regiments, not more than 10.89 per thousand—a marked improvement on former years. At Delhi and Fort William alone did more Sepoys die in proportion than Europeans, the deaths at Fort William being respectively 42 and 24.50 per thousand, and those at Delhi 23 and 10. The comparative rarity of venereal disease among the Sepoys was also striking; the proportion at Dinapore being only 18 to 319 Europeans, and 30 to 396 at Allahabad.

WONDERFUL has been the decrease of mortality in Indian jails of late years. Between 1858 and 1868 the death-rate for Lower Bengal has fallen from 105 to 53 per thousand; that of Behar, Cawnpore, and Oudh, from 115 to 28; of Central India, from 81 to 27; of Agra, Meerut, and Rohilkund, from 87 to 17. Last year's death-rate in the Punjab was only 12½ per thousand. In all Upper India, including Bengal and the Central Provinces, the average mortality for 1868 was only 30¼ per thousand—a rate, if anything, below that of the outside population. What will Miss Carpenter say to results like these, which have occurred in spite of the fact that the number of daily prisoners has risen from 46,348 in 1860 to 55,287 last year? During the same period the number of daily sick has also fallen from 57 to 29. The decrease in sickness and death has continued steadily, checked of course for a time by disturbing events like the famine which in 1866 crowded the prisons in Bengal with diseased or famished wretches, and raised the death-rate to 62 per thousand.

WE recommend all who would compete for the Civil Service examinations of April next to apply at once for necessary forms to the Civil Service Commissioners in Cannon-row.

THE LAND-REVENUE OF INDIA.

NOT the least noticeable sign of the times in British India is the reaction which is everywhere taking place against the system of revenue settlement applied by Lord Cornwallis to Bengal Proper. A few years ago the cry of a permanent settlement of the land-revenue would still have evoked an approving answer from a large part of the Anglo-Indian public. It was pretty widely believed that a system which had secured us a loyal aristocracy of landowners in Bengal was the best thing possible for all parts of India. What was to prevent an immediate trial of it in the North-West Provinces? In the Central Provinces the land-revenue was settled by Sir R. Temple with special reference to the time when it would cease to form the main source of fiscal profit. Very few people seemed to doubt the absolute superiority of a system which converted the State's immemorial ownership of the land into a small quitrent, and which trusted to other sources of national productiveness in the future for the means of replenishing the public exchequer. What if in the course of time the land-revenues of India failed to cover more than a fraction of the entire outlay on public needs? Would not India by that time have developed new mines of taxable wealth by means of her growing trade with Europe and the accumulated profits realised from public works?

At last however a new light has begun to dawn on the Anglo-Indian mind. The few voices that were lately crying in the wilderness have not after all been crying in vain. In Bengal itself the Permanent Settlement is no longer quoted as the true model for imitation elsewhere. It is now pretty generally acknowledged to have done little of the good it was expected to do. A small body of revenue-farmers, mistaken for zemindars, has been enriched at the public cost, while numberless measures of internal improvement have been continually laid aside or hindered for want of fiscal means to carry them forward. The peasantry of Bengal are a byword for poverty and ignorance; the rural districts have only 500 miles of metalled road after a century of British rule; and the zemindars, who have gained everything from the Government and the ryot, resent the notion of paying the smallest local cess for the education of the millions whose labour fills their pockets. Had the land revenue, the one traditional mainstay of Indian Governments, been settled only for a term of years, and not for ever, its productiveness could have kept pace with the growing wants and wealth of the country, and the question of a school-cess would not still be deferred to an indefinite future. Thanks to the spread of sounder ideas, the North-West Provinces have just escaped from sharing the doom of their elder sister, Bengal. There is little reason to fear that, for the present at any rate, other parts of India will be less fortunate in this respect. It only remains for the advocates of a periodical settlement to imbue the rulers of India with an abiding conviction of the danger of sacrificing the one great source of Indian revenue to wild dreams, derived from English experience, touching the expansive power of the customs revenue, the income-tax, and other such duties, in the case of a country which abhors all official meddling with a man's private affairs, and is never likely to be a large consumer of English goods.

One of the ablest champions of the new doctrine, which is simply the oldest one revived, is the editor of the Indian Economist, whose well-timed letter to Lord Mayo is now before us. In this letter Mr. Knight earnestly appeals to the Viceroy to lend no ear to the well-meaning counsellors around him, who, like Sir R. Temple, would "limit the land-tax and trust to the increase of other taxes," even as they are doing now in their dealings with the lately discovered deficit, and in recent settlements of revenue in the North-West and Central Provinces. "Calcutta financiers, as a body, have shown for the last ten years an incessant disposition to tamper with the land revenue." Sir R. Temple himself, as Chief Commissioner for the Central Provinces, settled the land revenue there at six annas an acre, and what is the result? The balance-sheet of the province shows a yearly deficit of a million sterling. But Sir Richard looks for compensation to the growing consumption of dutiable articles. But according to Mr. Knight he will look in vain. He is challenged to name "a single article of consumption in the country, upon which there is the remotest hope of our ever obtaining a revenue of moment." Look at Bombay, "the port of entry for the imports of forty or fifty millions" of Lord Mayo's subjects. The chief import is Manchester piece goods, and the whole import duty for the year was only £766,000. In the Central Provinces, with crops valued at £25,000,000 a-year, the land-rent, which ought to be worth £8,000,000 a-year, has been fixed for thirty years at only £550,000. There too some 13,000 Malgozars have been turned into absolute owners, paying a charge of six annas an acre for land which 460,000 pauper tenantry will be charged at the rate of six rupees or so. Sir Richard's successor is even now proposing to settle the Belaspore district at three annas and a-half, or about fivepence an acre, although it is proverbially called "the land of plenty," has crops moderately reckoned at a million a-year, besides surplus produce worth about a quarter of a million, and carries on a flourishing trade with its neighbours. For such a district, with its 800,000 inhabitants tilling 13,000,000 acres of land, a yearly rent of £29,000 does sound absurdly small. Instead of three lakhs Mr. Knight would take twelve or fourteen for the next twenty years.

He also murmurs with apparent reason at the stationary character of the land revenue in Madras and the North-West Provinces, as compared with the great development of wealth observed in those provinces for many years back. The value of the harvests in the North-West being threefold what it was thirty years ago, and £20,000,000 having in that time been laid out on public works, Mr. Knight thinks that the new assessment ought to have been fixed at double the old rates, so as to bring in eight millions a-year instead of four. It certainly does seem strange that rents in the North-West should be no higher now than they were in Mr. Bird's time, while those in Bombay have been raised 50 per cent. It is absurd to suppose that if the land of the North-West could readily yield a revenue of four millions in 1847, it is not worth more than four millions in 1869. The same may fairly be asserted of Madras. Nor is Mr. Knight unreasonable in demanding for the State, that is for the whole commonwealth, a sufficient return for its own outlay on public improvements from those who are mainly benefited thereby. "You cannot settle the tax upon the land at the old rates," he argues, "while incurring enormous expenditure and liabilities for improving its value." To improve the land "out of the proceeds of an income-tax upon the cities, or the salt-tax upon the labouring masses" is a process involving "injustice and wrong." We have already made the cultivator a present of "the whole margin of profit which lies between our light assessments and the true rental of his fields." It is useless, in short, he maintains, to spend largely on public works if the Government declines to recoup itself by a fair enhancement of the land revenue. All attempts to eke out the requisite income by taxes on trade and poverty must end in disastrous failure. So at least thinks Mr. Knight, and the facts of the case are largely in his favour.

THE NEW BARRACKS.

IN drawing its own inferences from some remarks which appeared in our columns on the need of a sanitarium for the Peshawar garrison, an evening contemporary seems, by its own subsequent confession, to have gone somewhat astray. It is to no want of breathing-room that the yearly waste of life among our troops at Peshawar can fairly be ascribed. There is room enough and to spare in the overgrown buildings which a well-meaning Government has for some years past been rearing all over India, for the benefit of the British soldier, at a cost to the Indian taxpayer of something like a million a-year. We have no doubt that every English soldier in Peshawar gets his full allowance of 1,800 cubic feet of air, and has nothing to complain of in respect of appliances for his bodily comfort. The sanitary arrangements within and around the barracks may be all that medical theorists could desire. All that science, money, and discipline can do to make Peshawar cantonments healthy has in all likelihood been done or attempted. But how if the place itself be incurably unhealthy? What amount of money and skill can undo the natural consequences of a badly chosen site? Sir Sidney Cotton, who ought to know something of the station he commanded for so many years, has borne repeated witness to the folly of building fine barracks for a large body of troops in "one of the most unhealthy places in the world." Any reader of Indian newspapers must have noted for himself how regularly at certain seasons the same old tale of widespread sickness and frequent death speaks out in the latest news from Peshawar. Year after year, ever since the cantonments were first occupied, fever, dysentery, and cholera have in turn or all together played havoc among the troops there quartered. The place is not unhealthy throughout the year. It lies in a comparatively cool latitude. When the hot winds of March, April and May turn Agra and Delhi into living furnaces, Peshawar is neither sickly nor invariably scorching. But when the monsoon rains have soaked the surrounding rice-fields, and the September suns have ripened the malaria lurking in the green abundance for which the valley is renowned, Peshawar cantonments become a regular hotbed of disease, and the death rate soon mounts up to a mournful figure. When cholera is abroad, the healthiest stations may now and then suffer from its visits, but Peshawar seems never to escape them. Its chronic unhealthiness invites the destroyer, who shares or forestals the ravages of endemic fever. Some Indian stations are scourged by fever once in a number of years; but from Peshawar the infliction never departs; nor would barracks of twice the present size avail to drive it away. The site for the cantonment was badly chosen from the first—a common feature in the history of Indian military stations. Of late years some little regard, in the choosing of sites for stations, has, we believe, been paid to the counsels of medical inspectors. But of old the opinion of a medical officer was only followed when it happened not to clash with the whim of his military chief.

If barracks of the roomiest pattern fail to keep out fever in a fever-ridden neighbourhood, no one in India would expect them to be of any use in keeping out cholera under any circumstances. The Pall Mall Gazette seems surprised to find that a regiment fresh from a hill-station should have been attacked by this scourge in the magnificent new barracks it was the first to occupy at Allahabad. But cholera has no respect for buildings or places. It stalks "aequo pede" through the sepoy's poor hut and the grandest palace built for the British soldier. Of late years it has pushed its conquests even into the hills. Simlah and Sabathoo have suffered heavily twice or thrice in the last twelve years, nor has Almorah escaped the common doom. In some stations each new epidemic of cholera is sure to strike down fresh victims on its march through the land, while other stations, to all appearance no better fortified, remain as regularly unassailed. It seems in such cases as if the cholera-germ once laid in kindly soil needs only the smallest encouragement to bear fresh fruit in due season. Even after lying inert for years, as at Hurdwar, it may suddenly burst forth into sad luxuriance under conditions apparently no worse than usual. A little poisoning of the water, a casual upturning of long unbroken ground, an unusually heavy shower, may defeat the best arrangements of sanitary inspectors and turn the healthiest-seeming cantonments into a plague-centre. If the driest soils are not always safe from an outbreak of cholera, it is in flat swampy neighbourhoods like that of Peshawar that the conditions for its development recur most regularly in the worst abundance. In such places the two-storied barracks may do good service against fever, but as bulwarks against cholera they are even of less avail than barracks of the old pattern, where the air could circulate freely under roofs more than twenty-five feet above the flooring. The best remedy for cholera and fever in places like Peshawar would be to remove the bulk of the garrison elsewhere. There is no good military reason for massing many regiments in such a pesthouse. As a frontier post it might easily be guarded by a couple of thousand men, of whom not more than half should be Europeans. For these and even for the native soldiers a sanitarium in the adjacent hills would save precious lives during the sickly season. Of course a great deal of the money laid out on magnificent barracks would in that case be thrown away. But it has to some extent been thrown away already, and it is horrible to think that scores of lives may be sacrificed for years together, in order that the money spent in trying to preserve them according to sanitary rule may not seem to have been spent in vain.

One of the lessons to be drawn from late events should be a lesson of caution in the building of permanent barracks. Temporary buildings of sufficient strength and roominess, which can be run up at a cost comparatively trifling, and abandoned therefore at need with small compunction, are all that common prudence demands for three-fourths of our Indian stations. Look at the fate which has befallen station after station in the last thirty years. Some have been wholly or partially abandoned, others have been reoccupied after years of silent desolation. The distribution of our garrisons is always undergoing some change, which involves more or less of pecuniary loss. In the course of years our troops will gravitate more and more towards the hills and the healthiest places in the plains. At least, they would do so but for the enormous cost of these new barracks, which will inevitably blind the authorities to the demerits, sanitary or political, of the cantonments where they stand. Instances of such blindness might easily be quoted in respect to some of the older barracks, which were built at great cost to last for ever, on sites carelessly chosen or fit only for temporary needs. It was said that such buildings would be cheapest in the long run; but they who thought so were apt to overlook the main conditions on which that cheapness could alone be secured. With regard to the new barracks, there is a growing tendency to believe that philanthropy has outrun discretion. "Built in a paroxysm of sanitary passion," they seem to furnish another instance of the danger of beginning great reforms in a panic. Millions of money have been laid out with onesided haste, in concession to the demands of ill-informed sanitarians in England, on buildings which have for the most part failed to prove healthier or more comfortable than barracks of the older pattern, built at a fourth or a sixth of what these have cost. The Indian revenues have been charged with unwonted burdens in order that scores of Englishmen at Allahabad and Peshawar may die every year of fever, dysentery, and cholera, as regularly as they used to do in barracks of the cheapest and most temporary kind.

It is even doubtful, to our thinking, whether the barrack principle is generally suited to the conditions of Indian life. The Pall Mall Gazette asks with some pertinence how it is that officers in India suffer so much less from epidemic diseases than the men. Of several reasons for such a difference not the least pertinent may be found in the fact that officers, as a rule, live by twos and threes in separate bungalows, whereas each barrack holds at least a company of eighty to a hundred men. So many living under one roof, however spacious, cannot but incur far greater risk of disease than thirty officers scattered among fifteen or twenty different dwellings some little distance apart from each other. Especially in time of cholera is the risk on the one side indefinitely enhanced by the numbers who are constantly breathing the same air and making use of the same latrines. That risk would of course be infinitely reduced if the men could only be lodged in roomy huts, holding, let us say, about twenty inmates each. There are not a few stations in the plains where such an arrangement might at any rate have been tried, with a very fair assurance of results as favourable as those already witnessed at Boulogne and Aldershot. It is fair to note, however, the steps already taking in this direction by the building of half-company barracks at Mooltan, Rawal Pindi, Murree, Dera Ismail Khan, and Jalandhar.

GENERAL LIST AND STAFF CORPS. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I do not coincide with "S. C." in thinking that "to set above" is a correct definition of the word "supersede." Supersession involves a sense of displacement—of interference with somebody's rights—of occupying a position belonging to another. Many instances will readily suggest themselves to your readers, in which "to supersede" and "to set above" are not synonymous terms. I used the word as it always is used in questions of promotion, and when I asserted there had been no supersession by officers of the General List, I feel confident that the expression clearly and fully expressed my meaning.

However, let it be granted (for the sake of argument) that "supersede" means simply "to set above." Can "S. C." give me one instance in which a Staff Corps man has been superseded in his own cadre, and has he, or had he ever, a right to complain of promotions in any other? Would he, under the old system, have considered himself superseded because his juniors in another corps were promoted before him, and, if not, why does he do so now? If the promotion of a junior of the old service is not supersession, why should the fact of that junior's place being occupied by a General List man make any difference? Could he under any circumstances have occupied that place himself? Why then is he aggrieved? Have they in any one case ousted him out of his own position? Why then does he complain?

But of all men in this world a Staff Corps officer has least right to grumble. He chose what he considered most conducive to his own interest, and even if the hoped-for prize has turned up a blank, what right has he to complain because others who did not enter the Staff Corps lottery, are not bound by the same rules as himself, or to talk of supersession because they happen to be promoted before him?

"S. C." declares that I have not upset his statement. Now, as this statement was simply to the effect that certain promotions had taken place—a fact which I admitted in my last letter, and to which the "Army List" will testify—I do not quite see under what circumstances it could be upset. When "S. C." complained of General List promotions, only one inference could be drawn from that complaint—namely, that he considered those promotions unfair. I denied that they were unfair, and it was on this point, and this point only, that the discussion commenced. If "S. C." objects to the promotions, why does he not give us his reasons for doing so? If he has no reasons to give, why did he come forward simply to tell us facts with which we were already acquainted?

"S. C." does not agree with me that had the General List been posted "it would have been the same," because he thinks that most of them would have entered the Staff Corps. But "S. C." must pardon me for saying that the question simply resolves itself into a consideration of what would have been their actual rights had they been posted, and not of what they might or might not have done in the event of an option being subsequently allowed them.

"S. C." is inclined to doubt that "the General List signified something different" from those who had gone before. Perhaps, then, "S. C." will be able to inform me why General List men were until lately styled "Officers under the new conditions."

These last two words are full of meaning, and if "S. C." wishes to know something more about them the despatch quoted below* will both satisfy his doubts, and afford him much valuable information.

Weymouth, Dec. 18, 1869.

THE FINANCIAL DEBATE AT CALCUTTA.

The Englishman will be greatly surprised if the discussion in Council on Nov. 19 does not strengthen the hands of the Government in the financial policy it has adopted. A Government which takes the public into its Council, and which balances increasing taxation by a resolute policy of reduction, will always command sympathy and confidence, and will always be secure of support. Sir Richard Temple has not only accepted the situation, he has emphatically declared that there is no foundation for the hope expressed in some quarters that the recent financial disclosures will prove to have been too highly coloured. He says, in effect, that the Empire will be fortunate if matters are no worse than Mr. Strachey has painted them. But of more importance than its confession of past shortcomings is the profession which the Government makes for the future. Here all the speakers were at one. The control of the Supreme Government will, for the future, be something more than a mere name, and this, too, although a large measure of financial responsibility will be placed upon the local Governments. As the Viceroy truly said, it will be impossible to pledge the State to the prosecution of the vast works of improvement now contemplated if the normal state of the finances is to be one of deficit. This is one of the most important discussions which has ever taken place within the walls of the Council Chamber.

The Times of India thinks it is a simple matter of business to avoid errors and mistakes, and it is clerical neglect to compile estimates eked out with "expectations." Coming to the "Charges" side we find a similar record of oversight and culpable negligence. The first is one respecting which Sir Richard Temple must produce his own special exculpation. In paragraph 58 of the fatal despatch—fatal we fear to Sir Richard's short-lived fame as a financier—it is admitted that an additional charge has to be entered, because "provision has not been made for the interest upon the loans contracted in India this year." The chief loan, that of last April was especially a project of the Finance Minister himself—a very unsuccessful policy as we showed at the time—but the very least to be expected was, that, however he might be misled by underlings in other matters, Sir Richard would have made due provision for the cost of his own expensive loan. About £80,000 had to be added on account of other interest charges not sufficiently considered, by far the larger part of which consisted of interest on account overdrawn in that favoured institution the Bank of Bengal. In "Allowances and Refunds" the provision made is said to have been clearly insufficient; and under "Law and Justice" a large arrear due to the Straits Government, which "ought to have been in the estimate," was overlooked; while the second half of the subsidy and tamasha outlay on behalf of the Ameer of Afghanistan appears to have been forgotten in the peaceful retreat of the Financial Secretariat, though all the world outside was ringing with the reports of Lord Mayo's first political field day, and the Finance Minister had been Foreign Secretary whilst the Afghanistan project was maturing under Sir John Lawrence. As to the miscalculations in opium we need say nothing here, as that is scarcely a charge to bring against the accountants; but it must be noted the produce was a sixth more than was expected, involving a large additional outlay, which, with the falling off in price, left the budget £630,000 worse than was expected. "No doubt Sir Richard will have a great deal to say about opium; every financier has. The amount for shares in the New Bank of Bombay was omitted from the charges, though the engagement had been known at Simla for long enough. But in this instance we might, until quite recently, have found the sinners of omission amongst ourselves. In connection with the net expenditure at home there is another large omission of interest due, but not provided for. That charge, again, we should have supposed, is one that ought to have been specially under the eye of the Finance Minister. It is enough to discredit the soundest and most rational loan policy if it be possible for our financiers to forget when interest falls due. There are other estimates in the Home charges which, say the revisers, "may turn out badly;" and they appeal to the Secretary of State to keep expenditure under estimate if possible; but most likely his Grace has already replied that the expenditure was only incurred on indents from this side, prepared, as they ought to have been, under the supervision of the Indian Finance Minister. As to the excess over estimate of nearly one million in Public Works, we need say nothing more than has already been urged by the press in every shape. It is, moreover, a topic beyond that of mere calculation and account, to which we are more particularly referring. It must be presumed that nothing but the desire to avoid imperilling the prestige of the Indian Government has kept back the Indian Secretary in Council from instituting a special investigation into the causes and items of "the enormous increase" of Public Works outlay over the budget estimate.

THE NEW BARRACKS.

The Times of India, without joining in the recent home cry for hill stations at any cost, would venture to ask why so many huge, costly barracks, on Miss Nightingale's designs, are now under course of construction in the plains? Once built, financial reasons will force their occupation. We are well aware there are some localities requiring British troops, which are without neighbouring hills or elevated ground. On the other hand, high salubrious sites bound the landscape within sight of most of our low lying cantonments. In the Bombay Presidency we have barracks in course of construction at Nusserabad, Neenuch, and at Desa. Close to one, and within a moderate distance of another of these stations, there are elevated regions perfectly well fitted for the reception of Europeans. Why, therefore, we demand, are large sums expended in the construction of barracks on the scorched plains below? No one can seriously argue that the removal of the troops a few miles north or south of either of these cantonments would in the least endanger our authority, or the public peace. And so it is with several other places. The stupid, suicidal blunder of placing new barracks on the plains, instead of in the hills, is only equalled by that bungling or financial deference to European notions which permits barracks to be so constructed that, as at Kamptee and elsewhere we might name, they are condemned even before occupation. The only way in which we can prevent the substitution of a large and expensive invaliding list for the diminished death ratio, and the only method by which we shall ever reduce the mortality among the women and children, is by making more use of the hill ranges or elevated sites of India. This should be effected gradually by placing new buildings, as required, in the hills. There is some proposal at home to send all soldiers' wives, whether with or without leave, and their families, after the husband and father, when duty calls him abroad. It is stated the condition of these forsaken ones in England is often melancholy in the extreme. We sincerely trust, however, that the Indian plains will not be included among those localities to which these women and children are to be despatched. If so, it will be simply a change from destitution to disease and death. If, in sight of the fearful mortality among children in India soldiers' little ones are sent to this country because they want food at home, the charity will be akin to that of stony-hearted parish boards, whose only aim is to forward paupers into another union, and so shift the burden to other shoulders. But this, though an important question of detail, is only incidental to the great subject to which we have been drawing attention. To recapitulate—the rate of mortality amongst British troops in India, though diminished in the tables presented to Parliament, is not materially reduced by direct efforts of sanitary authorities, but the death-rate in India is kept down mainly by the practice of extensive invaliding. Until a considerably larger proportion of European soldiers is located in elevated, seaside, or other specially salubrious stations, no important advance in health can be expected. The mortality amongst women and children of European soldiers in India, who do not participate so fully in the practice of invaliding, shows no diminution. Whilst these unfavourable conditions obtain no new regulations should be introduced that are likely to increase the number of soldiers' wives and children in India.

The Madras Times remarks that not only is it found the style of architecture which secures a large number of cubic feet of breathing space per man, and the copious and free access of air and light from the outside, has the damning drawback of admitting air that to English lungs is supernaturally hot and dry, and a glare equally unwanted and injurious to English eyes—so that indeed there is little difference between the internal and external atmosphere—but it is also now becoming a general belief, that large buildings for the herding together of numbers of human beings—however liberal the breathing space—whether barracks, hospitals or gaols, can by no means bear comparison from a sanitary point of view with smaller dwellings, apart from each other, and occupied by two or three persons only. This is no new theory—indeed it has been acted upon over and over again in different parts of the world, and instances where ranges of barracks have been abandoned, even if only temporarily, on sanitary grounds, in favour of huts and tents spread over a wide area of fresh open country, will be present to the recollection of most of our readers. We may point to Aldershot and Chatham, and the invariable improvement in the health of troops removed from barracks, shortly after being encamped there in tents and huts, as perhaps the most familiar and extensive proof of this. Then, when cholera breaks out in Indian barracks, what do we do? We send the troops out into the camp on open fields, at once checking the progress of the scourge in nearly every case; and yet it is by no means a settled question that cholera is infectious. Of course, in the case of the outbreak of diseases liable to spread by contagion or infection, the advantages of segregation would be at once evident; but the advantage is by no means confined to such cases, or to cases of outbreak of disease at all. On the contrary, even where there is no prevalence of actual disease, the general health and spirits of troops in camp is far superior to that of those in barracks.

THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH'S VISIT.—Calcutta will shortly present a gay appearance. The arrival of the Duke of Edinburgh will attract to the capital a goodly muster of native chiefs and notabilities. The Bengal magnates, headed by the Rajah of Burdwan, will muster strongly; the Maharajah of Vizianagram will of course be present. The Rajah of Jeypore has already arrived, and an invitation has been sent to his Highness of Cashmere, who will probably accompany Sir Donald McLeod to the capital. Among the other chiefs who are likely to honour the capital with their presence we note the names of Maharajah Scindiah, the Rajah of Bhurtpore, the Rana of Dholepore, the Maha Rao Rajah of Ulwar, the Rajah of Kerowlee, the Maharajahs of Rewah and Benares, and the Nawab of Rampore. If the Bundelcund Chiefs, and the Oudh Talookdars send in their contingents of notabilities, Earl Mayo will see gathered about him in his capital, and at his first durbar, a gathering as numerous and as noble as that which assembled at Agra in 1866 at the invitation of Sir John Lawrence.

THE SPELLING OF INDIAN NAMES.—We hear that Mr. W. W. Hunter is engaged, as a work collateral to his general duty of introducing system and symmetry into our Indian "Gazetteers" in organising a uniform spelling of names of places throughout India. We hope his method will not be altogether and strictly such as Mr. Whitley Stokes would approve. Absolute purism would be intolerable torture at first, and indeed never attained at last. Whatever Mr. Hunter's plan may be, we are told that the heads of departments have most of them accepted it, and nearly all the local Governments. The "Postal Guide" is to be revised in accordance with it; the railways have agreed to adopt it; the official maps are to be altered to correspond; and so what with these and the "Gazettes" and Mr. Hunter's own "Gazetteers," the public eye is likely to undergo a very effective course of compulsory education. Nevertheless, we warn Mr. Hunter that, even if we have to go to the stake for it, we shall continue to spell Lucknow and Cawnpore in the vulgar manner as long as we are still permitted to cumber this earth.—Pioneer.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS.—Her Majesty's Indian relief troopship Serapis Capt. John Soady, arrived in Portsmouth harbour last Friday morning from Alexandria and Malta, with military and naval passengers, &c., on board, as per subjoined list:—14th brigade R.A.—Cols. Smythe, Domville, and Longden; Lieut.-Cols. Boothby, Miller, V.C., and Laurie; Surg. Woods; Majors Murray and Geary. Royal Eng.—Lieut. Cunningham. Royal Art.—Capt. Maule and Dyke; Lieuts. Allan, Stopford, Armytage, Tillotson, Turnbull, Daniell, Knox, Vibart, Free, Inge, Logan, Bowen, Shiel, Keith, Bouwens, Blakesley, and Gillespie. 95th Regt., Capt. Fleming; 77th, Capt. Atkins; 106th, Capt. Gaitskill; 38th, Capt. Stokes; 1st batt. 14th, Capt. Dixon; 109th, Lieut. Mordaunt; Bengal Army, Lieut. Farwell; 105th, Lieut. Darvill; 85th, Lieut. Smith. Assist.-Surg. Royal Art.—Ashton, Boyd, and Greenhill. Staff Assist.-Surg.—Dooley. Rifle Brigade.—Lieut. Marsham. Vet. Surgs. Royal Art.—Burt and Maclean. Quartermasters, Elson, 109th; McCallum, Royal Art. Ensign Vibart, 106th. Messdames Smythe, Domville, Boothby, Laurie and six children, Royal Art.; Fleming and one child, 95th; Cunningham, Royal Engineers; Elson and three children, 109th; Darvill, 105th; Dooley and three children, Medical Staff; 924 non-commissioned officers and men of various corps, chiefly artillerymen of the 14th brigade, with 91 wives and 147 children. From Malta the Serapis brought Lieut. Ormsby, R.A., some soldiers with their wives and children, and 26 naval supernumeraries.

THE DEBATE ON THE ADDITIONAL INCOME-TAX.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE opened the debate on Friday, Nov. 19, with a long speech on the income-tax, that almost reached to the one o'clock gun. He said he had no intention of making a regular financial statement, as he would defer that to the usual period, in March next. He complimented Mr. Strachey on the able manner in which he had looked after the finances during his (Sir Richard's) absence, his well-known ability being a sufficient guarantee that all that was done was well done, and the Finance Minister almost unreservedly accepted what had been done and discovered during his absence by his locum tenens. Sir Richard then went into a lengthy statement of the financial position, going into the particulars that have already been made known to the public through the candid statement of the Government in September last. He thought at the time of his budget statement that all was fairly stated, and that he had not taken a more sanguine view of things than circumstances warranted. He then noticed the disturbing elements of the revenue. First, there was opium. Bengal had been estimated at Rs. 1,330 per chest, and had fallen to Rs. 1,100, which was below the revised estimate of Rs. 1,141. Second, Malwa opium had produced less than was anticipated. There were, however, 2,000 more chests of Bengal opium than had been estimated for; yet the deficiency would be about half a million. The third element of disturbance was that the income-tax was likely to be less productive than anticipated by about half a million. Fourth, it was anticipated in September that there might be a deficiency of £140,000, but again it was hoped that the timely rains would even remove this. But the famine in Northern India had been very severe, and they would not realise as much as they had anticipated from the land revenue, though that great source of the State had not been impaired. Then there were three items of expenditure that had not been foreseen—interest in India; extra expenditure on the cultivation of opium; and interest in England. He considered the deficit on the year might be taken at one and three-quarter million, which must be met. He then showed how they proposed to meet this. First, there was a proposed reduction in Public Works of £792,500, cut off from ordinary expenditure. Whether that would be really saved he could not say. If possible it would be done by his honourable friend Colonel Strachey. Reductions had been proposed in the Police. Army reduction had also been proposed, but whether the latter would be approved by the Secretary of State or not he could not say. Under any circumstances, the change would give no relief this year.

Sir Richard then referred to the proposed increase of the salt duty. This had been estimated to yield £200,000; but he did not wish to be over sanguine, and would take it at about £190,000. The reductions in the P. W. D. would not reach a million, and they would then be deficient by about three quarters of a million, which must be met by the income-tax. It was proposed to double the latter for the half-year, making the tax  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. on the year. The income-tax was not as productive as anticipated. The revised estimate gave it at £680,000, and taking half of that—£340,000—there would still be a deficiency of about £400,000 to make up. He would do his best to meet this during the year. These, said Sir Richard, comprised the main points of his case, and he deemed them a complete justification of his present measure. He then proceeded to account for the discrepancies between the old estimates and the revised. He had budgeted at the figures of the previous year. And considering that there had been an increase of revenue at the rate of about ten millions during the past ten years, he thought he had a fair margin, and that 49½ millions was a fair estimate of income. In reference to land and to opium, he said that many of the estimates were matters of opinion; and as regards opium, he had relied on the opinion of Mr. Bullen, that small cultivation would produce high prices. The fact that this view had not been sustained, was no reflection on the Government. Customs had been estimated as for the previous year. For three years the revenue had been steadily increasing and he thought he was safe in taking the previous years' results. The only drawback was the drought in the Upper Provinces. Again, he had relied on Mr. Bullen, who thought there might be an increase in trade from the revised tariff, which reduced the receipts from customs. Then trade had not been as brisk as was anticipated. He must revise again, and what could be done by English experience and local knowledge should be done. As regards the estimation of Customs revenue, he showed how carefully the estimates had been prepared and checked by various authorities. But he confessed that the first estimate of the income-tax was £900,000, whilst the revised one was only £680,000. They had gone through an immense amount of statistics, which, if laid on the table, the Council would not find light-reading. They were not of much value, some of them being ten years old, and prepared for his predecessor, Mr. Wilson. He would not have the Council to understand that he had any despondency as to sources of revenue—the land, forests, &c., The miscellaneous item in his Budget was high, and except in one or two cases had been borne out, yet miscellaneous items are not reliable.

Sir Richard then went into the items on the expenditure side. First, interest on unclaimed dividends. These had frequently been left with Government, but this year they had been claimed with exceptional closeness; and he found that they must be prepared to pay dividends without a contingency of being unclaimed. As to the interest for loans, Sir Richard had reckoned on having no interest to pay this year. Then the Straits had an old standing account for £30,000, and who could have thought of it? However, it was but a small sum. Then, he was not answerable because a large subsidy had been paid to Shere Ali. He attributed the strange position of affairs to sheer misfortune. Things had gone against him this once, but his weather eye would be open in future. As for cash balances, they were always mere matters of guess. He would not say anything as to Home expenditure. Wonders had been performed in improving the accounts, and there would be still more done to excite remark and surprise. Pending a further statement next March, he appealed to the candour of this Council to consider whether the existing difficulty does not mainly arise from fiscal misfortunes hardly to have been anticipated, from fluctuations in trade generally, and in the China market particularly. How could we, a year ago, have found justification for imposing on the country those sacrifices which we are now compelled to propose? If we had then come forward and said there were such anticipations about the future that we must double the income-tax, and arrest public improvement by cutting off three quarters of a million—I ask whether such a conclusion would have found acceptance, or whether such proposals could possibly have been carried? Yet that is exactly what has been rendered necessary by subsequent events. The Government of India should be judged, not by the extent of fiscal misfortunes which cannot be prevented nor reasonably be foreseen, but rather by the degree of energy, efficiency, and resolution with which a deficit is met as soon as it is proved to be approaching.

Colonel STRACHEY entered into details of the unforeseen expenditure of the financial year. He concluded as follows:—The Public Works Department is very commonly regarded as the great enemy of public economy and the first cause of financial disorder. We are told of the tyranny of the Public Works Department, from which no Government can escape. But, in fact, what is this department? It is the agency, and nothing more than the agency, through which the Government, in all its various departments, supplies itself with extravagancies. The Public Works Department does not desire to build palatial barracks, nor splendid hospitals, nor vast court-houses. It has no wish to stud the country with police-offices and stations. All these works are undertaken to satisfy the various civil departments of the administration, and the difficulty of the Public Works Department is to bring their demands within reasonable and practicable limits. So it is in truth with all other works. The Public Works Department receives from the Government that sum which the Government thinks fit to spend from year to year on this class of objects, and does its best to apply the money suitably. And the remedy against any final inconvenience that can arise from the operation of this department is in the most complete manner in the hands of the Government; indeed, in a far more complete manner than in any other branch of the administration. How true this is is shown by the occurrences of the last few months. The Government having become really alive to the necessity for economy, at once reduced the public works expenditure by £800,000, and next year will reduce it by a million and a quarter. To speak of a mere disbursing agency as in any sense responsible for the extent of the outlay it manages is a complete misuse of terms; and in future, I hope, that when it is thought proper to find fault with any excessive expenditure on public works, the responsibility will be attributed, where it is due, to the administrative departments, and to the executive Government.

MR. COWIE addressed the Council, deploring increased taxation, but reminding them that he before recommended a two per cent. income-tax.

MR. JOHN STRACHEY stated his experience of office during the absence of the Finance Minister, and expressed himself thoroughly hopeful of the future.

H.E. the Viceroy observed that after the large amount of information laid before the public in the despatch to the Home Secretary, and in that meeting, nothing remained to be said in amplification. There had been given full statements of the most candid character, and it is gratifying to see that, however the public may lament the necessity of reduction and object to the details, there is a general approval through the press of the measures proposed; and he hoped they would be supported by the Home Government. Every candid man will approve the measures proposed. He was aware that it was not usual to make serious financial arrangements in the middle of the year. But in good governments such things are not unprecedented. In England they cannot do it without Parliament. But Parliament can be called together at unusual periods for the purpose of dealing with a financial crisis or to provide for a financial necessity. Now, there were only two courses open to the Government of India. We had either to adopt a policy of concealment or of candour. Had we adopted the first course we must have remained in a state of silence till next March, with the full knowledge that the public were under a grossly erroneous impression as to the true financial state of the country. This was a position in which, I think, no body of honourable men could for a moment have thought of placing themselves. The resolution to take at the earliest possible moment the public into the confidence of the Government was unanimously agreed to, and as soon as our financial position was ascertained beyond a doubt, we felt that it was our duty to lay those facts unreservedly before the public. It was said by some, indeed, that by the premature disclosure of the real financial state of the Empire we should run the risk of damaging national credit, and throwing a general air of discredit upon the whole proceedings of the Government.

I, in common with my colleagues, took a different view, which I think the result has shown to be the right one; for though the statements which were made have been now for a considerable time before the public, we have found that the financial credit of the country has not been seriously damaged, but that the public knowing the worst, and feeling and appreciating the efforts of the Government to deal with the difficulty, have seen that these difficulties can be surmounted, that there is no real danger to the permanent financial position of the Empire, and that administrative reforms and strict adherence to the ordinary rules of economy and prudence, is all that is necessary to place our fiscal affairs on a sound and healthy basis.

There is no doubt that a great deal of the evil that has existed for some years has been not so much the fault of the administration as it has been that the Government have never been in possession of the great financial facts of the year at a sufficiently early period to make real use of them for the purposes of administration. There is no doubt, also, that the cause of our present position is owing very much to the inaccuracy of forecast which has for some years existed; but I believe that, by care and firmness in administration, a great portion of the inconveniences which are occasioned from a want of early knowledge of the actual current and financial position of the Empire can be obviated. The evil is one of great magnitude, and is shown most by the discrepancy which has taken place within the last four years between the budget estimate and the actual revenue and expenditure.

Now, I find that in 1866-67 we budgeted for a deficit of £72,800, the real deficit turning out to be two millions and a-half. I find that in 1867-68 £1,764,478 was budgeted for, the result being a deficit of one million. In 1868-69 I find that a surplus of upwards of two millions was budgeted for, but a deficit of two millions occurred. In 1869-70 a surplus of £52,650 was budgeted for, but a deficit of nearly two millions is expected. I attach no blame to any one for this. I am fully aware that explanations, more or less satisfactory, may be offered, and that during the periods I have mentioned the fiscal policy of the country was more than once changed during the financial year; but, nevertheless, the facts I have mentioned are incontestable, and betoken, to my mind, a position of danger which ought to terminate. Revenue must always fluctuate to a certain extent. Expenditure may occasionally exceed the amount budgeted for, though it is more under control; but it is clear that no administration can be conducted with safety and with success unless events connected either with revenue or expenditure are known to the controlling power almost at the time of their occurrence.

I believe, therefore, that by invoking the assistance of every department of the Government in preventing delay in forwarding useful information—in trying as far as possible to avoid the leaving of any unequal or unusual disbursement to the end of the year—in endeavouring as far as possible to spread the expenditure over those months of the year in which it generally occurs, I think that by this means, and also by great efforts on the part of the Government of India, in condensing, analysing, and bringing to use the information at their disposal, a great portion of what has already occurred may for the future be avoided.

I hope it will not now be supposed that inaccurate information has been supplied to the Government. On the contrary, I believe the information which has been placed at the disposal of the Government is thoroughly accurate and completely reliable, but what I object to is—that the information is often given too late and the details are not available in sufficient time to make them thoroughly useful for administrative purposes. I believe that, considering the great power of this Government, and looking to the great advantages which it possesses in having in its service so many able and experienced officers, there can be really no substantial difficulty in obtaining at an earlier moment the vast amount of information which is in every year so carefully collected and which has generally been found to be so thoroughly reliable. We have embodied these opinions in a despatch to the Secretary of State, and I have little doubt that in the efforts we intend to make in this direction we shall receive the hearty and cordial approval and support of her Majesty's Government.

His Excellency then reiterated his sense of the general support given to the measures of Government by the public and the local Governments, especially Madras, and thus concluded:—We are engaged in dealing with great interests and enormous sums—we are engaged in an attempt which may be summed up in two or three words. We have to change the fiscal condition of this country in such a way as to give to the public at the earliest possible moment a financial advantage of upwards of three millions of money. I am now speaking not only the opinion of the Government of India, but also that of the Secretary of State, when I say that it is decided—looking to the many fluctuating items in the resources of the country, to the risks to which we are liable, and the magnitude of the interests involved, that, unless such a result is obtained, it cannot be said that Indian finance stands upon a sound and substantial basis. Although the effect of this great reduction of expenditure may be in a few cases somewhat to injure individual interests, or what is far more important, to postpone for a short period works of usefulness in which we are all deeply interested, yet by making these sacrifices now we shall lay up for ourselves a great store of safety and welfare for hereafter, for unless such a course is taken we cannot hope to carry with success, and finish within any reasonable time, the great works of improvement which are so necessary to the life, the comfort, the health, and safety of the people, and to the speedy completion of which the honour and the credit of this Government is so irrevocably pledged.

STATION TALK.

GAZEEPUR, Nov. 16.—Owing to press of business I could not give you an account of the Dewalee festival earlier than now. It came off on the 3rd instant, and lasted continually for three days. The city on the night of that day presented a very remarkable scene. Houses, streets, and ghats were all decorated with innumerable lights, as if the stars had descended on the occasion to illuminate the lower world. On the other hand, the people turned nearly mad with gambling. Notwithstanding they annually experience endless misery from gambling, they never care to abstain from it. One loses as much by gambling as the other gains; and when the loser has nothing to continue further, he is tempted to resort to such dishonest means as bring him at last to total ruin. We know Government has granted a concession to the people of India for the practice of gambling at the Dewalee festival, but from a motive quite different to what it is taken to be at present; but when they make a bad use of the licence, and thereby injure themselves and their families, it is no longer the duty of Government to tolerate a practice that fosters vice and woe among its subjects. I hear some of the magistrates do not like to interfere, under the mistaken notion that gambling forms a part of Hindooism. I assure them that gambling has no connection with the religion of the people of Hindostan. All that is said in the Hindu Shastres is, that Hindoos may play at dice only one night during the Dewalee, not for the sake of gaining money but for pleasure. Last year our energetic magistrate, Mr. Pasley did not allow the people here a single day's licence for gambling; but this year when the Dewalee commenced Mr. Pasley had gone home on furlough, and Mr. Howe was in charge, the gamblers played at, and after the Dewalee. I heard the people say during the late Dewalee festival that they were allowed to play one night by the authorities here; but I cannot vouch for the truth. Mr. Pasley was quite sensible of the evil consequences of gambling, and therefore tried his best to check its continuance. I am sorry to learn that his successors have acted otherwise. One night when the Dewalee was over some seven or eight men were gambling before the bungalow of an English gentleman; somehow or other it came to his knowledge, and he immediately sent for the police. The police came and arrested all of them in the play room. The gamblers were taken before the magistrate, but none of them were punished. There is no strict law against gambling, and hence the gamblers generally escape punishment. The new tax which I mentioned in my letter a few weeks ago has been put in force here since last month. It is commonly called a house-tax. The assessment is being collected at the rate of Rs. 6½ per cent. on the rents of houses. We again hear the octroi duty will be introduced throughout this district from January next in order to meet the financial difficulties of the state. Is there no other means than taxation for making up the deficit of Government? I think retrenchment and economy would do better for the purpose. A grand mela will soon take place at Bulleah. It commences every year in this month from the full moon, and ends a fortnight after she disappears. A large number of horses have been sent out for sale to the fair from the central studs of these provinces; and merchants from different parts of Hindustan are going there with many horses and camels. Officers are now busy about the fair, and doing their business as speedily as possible. Many of them have gone already to Bulleah on the plea of entering upon their tour of inspection, and the rest are anxious to follow them. Mr. Oldham returned here from the hills on the 5th instant, and took over charge from Mr. Howe. Mr. Montresor has declined to succeed Mr. Pasley.

ALLAHABAD, Nov. 17.—Our weather has been somewhat cloudy, but not so much as to threaten rain, which would not be welcome just now. Edibles continue to be dear, although it is generally admitted that grain has been imported much more largely than has been the case for some time, but I suppose the bunnahs are bent on making hay while the sun shines, and the free-trade policy, a "blunder" certainly in India, is encouraging them to it. What is making matters worse is the pressure brought to bear by the stringent orders of the Governor General to reduce establishments. However, no action has yet been taken in any of the offices here, yet some of the poor clerks and particularly the duffrees and peons are not sure of their bread. There is an European here, who like Captain Remington, is a disgrace to his nation, although in a different way he keeps knocking about the streets with a host of natives about him, making a great noise, using vulgar language and frightening people; he does not hesitate to stop people's conveyances with the view of extorting money from them. I think the authorities should dispose of him in some way or other; if he does not promise to behave better he should be sent out of the country. I understand that his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor is bent on having his tour, and has applied to the Government of India for an additional grant to defray the expenses. I have reason to believe that the grant will be sanctioned, and his Honour will, as stated before, leave this about the 23rd of December, the camp forming at Futtehpore. A list of the stations he will visit has already been published by you. Something, however, may occur to alter the programme. The object of Sir William Muir's visit to Delhi is, I am told, to inspect some canal or other. Under the rule directing that officers in civil employ should retire after they have attained the age of fifty-five, Dr. Clarke should vacate his appointment. I stated in my last that all the district officers were unanimous in the opinion that duffrees cannot be dispensed with. I am surprised that the order directing the abolition of this post in all public offices was at all issued; you know that nothing is done in India without the famous nagsha, and the duffree not only rules these (some of them, I assure you, are almost as intricate as a village map), but has charge of many other things; if the clerks are made to do this, they will have to withdraw so much of their time from their legitimate duties, which will fall in arrears, and an extra clerk, perhaps on Rs. 20 or 30 a month, will have to be engaged. Is not this false economy? It is a penny wise and pound foolish economy. Another order has filtered down from the Government of India—all the khulasees are to be done away with; I mean khulasees kept by all Government officers, whether controlling or district, for the purpose of pitching their tents and doing other work connected with a camp. In my opinion this order is reasonable. It is well known that touring lasts during the cold weather only, when khulasees are no doubt useful; but during the hot weather and the rains they are to be idle I suppose. The Government of India has suggested an increase of one rupee to the pay of the chupprasees, who will, when required, have to act as khulasees also. The arrangement proposed is feasible, although I think it will require time to "get a groove." (Guess what that means.)—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

LOCUSTS.—A very large swarm of locusts passed over the Hosseinabad part of the city on Thursday morning. The cloud was very thick, and was more than an hour in passing. They appeared to come from the south, and went in the direction of Seetapore.—Lucknow Times, Nov. 20.

THE LATE DISTRESS.—During the month of September last 248,106 persons received relief in the North-Western Provinces, of whom 39,906 were men, 115,570 women, 40,340 children, and 52,210 infants. This gives an increase of 19,455 over the number relieved in August, but towards the end of the month the applicants began to decrease rapidly.

GENERAL R. TAYLOR.—Although the finding of the commission, says the Englishman, appointed a few months back to inquire into the conduct of General Reynell Taylor, in connection with the State of Putteala, has not as yet been officially promulgated, the rumour is generally accepted that the Political Agent has come off with flying colours—a result not the less gratifying that it will occasion no surprise.

NO ESCAPE.—The Indian Army is responsible for the following:—Two Irishmen, on a sultry night immediately after their arrival in India, took refuge underneath the bed-clothes from a skirmishing party of mosquitoes. At last one of them, gasping from heat, ventured to peep beyond the bulwarks, and by chance espied a fire-fly which had strayed into the room. Arousing his companion with a punch, he said, "Fergus it's no use. Ye might as well come out. Here's one of the crayers searchin for us wid a lantern."

THE BURDWAN FEVER.—Most distressing accounts still continue to reach us of the ravages of the fever in the Burdwan district. The Jehanabad district appears to have suffered more than any other, and in some of the villages the people are so reduced as to be unable to cook their food, or travel to the nearest dispensary for medicine. The Criminal Court at Jehanabad has been removed to Hooghly, and the head-quarters of the Police to a distance of four miles from the station; one of the deputy magistrates has fallen a victim to the fever. Beyond sending extra doctors and medicines, and appointing an engineer to report on the drainage of the country, the Government appears to have done but little, though the division officers have paid frequent visits to the suffering villages. Dr. Sutherland attributes the origin of the fever to the impurity of the water, and the gradual filling up of the low lying tracts of country by the deposits brought down during the rains by the Ganges.

BURMAH.—From Burman papers we learn that Major MacMahon left Rangoon in the steamship Colonel Phayre on Nov. 6; he was accompanied by Captain Bowers, R.N.R., who is to aid Captain Strover at Mandalay. The same steamer carried a guard of sixteen policemen and a jemadar, who will be stationed at Bhanmo for the protection of the assistant agent at that place. Several of the Rangoon merchants also availed themselves of the opportunity of sending agents to Bhanmo with the view of ascertaining with some correctness the chances of opening up the trade route between that place and Rangoon. Captain Bowers took with him a large and well-stocked medicine chest, towards the equipment of which Gen. Fytche had contributed Rs. 50. It is a great pity that the Government has not sent a medical man to Bhanmo. Such an officer might there do a very great deal of good, and might, under instructions from Dr. Anderson, complete and supplement the scientific information acquired during the Momein expedition.—Englishman.

HEALTH OF THE EUROPEAN SOLDIERY IN INDIA.—Dr. W. I. Moore, in the Indian Medical Gazette, assumes it to be a demonstrable fact that the vast improvement of late years in the health of European soldiers in India, on which we have all been congratulating ourselves, is an illusion. He asserts that "invaliding is the chief cause of the reduction of mortality." It is not that Indian life is more healthful to the soldier, but that he is sent out of India just when he would otherwise die in it. As corroboration of this view, Dr. Moore asserts, and indeed appears to show, that the death-rate among women and children is now almost, if not quite, as high as in the old deadly days. Women and children are seldom invalided, and it is generally the married man who remains in India. Therefore, in their case, the climate works its fell effects to the bitter end.—Pioneer.

MILITARY.—The decision to hold no Durbar at Agra has led to the transfer of the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition from Agra to Lahore. Orders have been given for the assembling at Meean Meer of the following troops:—D Battery F Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, en route to Meerut from Sealkote; F Battery F Brigade Royal Horse Artillery, quartered at Meean Meer; H Battery 8th Brigade Royal Artillery, proceeding to Meean Meer in relief; D Battery 19th Brigade Royal Artillery, en route to Meerut from Mooltan; 5th Lancers, en route to Campbellpore from Lucknow; 20th Hussars, en route from Umballa to Campbellpore; 9th Bengal Cavalry, quartered at Meean Meer; 19th Bengal Cavalry, en route to Mooltan from Peshawur; 39th Foot, en route to Ferozepore from England; 85th Foot, quartered at Meean Meer; 92nd Foot, from Jullundur by rail; 3rd Native Infantry, en route to Meerut from Peshawur; 14th Punjab Native Infantry, from Jullundur by rail; 21st Punjab Native Infantry, quartered at Meean Meer; 28th Punjab Native Infantry, en route to Ferozepore from Peshawur; 35th Native Infantry, quartered at Meean Meer; the troops will be massed at Meean Meer during the first week in February. We understand, says the Pioneer, that Lieutenant-colonel T. E. Gordon, Persian Interpreter to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, will become Assistant Adjutant-general of the Presidency Division, on the departure of Sir William Mansfield from India.

RISE OF CONVICTS IN RANGOON.—An outbreak among the convicts in the Central Jail at Rangoon took place on November 15. A conspiracy had been planned among a gang of eight Burmese convicts to effect their escape. This gang was employed in bringing broken stone from one of the wards of the jail, when the leading man struck with a stick the warder standing on sentry, rushed forward to the police sentry, pounced upon him unawares, and seized his musket. The other seven convicts, following their leader, rushed to his support, when the deputy jailor, Mr. Maddison interfered, but the eight prisoners were more than a match for him. He was repeatedly struck by the convicts about the neck and head, until he became stunned. He however escaped. After getting rid of the deputy jailor, the leader of the mutinous gang presented the loaded musket to the policemen standing or sitting inside on the right hand side guard-room, where he entered. The constables apparently fled, and had not the courage to face the convicts, one of whom only was armed with a musket. By the convicts effecting their entrance into this room, protected as it is by the mechanical apparatus of a turnstile, through which only one man can enter at a time, they became possessed of arms. In this room an armed guard of several constables are supposed to be constantly on duty, each one armed with a musket and a certain quantity of ball ammunition. The mutinous convicts thus became masters of the situation. The brave and gallant superintendent of the jail, Dr. Maingay, learning that there was some disturbance, instantly repaired to his post of duty, and had reached the guard-room, when a convict fired at him. The bullet, penetrating the upper part of the chest, passed out of his body. On the head jailer, Mr. Hewett, approaching, a Mussulman, who was a short-term prisoner, ran forward in front of the jailer towards the inner wicket, when a musket levelled at the jailer went off and struck down the convict. The poor fellow dropped at the feet of Mr. Hewett, who then summoned all the Europeans in the jail to come to his assistance. Another well-behaved convict was also shot who rallied to the help of the jail officer to suppress the revolt. Mr. Hewett discovered that the eight convicts had got outside the jail, each armed with a musket. Chase was given under the lead of the jailer. Two of the eight were fired at, and fell wounded, and the whole eight were captured and brought back to jail. It does not, however, appear that the conspiracy was wide-spread among the great body of convicts, of whom there were sixteen hundred and seventy on the day of the disturbance, four hundred of whom were out at work, and over twelve hundred in the jail at the time of the rising of the gang of eight. Others joined when they saw there was a chance of escape, but only eight broke away from custody. We regret to learn of the death of Dr. Maingay, from the gunshot wound; the lamented gentleman leaves a widow. The remains of the deceased gentleman were followed to the grave by the Chief Commissioner and all the officers of the Commission and heads of departments at Rangoon. Dr. Maingay has been for many years collecting and arranging in botanical order every plant he could obtain from the Malay Archipelago and in Burmah. It is a most valuable collection.

THE CHOLERA INQUIRY.—Dr. Cornish, who was lately appointed to the Madras Government to prosecute an inquiry at certain stations in the Presidency where cholera has been epidemic, has been unable, hitherto to enter upon this special duty, in consequence of no provision having been made in the budget to meet the necessary expenditure.

MILITARY.—A telegram was received at Bangalore on the 15th Nov., ordering the 2-19th Regiment to proceed to Calcutta forthwith. The regiment is to be there about the beginning of December, and has consequently but little time left to make preparations for its departure. Has this anything to do with the expected visit of the Duke of Edinburgh to India?

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—A daring gang robbery was lately perpetrated on the high road near Vellore, in which some ten or twelve ruffians, armed with clubs were engaged. They attacked and maltreated an English clerk on the collector's establishment, and relieved him of property to the value of 500 rupees. A reward of fifty rupees has been offered for information that will lead to the apprehension and conviction of the perpetrators of the outrage, which, strange to say, occurred within half a mile of a police station.

TOUR OF THE BISHOP OF MADRAS.—The Bishop of Madras is about to make a protracted tour through the Bombay Presidency and the Madras revenues are to be charged with his heavy travelling allowances. Is not this somewhat anomalous? His Lordship has a natural desire to make the acquaintance of his Right Reverend Brother of the sister Presidency, but it is rather absurd that we should have to pay for this exemplary exhibition of fraternal sympathy. The travelling allowances of Viceroys, Governors, Councilors, Secretaries, and others urgently needed the audit of a hard-headed man who habitually requires money's worth for money spent—Madras Mail.

DESTRUCTION OF TIGERS.—Colonel Christie has reported to the Madras Government the slaughter of a very large tiger near Ootacamund, on Oct. 1. Two good-sized tiger cubs had been secured the day before. Tigers are numerous round Ootacamund at present; they are said to destroy a thousand head of cattle yearly. The slaughter of another splendid tiger is reported in the village of Caranabur, in the Perambore district, by Mr. Hogg, of the police. The animal measured twelve feet in length, and stood rather more than four feet high. It had committed great devastations in the surrounding villages.

A STRANGE FREAK.—A European named Carney has been tried by the Madras High Court on an extraordinary charge. He had been manager for the Southern India Company of three coffee plantations, but was dismissed on account of his intemperate habits. About a month after his dismissal he one day walked into his successor's bungalow, ordered breakfast, saddled a horse and galloped off for a ride. He was next day apprehended by the police. As no dishonest intention was apparent the charge was dismissed. The prisoner was, however, convicted on another charge, of cheating, and sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, Nov. 17.—The officials of the Sind Railway are growing wise. They have been abused and laughed at enough on account of the damages sustained by the line each time it rained here. They are now determined that no one shall laugh at them again. Instructions have been issued not to go forward with the repairs to the Mullee Viaduct until such time as the engineers devise some means to make the bridge withstand the force of the strongest floods in future. This is as it should be; we have frittered away enough money on the line, and it is time that the work be done properly now. The Kurrachee Depot Barracks will soon be full of soldiers again. Information has been received by Captain Fawcett, our Assistant Quartermaster-General, to the effect that 203 invalids, 46 time-expired men, 16 women, and 60 children, will start from Meeran Meer on the 26th inst. for embarkation at Mooltan. On their arrival at Kotree they will be disembarked under the superintendence of the staff officer at Hyderabad, and sent by rail to Kurrachee; after which arrangements will be made by the officer commanding the depot to despatch the party to Bombay, whence they will be conveyed to England in one of the Government transports. The detachment 21st Fusiliers at Hyderabad will be relieved about the end of next March by three companies of the 88th (Connaught Rangers), which will be here then for the purpose of embarking in transports engaged to convey them to Bombay. The following officers will be placed in charge of the detachment of the corps destined for location at Hyderabad:—Lieut.-Colonel B. B. Mauleverer, Major Fry, Lieutenants Ford, Hale, Penton, and Sir de Hochepeid-Larpent, Bart., Ensign Jeffreys, and Dr. Curran. Captain W. A. Gillespie, Deputy Collector of Sewhan, and Major R. R. Gillespie, of the 106th Foot (who came here a short time ago from the Punjab for the benefit of his health), have determined upon proceeding to England. The former leaves by this day's mail on two years' furlough granted him on the recommendation of the local medical board. Both brothers served with the Persian Expeditionary Field Force in 1856-57, and were present at the assault and capture of the old Dutch fort of Reshire, as also when the enemy gave up heart on the appearance of our troops in line, and of the fleet under the command of Rear Admiral Sir Henry Leeke, and surrendered the strongly fortified town of Bushire. They were likewise present at the operation directed against the Persian entrenched camp at Borazgoon, when the British army gained a decisive victory against a force much superior in number, and in the face of difficulties which, to use the words of Lord Caning, made conspicuous the energy and promptitude of the commander and the officers associated with him, as well as the courage, discipline, and cheerful endurance of the troops. Captain Bolton, Sub-Assistant Commissary General, at present at Bombay, has been appointed, it is said, to take charge of the Commissariat Office at Hyderabad, the duties connected with which have been hitherto conducted in a very able and satisfactory manner by Captain May Mignon, in addition to his own duties as staff officer. The latter officer is now in Bombay on two months' privilege leave.

Miscellaneous.

THE GOVERNOR.—Sir S. Fitzgerald was expected to arrive at Gunesh Khind from Mahabeshwar on Nov. 29. His Excellency will proceed to Calcutta by sea in a steamer specially fitted out for him.

THE ABYSSINIAN WAR COMMISSION.—Mr. John Candlish, M.P., and Capt. F. Beaumont, Royal Engineers, of the Abyssinian Commission, have arrived in Poona.

ADDRESS TO THE REV. T. K. WEATHERHEAD.—A numerously attended meeting has been held in the Money Institution, Bombay, for the purpose of presenting an address to the Rev. T. K. Weatherhead, on the occasion of his departure for England. There was a large attendance of natives, both Christian and non-Christian, and a small sprinkling of European ladies and gentlemen.

COLONEL PHAYRE.—By letters from Jacobabad, we regret to hear that Colonel Phayre has been suffering for some time from weakness and ill-health, and that in all probability he will be obliged to leave for England next March.

A RICH HINDOO MENDICANT.—Some time ago a Hindoo female mendicant, residing in Bholeshwur-road, Bombay, died without issue. On receiving information Mr. Inspector Price went to the house, and on digging the ground floor found therein concealed gold ornaments and cash of the aggregate value of about Rs. 6,000. Mr. Price made over the property to the administrator-general, Bombay.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.—The Bombay Educational Department is to suffer a reduction to the extent of a lakh and Rs. 25,000 in the recent clippings. The first item of reduction, a native paper thinks, ought to be the allowances of Rs. 30, Rs. 40, and Rs. 50 per mensem to European and Eurasian boys, which are indefensible in principle and inexcusably partial in their operation. This item cost the department more than Rs. 10,000 in 1868-9 alone.

COLLISION ON THE B. B. AND C. I. RAILWAY.—About 6.30 A.M. on Nov. 24 a collision occurred on the B. B. and C. I. Railway, near Bulsar, 125 miles north of Bombay, between a mixed passenger and goods train and a goods train. No passengers are reported to have been injured, but two firemen in the service of the company were hurt—it is stated not seriously. Considerable damage was done to the rolling stock. The cause of the accident is said to have been an error in the telegraph signalling, by which the two trains appear to have been permitted to proceed in opposite directions along the same line.

THE SLAVE TRADE.—It is said that the Arabs who carry on the slave trade are beginning to take shelter under the French flag, which they can do by applying to the French authorities at the small French colonies of Nosibé and others, off the Malgash coast, when, upon payment of a certain sum, they are allowed to hoist the French flag over their slave dhows. We should not be surprised were this to prove true, as we have heard another "it is said," that not all the liberated slaves brought of late to Bombay were slaves at the time of their capture by our ships of war.

THE PERSIAN GULF.—The small squadron was proceeding—though by what stages is not made public—towards Bahrain, but with special designs on certain forts in the vicinity of the old pirate haunt of Eln Katif, and which are said to be held by Wahabees in force. That name will serve as well as any other for antagonists to our gunboats, but there is no tangible evidence yet forthcoming that the Wahabees of Riadh have any designs, except the very intelligible one of full retaliation on Azin bin Ghes for his reckless attack on their outpost of Beyrenne. The ships had proceeded in this order:—H.M.S. Daphne, towing the Bombay marine gunboat Cygnet, and the Nymph was to follow with the Sir Hugh Rose, the Dalhousie being left at Muscat to watch events there. It had been given out that the ships were to call at Bunder Abbas, and the rendezvous was to be at the island of Aigum. This arrangement, we believe, was revised at the last moment, and the ships would make for Henjin, and then decide on the measures to be taken, subject to orders that have doubtless been transmitted from Bombay in the meantime. Intense dissatisfaction still prevailed throughout Oman, because of Azin bin Ghes and his secretaries. Very general desires are expressed for the advent of some relative of the late Inaum; Thowanee Synd Toorkee would be preferred above all, but the Sultan of Zanzibar might be welcome. All classes are thoroughly sick of the present rulers of Muscat.—Times of India.

THE COTTON CROP.—The following report, from the manager of the Mofussil Press and Ginning Company (Limited) is dated Bombay, 26th November, 1869:—In continuation of my former reports I have received the following advices from the cotton districts:—Hingunghat, 24th November.—Rates here are still very high; a Bombay native firm has bought a few candies at Rs. 310 per Bombay candy. The arrivals of cotton are tolerably large and of a good quality, but our opinion is confirmed that the crop is a very small one. Oomrawutte, 24th November.—Only a few docras have made their appearance in our market; the cotton is very leafy and stained. It is expected that all our first picking will be of the same description, but, should no more rain fall, the second picking will be of a far superior quality. Akote, 24th November.—The weather during the past week has been all that could be desired; the crop is progressing favourably and picking will soon commence. Very little business has been done in this bazar during the past week; 500 candies, March delivery, were contracted for at a rate equal to Rs. 290 laid down in Bombay, with an advance of Rs. 60 per candy. Broach, Nov. 25.—The cotton plants are now coming into flower, but beyond a doubt the season will be much better than usual, and we can scarcely hope to see any quantity of cotton in the market before the end of February. The municipal authorities of Broach have levied a tax of eight annas per cart of kuppas coming into the market, which tax the ryot has to pay. As a rule, a cart contains about one bahr of an average value of Rs. 100. The effect of this impost can only be to divert the cotton from a central market, and is thus working in direct opposition to the Cotton Department. Ahmedabad.—The cold season has now set in; the cotton plants continue to be healthy, but it is thought that no cotton will be ready before the end of January.

KHELAT.—It is currently reported that the subjects of the Khan of Khelat are evincing a mutinous spirit, and that the Khan's life is in danger. If this be true, our Political Superintendent on the frontier, Colonel Phayre, C.B., will soon have no very easy work to perform.—Sindian, Nov. 17.

JUDGES OF HIGH COURTS LEAVE RULES.

Nov. 10, No. 2,360.—Read.—Endorsement from the Home Department, No. 1,518, dated the 14th ult., forwarding for consideration and orders a copy of a letter from the Government of the North-Western Provinces, inquiring if "civilian judges of high courts can elect to abide by the old civil leave rules in force before the promulgation of the new rules?"

Resolved.—Premising that the question of the Government of the North-Western Provinces appears to refer to leave on medical certificate, the Governor General in Council observes that, from the rules and minute referred to, it is clear that covenanted civil servants who were judges of high courts on Aug. 7 may take leave on medical certificate under the old rules for covenanted civil servants generally.

FREE HOMEWARD PASSAGES (MILITARY).

No. 1,109.—All officers serving in the Bengal and Madras as well as Bombay presidencies who may be entitled to a free passage, or officers ordered to England on duty or on medical certificate during the troopship season, viz., between October 1 and March 1, and who may be entitled to a passage at the expense of the State, are to proceed to Bombay for transport in one of her Majesty's troopships.

The only circumstances under which such officers will hereafter, between these dates, be permitted to proceed to England otherwise than by her Majesty's troopships, are—

1. When ordered to accompany troops round the Cape.
2. When a medical certificate may declare a passage overland to be positively dangerous to health, and a long sea voyage essentially necessary.
3. When a presidency medical board certificate may in like manner declare that an immediate change to England is urgently necessary, and that the case will not admit of delay until a passage in one of the troopships can be provided.
4. When suffering or recovering from a disease of a contagious nature which a presidency medical board certificate may declare as not admissible on board a troopship.
5. When the officer commanding at Bombay certifies that a passage cannot be provided in any of her Majesty's troopships during the current season, and that the officer's services are not required, or are not available for duty on other vessels taken up for the conveyance of troops to England.

Officers thus proceeding to Bombay in view of being provided with a passage in one of her Majesty's troopships will be allowed a free passage by rail for themselves and for their families.

This order cancels G.G.O. No. 926, dated Sept. 26, 1867; and in future officers who may be allowed to embark where they please under the authority of medical opinion, as laid down in paragraph 2, or who may go home on duty at seasons of the year when troopships do not ply, will be allowed, in lieu of the rates marginally noted [for a field officer, Rs. 1,700; captain, Rs. 1,400; subaltern, Rs. 1,200], the actual cost of a single passage to England by ship or steamer, the same to be drawn in a contingent bill, accompanied by ship agent's acknowledgment that necessary accommodation has been secured. A free passage by rail for themselves and their families to the port of embarkation will also be allowed.

MUNICIPAL.—The following gentlemen have been appointed municipal commissioners for the town of Jamalpore:—Messrs. W. Rouse, R. Heenan, C. Chambers, and N. St. L. Carter, and the Rev. J. C. Love. The officiating chief commissioner is pleased to approve of the election of the undermentioned gentlemen as members of the Nagpore municipal committee:—Messrs. G. Law and J. J. McBride.

DISBANDMENT IN THE ARTILLERY.—The Eurasian battery of artillery has been ordered to be disbanded without delay. The officers and men will be disposed of under orders that will be communicated to the general officer commanding the Eastern Frontier District. The ordnance equipment, arms, &c., will be made over to the ordnance department, and the elephants to the commissariat department at once (November, 1869).

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned candidates are reported to have passed the lower standard in Hindoostanee on Oct. 4:—Cornets L. G. Munday and E. E. Lushington and Private W. ## THE OVERLAND TROOP SERVICE.

Revised instructions for troops passing through Egypt by the Overland service are published in supersession of the rules promulgated with Adjutant-General's Circular No. 81, dated Nov. 8, 1867.

The general officer superintending embarkations at Bombay will call for a certificate from officers commanding regiments and detachments proceeding in her Majesty's troopships, that the regulations regarding the packing, size, fittings, markings, &c., &c., of the baggage of the troops have been carefully attended to.

As affecting the movements of officers in particular, we give the subjoined extracts from the "instructions" prepared with the view of facilitating the passage of the troops through Egypt:—

SUEZ.—As the disembarkation of both troops and baggage at Suez depends on the arrival at Alexandria of H.M.'s troopship, no fixed day can be named for their landing; but in other respects all detailed arrangements for Alexandria will hold equally good at Suez.

The troops and families will disembark on the afternoon of the day succeeding that of the landing of the "heavy" and "cabin" baggage; and they will proceed by railway through Egypt, in two divisions, of strength, as nearly equal as possible, and by separate trains, at one hour's interval. Companies or detachments should not be broken up when it can be avoided.

The first division to be under the command of the second senior officer on board. The second, or head-quarter division, is to be under the officer commanding the troops.

A supply of 200 waterproof coats, and 200 waterproof caps, each fitted with a strong becket for hanging up, will be kept on board for the use of the troops embarking in the two vessels, to be employed between the United Kingdom and Alexandria. They will be placed in charge of the paymaster of the ship, and, when issued by him for use by the troops, the value of any which may be lost—namely, 10s. a coat, and 2s. 2d. a cap—is to be paid to the paymaster of the ship by the officer commanding the troops who may be on board. The military commanding officer is held responsible that they are returned to the paymaster before disembarkation.

Every man, woman, and child over five years of age will be supplied, before leaving the ship, with a ration, consisting of half a pound of cooked preserved meat, and half a pound of biscuit, for consumption on the journey through Egypt; and each child under five years of age will be supplied, before leaving the ship, with a quarter of a pound of fresh bread. Commanding officers should have returns prepared for the numbers of men, women, and children requiring to be supplied with the ration and fresh bread, and should see that each person has the ration in possession before landing from the vessel.

The order of disembarkation at Suez will be similar to that observed at Alexandria, with the following exceptions:—1. The whole of the men, women, and children of the first division will leave the ship's side at the same time, namely, about two P.M., and the whole of the second or head-quarter division an hour later. 2. On the arrival of the small steamers with married families or troops at Suez, they are not to disembark until the receipt of an order to do so from the deputy assistant quartermaster general.

The "light" baggage, which means a carpet-bag or small hand portmanteau, a basket, with rugs or cloak, for each individual officer or lady is to be carried into the carriages by the railway porters.

It should be clearly explained to the troops that the railway porters are at the termini of Alexandria and Suez for the purpose of conveying their "light" baggage from the railway platform to the steamers, and that no remuneration is to be given to them or is expected by them.

The officers to be fairly distributed to look after the men in transit through Egypt, whether the officers belong to the same corps as the men or not.

The officer in command of the troops will, on arrival at port of disembarkation in Egypt, be furnished with a form of "transit return," in duplicate, and will, on re-embarkation, make over the same, duly filled in, to the officer of the quartermaster-general's department for transmission to head-quarters.

On arrival at port of disembarkation in Egypt the officer commanding troops will furnish the deputy quartermaster-general, or his assistant, with the following returns, in duplicate, viz.:—1st. A detailed return, War-office Form, No. 753. 2nd. Disembarkation Return, War-office Forms No. 724, 725, or 726. 3rd. Return of children of non-commissioned officers and rank and file on board H.M.'s Indian troopship. 4th. Return, in triplicate, of the officers' wives and children. 5th. Return of weight and measurement of baggage on board H.M.'s Indian troopship.

This return should show the total weight and measurement of the baggage on board, and should, when practicable, be countersigned by the quartermaster or other officer who has seen it weighed or measured in this country or in India. The total quantity of baggage belonging to the several detachments on board to be given in one line, that of the regiment on board being shown separately.

The military commanding officer on board, on arrival at Alexandria or at Suez, is to furnish the officer of the quartermaster-general's department in Egypt with a nominal list, in duplicate, according to a form which will be supplied, of all officers' wives and families for whom conveyance across the Isthmus of Suez is required. The expenses of their railway transit through Egypt are chargeable against the officers, who will pay all such expenses before landing in England, or in India, to the paymaster of the ship in which the voyage is completed.

The charges for the messing of their families on board ship are also to be paid by the officers for each separate half of the voyage to the paymasters of the ships before landing. Officers embarked must be careful to comply with the instructions contained in clause 24, Army Circulars, 1868, and see that their messing certificates are properly signed by the commander or paymaster of the ships before landing.

Charges for loss or damage to stores or mess utensils on board H.M.'s Indian troopship are to be settled as shown at paragraph 1,274, Queen's Regulations. In case of wilful damage being committed by officers, a special report of the circumstances is to be made by the officer in command of the troops to the quartermaster-general at head-quarters through the officer superintending the disembarkation of the troops.

DIVORCE CASE.—The Mofussilite remarks that the divorce suit of Colonel Gordon v. Mrs. Gordon and Lord William Hay was disposed of by the Commissioner on the 19th Nov.—a decree nisi, with costs against Lord William Hay.

THE OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The report of the Oude and Rohilkund Railway Company (Limited) has been issued for the half-year ending 30th June last. The revenue account gives the gross earnings as £10,930. 15s. 8d., and the gross expenditure £9,619. 13s. 2d. The capital paid up amounts to £1,591,930. 16s. 5d., and the total expenditure has been £472,631. 9s. 5d., leaving a balance in hand, in cash and stores, on the 30th June, of £1,119,308. 7s. The progress made in the new works has been satisfactory, and the locomotive superintendent reports the rolling stock generally to be in good and efficient condition. An arrangement has been made with the East Indian Railway Company to carry 16,000 tons of materials, to Benares, and the lines for the junction with that railway at Cawnpore and for crossing the Ramganga out of Bareilly have been settled.

MR. HAYWARD'S TRAVELS.

At the Royal Geographical Society's meeting on Dec. 13 Mr. Hayward's account of his visit to Eastern Turkistan was read and illustrated by maps and sketches forwarded from India. Mr. Hayward left Leh Sept. 29, and proceeded by the Chang Chenmo Pass, 18,839 feet high, to Shadula, in lat. N. 36 deg. 21m. 11s., long E. 78 deg. 18m., 360 miles from Leh, the frontier fort of Eastern Turkistan, 14,745 feet high, which is divided from the dominions of the Maharajah of Kashmir by the Karakorum range. Mr. Shaw had, unknown to Mr. Hayward, arrived a few days before. The travellers were detained while a messenger was sent forward to obtain permission for them to enter the country. The opportunity was taken to explore the sources of the Yarkand Daria, beyond the Khirgiz Pass, 17,095 feet high. From this a view of the Eastern Kuen Luen peaks was obtained, 90 miles away; the course of the river was traced and positions proved. A new pass, called the Yangi Pass, over the Kuen Luen, was observed, and described as practicable for horses, and easily made practicable for carriages, and even for guns. It is at present exposed to the depredations of robbers from Hunza Nagyr, which render it insecure and little used. Twenty days were spent in this exploration, and 300 miles of mountain districts explored. One peak rising to 28,278 feet was observed from a spur of Kuen Luen Mountains. The source of the Yarkand River, in lat. 35 deg. 37 min. 34 sec. N., lon. 77 deg. 50 min. E., was reached on December 8. At a height of 16,654 feet above the sea the cold experienced was intense. The thermometer the following morning showed the mercury to have sunk to a level with the bulb, or 18 deg. below zero. Having returned to Shadula, he found that permission had come for his advance to Yarkand, and started on December the 18th to reach that place by the Sanju Pass. Mr. Hayward described the Khirgizes, the Bedouins of Turkistan, from whom he experienced kindness and hospitality, as throughout the country seems to have been the case. From Shadula yaks were provided, on which the travellers crossed the Sanju Pass. The Turhi villages present a comfortable appearance. The country is well cultivated, and the people well to do. The dress, &c., of the different classes was carefully described. Slaves are still owned by some; but the former slave trade at Yarkand has been suppressed by Yakoob Kushbegi. Between Sanju and Yarcand a sandy steppe was crossed, the commencement of a desert called Tahlā Makān Desert, stretching to the east, towards the Gobi Desert. Strange legends of former cities, now buried in the sand, were related by the Panja Bashi. Yarkand was entered on December 27. It is described as a parallelogram of two miles by one and a-half, containing 40,000 houses, 120 mosques, and 120,000 inhabitants. It is defended by mud walls forty-five feet high, with bastions, and an outlying fort. The ruler of Yarkand, Muhammed Yakoob (Kushbegi), "Atali Ghazee" of Eastern Turkistan, was at his camp near Kashgar. The Governor of the city, "a well-informed, pleasant, well-read man," received Mr. Hayward with much courtesy. A house was assigned him, and plentiful supplies furnished him; but he was not allowed, except on visits to the Governor, to leave the courtyard of his house during the two months he remained in Yarkand.

February 24th, Mr. Hayward proceeded to Kashgar, which is a strong town of 60,000 to 70,000 people, the central point of all the Central Asia roads. The next day he was received by the ruler, who by his bravery and military talents has raised himself to the chief authority over Eastern Turkistan. His character and abilities impressed Mr. Hayward so much, that he says, were Central Asia undisturbed by foreign pressure, he would be another Zenghis Khan. He received the traveller kindly, and spoke of his desire for visits from Englishmen, who had hitherto been prevented from visiting his country by the Bokhara tragedy. He also alluded to the death of Adolph Schlagintweit, but did not mention that he had himself killed Hullee Khan, the murderer of Schlagintweit, two years ago. Mr. Hayward remained a month in Kashgar, vainly hoping to get permission to proceed to the Pamir Steppe, but was obliged to abandon the attempt. The position of Kashgar was fixed by him at and 76 deg. 10m. E. long., at an elevation of 4,165 feet. He concluded by some account of the revolt against the Chinese dominion, which, after lasting a hundred years, was overthrown in 1863; after which the present ruler, with his Uzbek troops, defeated the Tunganis, and successively made himself master of the different places, and is now master of the country. But his tenure is precarious, and his fear of assassination causes him to change his apartment every hour during the night.—In the ensuing discussion, the president stated that, so far from Russia regarding our commercial entrance into Eastern Turkistan with jealousy, the Czar and Prince Gortschakoff had both assured Mr. Forsyth that so long as the Atali Ghazee confined himself to the country south of the Tian Shan Russia would not interfere with Eastern Turkistan.—The president also pointed out that Mr. Hayward's discoveries had confirmed A. von Humboldt's theory as to the salient points of the mountain systems of Central Asia. Mr. Hayward was about starting to explore the Pamir Steppe, by way of Ghilghit.—Sir H. Rawlinson mentioned that he was enabled to state that the Indian Government were about to arrange with the Maharajah of Kashmir to send officers to survey the routes to the frontier of Turkistan; and intended afterwards to enter into negotiations with the Atali Ghazee for the same purpose, as to the routes in his dominions. It is understood that Russia has not recognised the Atali Ghazee, regarding him as a rebel against the empire of China—an ally of Russia.

Miscellaneous.

A RUMOUR.—General Ramsay will probably succeed Colonel Fyche as Chief Commissioner in Burmah.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—The next examination of candidates for appointments as assistant-surgeons in her Majesty's Indian medical service will be held at Chelsea Hospital on the 7th of February next.

RUSSIAN TRADE VIA SUEZ.—It is said that a Russian line of steamers from the Black Sea to Bombay, via the Suez Canal, is about to be established, with contracts already made by one house at Moscow to ship 4,000 bales of cotton per week.

INDIAN TRAMWAY COMPANY (LIMITED).—At the meeting on Monday of the Indian Tramway Company (Limited) a resolution was passed in favour of the undertaking being wound up voluntarily, for the purpose of forming two new companies, one to take over the Carnatic lines guaranteed by the Indian Government, and the other the Pondicherry lines, relative to which negotiations are pending with the French Government.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £387,500 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 15th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta £287,500, and to Madras £100,000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, viz., at 1s. 11d. on Calcutta and Madras. Tenders on those presidencies at 1s. 11½d. received about 7 per cent., above that price in full. These results show that the demand for remittance to the East is a little in excess of that noticed on the last occasion.

THE LATE AGRA AND MASTERMAN'S BANK.—It is announced by the committee of shareholders of the late Agra and Masterman's Bank (Limited), that an arrangement has been made under which the Agra Bank (Limited) have agreed to take over the interest of shareholders in the surplus assets of the former institution at the rate of £4. 15s. per share, by an immediate cash payment. The arrangement will be open for the acceptance of shareholders resident in Europe up to and including the 31st inst.

THE EUROPEAN ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—A circular has been issued from the guarantee department of the European Assurance Society, stating that the board have passed a resolution in accordance with the opinion expressed at the general meeting of shareholders held on the 18th ult., to the effect that the sum of £10,000 should be forthwith set apart as a special fund to meet guarantee claims as they may accrue, and that the sum shall be annually increased till it reaches the amount of £50,000.

THE DUCHESS OF ARGYLL.—It will be gratifying to many of our readers to learn that the Duchess of Argyll has so far improved that there are hopes of her recovery. Dr. Radcliff, of London, who accompanied Sir James Simpson to Inverary on Thursday, left the Castle on Saturday morning, and passed through Greenock that afternoon on his return to London. The Duke of Sutherland and a younger brother of the Duchess also took their departure from Inverary on Saturday, and passed through Greenock in the afternoon.—Scotsman.

SCINDE RAILWAY COMPANY.—The Scinde Railway Company directors report that the gross receipts during the half-year ending 30th June last amounted to £43,000. 16s. 6d., and the working expenses to £28,193. 5s., leaving a net revenue of £14,808. 1s. 6d. The reports as to the Flotilla and the Punjab and Delhi lines are satisfactory. With regard to the proposed Indus Valley Railway required to connect the upper and lower portions of the company's line, and to unite the whole of the company's system in one continuous railway, the Secretary of State for India in Council had decided that that railway should be constructed by the direct agency of Government. The directors regretted this decision, as they were convinced that the early completion of the Indus Valley Railway as a through line was essential to the complete success of the sections already constructed.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—An official report on the Suez Canal has just been presented to the Admiralty by the hydrographer, from which we quote the following extracts:—"For five miles in the worst parts of Lake Timsah constant dredging, we are told, will be required until means are found to keep the banks solid enough to prevent the water communicating. . . . Thirty-five miles of the Canal is subject to sand-drifting. . . . The constant ebb and flow of the water between the Lake and the Canal carrying large quantities of sand with it, is constantly altering the depth of water. . . . The debris banks here, like those in Lake Ballah, are not adhesive enough to keep the silt from running into the channel. . . . With a flood tide a great quantity of silt pours into the Canal from the sandbank on the east side of the entrance. . . . On twenty-one and a-half miles of the Canal there is either dredging or embanking work going on. From this it may be gathered that there must be a constant fight maintained with the natural causes ever working to fill up what M. de Lesseps has so scientifically excavated, and that an enormous amount of work remains still to be done before the Canal can be considered fit for brisk and continuous traffic. The paddle-wheel steamer Peru, in going at eight knots through the Canal, is described as producing an excessive commotion in the water of a character highly dangerous to the banks, and as swamping small boats by the wave she made; and screw-steamers going from four to six knots an hour are mentioned as all that can be safely counted on until the Canal is enlarged and its banks secured. The inevitable delays that must needs occur from vessels having to pass each other so cautiously are also adverted to; and the danger of one ship alone blocking up the passage of the Canal is thus described:—‘In the tidal part near Suez, if a vessel is passing through with a following tide, and the bow touches either bank, there will be great danger of her swinging across the Canal.’ It is to be feared, therefore, that the rumours we have heard of the Suez Canal being virtually only in its infancy, are but too well founded. That the day will come when the Peninsular and Oriental Company will be permitted to send their mail steamers at nearly full speed through the Canal is probable enough, and a great advantage it will be to them to be enabled to do so. But many years must elapse before this desirable end is arrived at, and in the meantime the great company must be content to disembark its mails and passengers at Alexandria and Suez. With regard to the conveyance of passengers and mails the Suez Canal will, we learn, be of no assistance to the Peninsular and Oriental Company. Even if the evident risk of steamers sticking in the Canal were obviated, the much greater rapidity of transit across the Isthmus by the railway would commend itself too forcibly to the Postmaster-General and to the public to be ignored by the company. The mail steamers will still have to go to Alexandria to take on board and to disembark the mails and the impatient passengers; such, at least, is the present impression of the company. Possibly at some future time it may be feasible for vessels to steam through the Canal at ten knots an hour, in which case it would hardly be worth while disembarking the mails and passengers at all in Egypt.”

DR. LEITNER'S EXPERIENCES.—At a recent meeting of the Anthropological Society Dr. Leitner gave some further details of his visit to Dardistan in 1866, especially referring to the Shina race. He briefly touched upon the main outlines of his journey, mentioning that his experience had modified his views as to the inconvenience resulting from the rarification of the air at high altitudes, inasmuch as he and his companions had surmounted passes of 18,000 feet without experiencing any of the usual effects. Although the Dards were at war with the Maharajah of Kashmir, and the towns apparently deserted, he was able to assemble, by sending round a drummer, 150 to a feast, and continued on most friendly terms with them during his abode in Ghilghit. The vocabularies and grammars of the hitherto unwritten Dardoo dialects which he has collected show a probably parental Aryan type. It is to be much regretted that the refusal of the India-office to grant an extension of leave to Dr. Leitner will compel his return to India within a fortnight, and almost deprive him of the opportunity of arranging and comparing these hitherto unknown languages. The Indian Government does not seem desirous of encouraging acquaintance with Central Asia. A traveller desirous of penetrating by Ghilghit to the Pamir Steppe had recently been refused mules. Several interesting particulars of the customs among the Chilas Ghilghites and other Dards were mentioned, which are alien to Mahomedan and Hindu ideas. The place and privileges accorded to women, who receive the visits of their husband's friends without any suspicion—the custom of courtship, the use of wine, the fondness for dogs—all seem to point to an independent origin of religion and manners. The value set upon dogs was illustrated by the fact that two men-slaves were given as the price of a good hound. The Sooni ruler of Chitral not merely sold his subjects, but his own mother, as a slave, and when asked how he could sell her whose breasts had suckled him, pointed to a cow, and said that she gave him milk constantly, yet he would sell her! and when a Moolah, who was to be sold, threatened him with vengeance for selling a minister of the Word of God, he replied that everybody sold the Koran—why, therefore, should he not sell the expounder of it. Dr. Leitner stated that the Kafirs were certainly fairer than the Kashmiris, but his experience hardly bore out the statement of their being exceptionally fair with blue eyes and light hair. West of Balti the general type of face approximated more to the European. He could discover no religion or rites among them, save that once a year each deposited a stone on a cairn, situated on a high mountain. He found a species of caste division among the Shinas, but the different castes intermarry and eat together. He narrated a curious Shina legend of a Shinari, who fell in with a company of one-eyed demons, and was a witness of a demoniacal wedding. A very numerous and interested assembly listened with marked approval; and in reply to various questions, Dr. Leitner further stated that he had not remarked any megalithic or Druidic remains. The countries were traversed by him rather with a view to linguistic and philological discoveries. The houses were meanly constructed; the food evinced a rough skill in cookery; every Dard family seemed to possess a cavern, the secret of which was known only to them, and they thus had plentiful supplies of food, which they shared with him, while the Maharajah's sepoys were starving. Strong opinions were expressed as to the refusal of extension of leave to Dr. Leitner, and a resolution was unanimously passed calling upon the Government to take measures to aid and encourage travellers to visit these little-known regions of Central Asia. Dr. Leitner altogether denied the statement quoted from the Invalide Russe, that he had visited Herat or taken part in the battle of Samarcand.

ENGLISH HOMES IN INDIA.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE
TO THE POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY
LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. . . .
And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."
—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume.
It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Reviewer.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impassioned manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Cough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . .
Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshuhur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene.
Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation.
Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late Bridge's) ESSENCE or FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA, prescribed by the Faculty for purifying the blood, debility, liver complaints, and freeing the system from the effects of mercury. Exclusively used in India and the Colonies as a prevention to tropical diseases.

"Superior preparation that may always be relied upon."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

Sold in quarter, half, and pint bottles.
CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

QUINTESSENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unfailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea, daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the raking fire of fever and dysentery that thinned the ranks around them.

Sold in half and quarter-pint bottles.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.

Cures out of number of Asthma, Consumption, Cough, and other Disorders of the Lungs, are constantly published from persons who had been in the last stage of disease, "given up as incurable," &c., and were restored to health by this medicine; and the names and addresses of the writers are always given in full.

Dr. Locock's Wafers are sold by all Druggists at 1s. 1½d. per Box.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

No DISTRUST.—Public opinion speaks in no feeble or uncertain voice concerning the merits of these Pills for purifying the blood, regulating the action of different organs, and strengthening the human body generally. Holloway's Pills have gained a reputation for curing disorders of the stomach, diseases of the kidneys, and affections of the brain and nerves, previously unexampled in the history of medicine. An important matter regarding these Pills is that the invalid, by reading the accompanying "directions for use," can determine the proper dose, decide upon the right diet, and other accessory matters, which will render him proficient in successfully treating any disorder or disease by which he may be threatened or already assailed.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—

JUDGED BY THE IMMENSE DEMAND, this Universal Remedy now stands the first in public favour and confidence; this result has been acquired by the test of fifty years' experience. These Lozenges may be found on sale in every British colony. For coughs, asthma, and all affections of the throat and chest, they are the most agreeable and efficacious remedy.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.

Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

Sold in tins and bottles of various sizes.

"Frankton.
"My dear Sir,—I am happy to inform you that the Worm Tablets you kindly sent me have, with the blessing of God, perfectly cured my boy. I esteem it, therefore, an act of pure justice and candour that I should acquaint you with the happy result. You are at liberty to make this statement public for the benefit of others who may be similarly afflicted.—With feelings of gratitude, I remain, yours truly,
"JOHN S. TORR."

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1861, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d. Umbilical, 12s. and 16s. d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 4; Agra and Calcutta, November 30; Madras, November 29.

On November 26 Mr. John Strachey brought in his Bill for improving and cheapening the production of salt in Upper and Central India. He was forced to own that the working of the present fiscal rules had caused an artificial salt famine, so that within the salt customs' line only  $6\frac{1}{2}$  lbs. of salt were consumed per head, whereas in the salt-bearing districts outside the line the consumption was all but doubled. The new Bill aimed at remedying this unpleasant state of things, by multiplying the main sources of supply, and providing cheap means of access to those sources by rail. One of these lines will connect Agra with the great Salt Lake of Sambhur, newly leased from the Jeypore Rajah; another will join Delhi to the Salt Fields of Sultanpore, in Oudh; a third will tap the Salt Ranges of the Punjab; and a fourth is to fill up the gap between Mooltan and Roree, on the left bank of the Indus. Improved methods of making and storing the salt are also indicated in this Bill. By these means Mr. Strachey expects to diminish smuggling, and add a million to the revenue from the consequent increase in the consumption of salt. The liberal conduct of the Maharajah of Jeypore in the matter of the Sambhur Lake evoked some flattering comments from Mr. Strachey and Sir H. Durand.

In the debate on the Income-tax Bill the Maharajah of Jeypore declared that the tax was odious to the people of India. In the present crisis however he would say nothing against it as a convenient makeshift. Sir Henry Durand spoke still more strongly to the same effect. Sir R. Temple of course insisted that, so far from being odious to the people at large, it only concerned a very small section of the public, about one in every thousand, and a large proportion of these were not natives.

SIR H. DURAND had his sling also at the "notorious dilatoriness" of the Government, which ought long since to have furnished India with at least as many railways and canals as she has now. He pointed out that two thousand miles of rail are laid in America in the time taken to lay two hundred in India. Sir Henry further declared that the projected reductions in military outlay had been sketched by the Secretary of State for India some months before the small surplus turned out to be a large deficit. In spite however of these retrenchments, he affirmed that not one tittle of India's effective strength would be impaired. Not a man would be taken from the frontier force, nor would a single military post be abandoned.

CALCUTTA is in all the bustle of preparation for an early visit from the Duke of Edinburgh, who would probably land there between the 12th and 14th of this month. Of public enthusiasm there is not much proof, in the way of money subscriptions, which by last accounts were only £2,300. Lord Mayo however means to do the honours of the Empire in princely style, so far as his own purse will let him. Calcutta itself will be illuminated—a sight worth seeing from Fort William or the Esplanade. A series of entertainments will be given at Government House, a great durbar will be held, and the Viceroy will invest the Duke with the badge of a Grand Commander of the Star of India. The latter will probably look in at Allahabad, Agra, Delhi, and Lahore. He will come in for some good shooting in Oudh, will afterwards open the united line from Allahabad to Bombay, and will start from the latter place on his homeward voyage.

AMONG the latest notifications in the Gazette of India is one from the Public Works Department on the subject of coal for railways. So great is the distance which the Burdwan coal has to travel before it can be used on the Delhi and Punjab lines, and so much waste occurs on the journey, that coal for those lines could be got cheaper, thinks Colonel Strachey, direct from England through Kurrachee. It would however be possible to save 20 per cent. of the present cost by means of washing and pressing the coal at the pit's mouth; and an attempt in that direction is about to be made. Another source of cheap fuel seems to have revealed itself among the rugged rocks of the Salt Range in the Punjab. If the petroleum wells of that region only yield half their expected supply, both coal and wood may ere long be superseded for railway use by an inflammable oil that would do the work of either at far less cost.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times of India expresses serious alarm for the safety of the new sown crops in Rajpootana. Wherever he goes across country he finds "numbers of little locusts leaping about." They seemed to be daily gaining strength in spite of the cold weather, which ought to have killed them, and in some places were even beginning to fly in great numbers. If they should continue to survive the cold, "there can be little doubt that they will do great damage to the springing crops." The same writer admits that no one else seemed to share his anxiety, and we can but trust that the general indifference will prove to have better warrant than his forebodings.

ACCORDING to a correspondent of the Bombay Gazette, at least half-a-million people have died of famine in Rajpootana. And the mischief, as usual, has not ended with the famine. Its after-fruits, in the shape of fever and dysentery, are now being gathered in their turn. A writer in one journal declares that in many places half the population are unfit for work through disease. From another paper it seems that for the last two or three months "a most persistent fever and murrain, or swelling of the limbs and face, caused by living on grass seed," has been slaying the villagers to the number of ten or twelve per cent. in October alone. No wonder that the poor people are said to have lost heart!

WHAT India has already gained from the extension of her foreign trade since the beginning of the American Civil War may be gathered from the fact that in eight years the imports of bullion into Bombay amounted to £48,735,000, a good deal of which must have found its way into the cotton-fields of Western India. Some of the wealth thus circulated was soon lost to the cotton-growers themselves, whose sudden enrichment tended to illustrate the proverb about a beggar on horseback. Enough however remained, according to Mr. Rivett-Carnac, to effect a marked improvement in the condition of the people at large. Earthen vessels were replaced by brazen ones; wells were everywhere dug, trees planted, new land brought under the plough, mud huts gave way to houses of brick or stone, and everybody was better fed and better clad. As one old grumbler declared, "every cooly took to dressing himself like a Brahmin." Weddings, even among the lowest classes, became costlier and costlier, and more and more defiant of old caste traditions. The very Chumars or leather-dressers assumed an independent bearing, and struck work throughout whole districts, until the Mallies, or gardeners, consented to furnish them with real flowers for their wedding garlands, which had hitherto for ages past been woven only of sham flowers. The barbers again refused to shave the carpenters, until these latter agreed to adorn their marriage ceremonies with some kind of woodwork hitherto forbidden them by caste rules. The Dhers, a caste still viler than the Chumars, successfully asserted their right to employ ponies instead of bullocks at their marriage processions. But, alas for human consistency, these very outcasts in their turn resisted with all their might the attempts of a yet lower caste, the Mhangs, to follow their example.

So low in the social scale is or was the position of these same Dhers, that some years ago no man of that caste could appear in public in Guzerat without trailing behind him a bramble-bush "to wipe out the trace of his obnoxious footsteps." The dwellings of Dhers and Mhangs were fixed outside the village-walls, and at Poona in the Peishwah's time a strict order forbade all men of those castes from entering the city before nine A.M., or remaining there after four P.M. Not long ago in some parts of India no Dher was allowed to give his evidence before a native magistrate from inside the court-house walls. Even now, in parts of the Central Provinces, the Dher who meets an English officer or a native of rank, first rubs his nose on the ground, and then stands on one leg, with his shoes in his hand, as if to indicate his utter unworthiness to breathe the same air with a being so infinitely above him. His right however to travel in the same railway-carriage with a high-caste native is now practically admitted, and it is pleasant to hear that the children of Dhers and Brahmins have come to read together in the same Government schools. In this respect Europe, or at any rate England, is still a century or two behind India. And yet we are always crying out against the enormity of caste distinctions!

The progress of general education in the North-West Provinces seems by Mr. Kempson's latest report to be still slow. In some of the higher schools, according to one inspector, the staff of teachers, especially of English teachers, is too "weak and inexperienced" for the work of educating up to the University Entrance Examination. Another inspector makes a similar complaint of the schools in his district. Of the higher class schools only seven sent up candidates for Entrance. Of the sixty-six who went up to be examined, forty-nine passed; but the weak point both with the successful and the rejected candidates lay in English and Mathematics. It is therefore argued that the North-West is still unfit for a University of its own, and must either continue to seek enlightenment from Calcutta, or coalesce with the Punjab, which has also been vainly trying to get up a local university. Sir W. Muir however seems still bent on carrying out his own scheme of an embryo university at Allahabad. He proposes to form all Fellows in his province into a Syndicate for holding examinations and granting degrees at that place. This offshoot from Calcutta would in time expand into a separate university for the special encouragement of Oriental as well as English learning. Sir William has already found a few zealous supporters among the native nobles of his province. The Nawab of Rampore for one has just given him ten thousand rupees towards the building of a college at Allahabad, besides four thousand eight hundred for the endowment of two scholarships of ten rupees a month each for Arabic students in the same. Another benefactor is the Rajah of Benares, who writes, apparently in English, to inform Mr. Shakespeare that he "will very happily subscribe Rs. 5,000 for the Allahabad University, which please intimate to the Hon. Sir W. Muir." That gentleman is left free to lay out the money "either in building expenses, giving scholarships, or paying the salary of a pundit for teaching Sanskrit, just as his Honour may think proper." The Rajah of Rewah has also subscribed handsomely. If a few more noblemen and gentlemen would follow the liberal example thus set, the question of a university for Upper India would speedily solve itself. We want more of these institutions to serve as counterweights to the one at Calcutta.

MR. J. W. WYLLIE's able defence of Sir John Lawrence's Afghan policy in the Fortnightly Review for this month was cleverly assailed on certain points by Major Evans Bell in the Daily News. It was easy however to answer an assailant whose zeal in picking holes outstripped his special knowledge; and in the Daily News of last Monday Major Bell is answered accordingly. A less rash and reckless assailant would have shrunk from a combat so manifestly unequal, so far, at any rate, as facts were in question. It was a sad mistake, for instance, to twit Mr. Wyllie with misrepresenting the true nature of our treaty obligations towards Afghanistan. Lord Dalhousie's Foreign Secretary must have known all about the treaties he helped to draw up; and unlucky was the hour in which his opponent set up his own unaided reading of the Treaty of 1855 against that of so qualified an interpreter. Touching the pledge of "perpetual peace and friendship with the heirs of the said Ameer," Lord Lawrence himself assured Mr. Wyllie that Dost Mohammed's eldest son, Gholam Hyder, had striven hard but in vain to get himself specially named as his father's heir. The Indian Government refused to pledge itself to any particular heir. Its engagement was avowedly made with the dynasty of the Barukzai Dost Mohammed, not with Gholam Hyder, or Shere Ali, or Azim Khan individually. No excuse therefore was needed for any delay in recognising Shere Ali; but the fact is that his sovereignty was recognised as soon as it appeared to be an accomplished fact; as soon, that is, as he had succeeded in stamping it on the minds of his unruly subjects. It is almost needless to add that Major Bell's delusion about the secret unfriendliness of the Government towards Shere Ali is utterly exploded by the publication of the letter in which Sir W. Denison, as acting Viceroy, acknowledges that prince as his father's successor.

WE are happy to announce the appointment of Mr. T. L. Secombe, Financial Secretary at the India Office, to a Civil Companionship of the Bath. Mr. Secombe has held his present post ever since the transfer of India to the Crown; but for many years before that event he had made his mark in the same department as an efficient and highly-valued officer of the East India Company.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, December 29, 1869.

TEN YEARS OF INDIAN GOVERNMENT.*

THE end of Lord Lawrence's viceregal career happens to synchronise so closely with the end of the first ten years of Indian administration under the Crown, that a connected review of India's progress during that busy period would naturally suggest itself to many minds as a work well worth the attempting. It is a period long enough for measuring the extent, direction, and rate of change between the India of Lord Dalhousie and the India of to-day. If there has been no real solution of continuity, if recent events are mainly the natural outcome of pre-existent tendencies, still it may be allowed that the cataclysm caused by the mutiny serves to mark off two distinct epochs of Indian history. The transfer of India from the Company to the Crown in 1858 furnishes the historian with a fresh starting-point in that career of dominion which had hitherto led, by natural stages, from Clive up to Dalhousie. It marks off, as it were, a century of outward growth from the new era of internal concentration. A new tradition has replaced the old; an age of conquest has been followed by an era of peaceful and philanthropic legislation. The first decade of Royal rule has stamped the destinies of British India with a colouring at once distinctive and ineffaceable. For ten years past India has been diligently studying the arts of peace and civilised wellbeing under the careful guidance of energetic masters, who have striven, however lamely, to govern her for her own good. Her progress in these respects, aided on the whole by favouring circumstances, has already placed her outwardly at so great a distance from her former self, that those Anglo-Indians who are old enough to compare past with present are amazed at the contrast thus suggested after the lapse of so short an interval. So much of noteworthy has happened in those ten years, that no excuse can be needed for the chronicler who would work up into a connected narrative, at once concise and comprehensive, the mass of documents already available for such a purpose.

In undertaking a task so serviceable, yet so far from easy, the writer of the work before us had some advantages, which certainly enhance the value of what he has accomplished. Mr. Prichard has spent, we believe, many years in the country whose recent history forms the subject of his book: his conclusions have been gathered from more than one field of action; and his native shrewdness has helped him to make the best use of opportunities for learning not too often enjoyed by his fellow-countrymen. To most officials, as with some truth he observes, "the native mind is a sealed book. They are allowed to see exactly as much as the people by whom they are surrounded . . . think fit to let them see, and no more." As an independent journalist, Mr. Prichard must have learned to correct and enlarge the judgments he had previously formed as a member of the official class. It may be indeed that his later experiences have somewhat blinded him to the better traits of Anglo-Indian officialism, and have led him to make too much of the faults which it only shares in common with official life in all countries. But the pressure of the system in India is immensely aggravated to outsiders by the absence of any counteractive force in the shape of a powerful middle class, either native or European; and it is idle to wonder at the bitterness which so often infects the unofficial Englishman's tone and manner towards the great community of black and white Brahmans, that enforces the despotism of the Central Government. Shivering under the cold shade of a system that all but ignores his presence, and seeing as he does so much of its worse and weaker sides, he would be a monster of clearheaded impartiality if his judgment did not lean more or less noticeably to the side of his special experiences. With the bulk of Mr. Prichard's criticisms and reflections, however, we are by no means inclined to disagree. His estimates of men like Canning, Sir John Lawrence, Lord Clyde, Sir W. Denison, are such as a cool, candid, well-informed observer would be likeliest on the whole to shape out. To the splendid military genius of Sir Hugh Rose he has taken care to render the justice claimed for him by previous historians. His account of the White Mutiny forms a rare exception to the impartial temper that marks his treatment of such difficult questions as the Indigo Dispute in Bengal, the Mysore Grant, the Orissa Famine, the Oudh and Punjab Tenancy Bills, the currency reforms, and so on. In denouncing the absurd extravagance of the Public Works Department, which charges ten annas, for example, for every nail driven into a soldier's cot, Mr. Prichard does but re-echo the universal opinion of Englishmen outside the official pale. An amusing instance of the way in which knowing contractors may fleece the Government, is the story he tells about a certain contract for railway sleepers. A railway company paid five rupees for every sleeper to a man who underlet the contract, which a second party underlet to a third, and so on until the lowest bidder did the job for a rupee and a half per sleeper, at a profit even then of eight to twelve annas. Among independent Englishmen of any experience nobody doubts that twenty-five per cent. of the outlay on public works might easily be saved, if anything like an honest and earnest effort were made to stop up the sources of the present waste.

Mr. Prichard's remarks on the European mutiny of 1859 betray a curious inability to understand the just grievances of the old Company's Europeans, who by a stroke of the pen were transferred "like a lot of horses" from one master to another. He seems to forget that the Guarantee Clause in the Act of 1858 covered the existing rights and privileges alike of men and officers. The injustice of an unconditional transfer was none the less real because the youngest soldiers were the noisiest complainants, and because the resentment felt by all alike took in their case the form of open defiance. The impolicy of such a measure was even more glaring than its injustice, and the Government eventually paid many times over for its misplaced economy at the first. On the other hand, we may note how clearly the same writer exposes the unjust withholding from the Indian officers of all real compensation for the death blow given to the bonus system by the amalgamation of the two Armies and the formation of a separate Staff Corps. His exposition of the blunders made from time to time in the reconstruction of the old Indian Army betrays thorough mastery of a most complicated question, and fairly exemplifies Mr. Prichard's power of decomposing huge masses of mingled fact and fallacy into their pristine elements. The place of the finer sympathies in which he is mostly wanting is often supplied by a hard-headed scorn for sophistry, or a lawyerlike mistrust of sounding commonplaces. He is not to be taken in by showy counterfeits of self-government, like that concocted by the authors of the Municipal Committee Act of 1868, nor will he blame the Indian Government for raising a handsome revenue from opium, if they would only raise it all in the form of an excise duty. He insists that Sir John Lawrence ought to have spurred the Bengal Government into timely action with regard to the Orissa famine, but he firmly deprecates all interference under present conditions in the affairs of Afghanistan. If he questions the wisdom of a large outlay on new barracks in the plains, or sneers, with one school of thinkers, at the late Viceroy's policy towards the landowners, or charges him with the usual hostility of his class to the growth of an independent white community in India, he also avows his contentment with the purpose and results of last year's campaign in the Black Mountain, admits that Sir John brought the Bhotan imbroglio to the best ending possible under the circumstances, and ascribes the internal peacefulness of India during his rule to the awe in which he was held alike by the native feudatories and the neighbouring princes.

Mr. Prichard has been fortunate in the eventful character of the period embraced in his narrative. Poor enough in warlike interest, it teemed with a rare succession of incidents far more suited to the taste of an inquiring reader. No writer of ordinary talent could have failed to produce something readable about a period which extends from the last days of Tania Topee to the end of the campaign in the Black Mountain, a period which includes the great famines of 1861 and 1866, the Umbeylah and Bhotan campaigns, the growth and collapse of the Bombay cotton mania, the progress of tea culture in Bengal and Upper India, the Indigo disturbances, the spread of railways and canals, the introduction of the Penal Code, the great impulse given by the new order of things political to the mental, social, and material life of all Hindustan. All these subjects are handled by Mr. Prichard with the pen of a well-informed critic and an informing writer. The two chapters on recent legislation and those on finance do equal credit to his painstaking research and his power of lucid exposition. The chapter on education is full of suggestive details, and the one on sanitation condenses the substance of many Blue-books and medical or official papers into one useful summary. The history of social progress is somewhat meagre on the native side; no place being found for the name of Keshab Chandar Sen in the few sentences devoted to Brahmoism, while pages are given to an amusing but overloaded picture, in Mr. Kinglake's manner, of Anglo-Indian society, its cliques, and its general tone of self-seeking, exclusive officialism. The general level of an easy, if not very graceful or nervous style, is relieved by frequent touches of dry humour, and by occasional oases of picturesque beauty, such as the account of Lord Elgin's last journey and death, the description of the English soldier's life in an Indian barrack, and the tale of the Secundra Orphanage. With regard to the twofold method of treating his theme, an arrangement tending to incompleteness at one moment and repetition at another, opinions are sure to differ; but we think that anyhow the writer will be generally credited with having produced two readable and very instructive volumes out of a bewildering excess of raw material. To all who would know what India has been doing in the last ten years these volumes will be found to furnish a detailed and generally sufficient answer.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officers are reported by the board of examiners at Fort William to have passed the tests specified, on Nov. 1, agreeably to G.G.O. No. 734, of 1864:—High Proficiency in Hindoe: Lieut. R. N. Franks, 1st battalion 3rd foot; Higher Standard in Hindoostanee; Lieut. J. J. Congdon, R.A.; Capt. and local major G. T. Osborn, 1st battalion 11th foot; Lieut. A. W. Gordon (2nd wing subaltern 2nd N.I.) 2nd battalion 12th foot.

THE FINANCIAL PANIC.

The Madras Times observes that the extreme haste with which the Supreme Government is pressing on retrenchments in every department throughout India already begins to partake more of the nature of a general panic than of a wise and well matured policy, and is much more likely to be attributed to the former than to any other cause by the natives themselves. The worry and bother that is being made over the deficit is as great as if it had been ten or twenty times as much, and much more resembles the nervous fussiness of a weak old gentleman, who has expended a few pounds more than his annual income, than what might be expected from the Government of a vast and mighty Empire. In the attempt to save two millions this year we shall be extremely fortunate if we escape having to expend five, or even ten times that amount a few years hence in consequence of the great haste with which reductions have been made. Even granting that the deficit is extinguished, and an equilibrium established, will the estimation in which we are held be enhanced or lowered by the measures adopted for that purpose? On every side we hear rumours of reductions—the native cavalry and infantry of this presidency are to lose, the former two and the latter seven regiments—the expenditure upon education, irrigation, and other works of public utility is to be reduced, and no department appears to have escaped the application of the official shears. In none, however, are the measures of retrenchment about to be carried out likely, we fear, to inflict more marked and grievous injury upon the country than those proposed for the police department. The abolition of the appointment of deputy inspector general, much as it may be regretted on account of leaving nothing higher than that of superintendent of a district to aspire to by officers entering the department, is not of such vital importance to the efficiency and well-being of the whole force as the contemplated reduction in the number of assistant superintendents. The efficiency of the whole department has apparently been completely lost sight of in the keen desire to save to the State the pay and allowances of these officers which are calculated at so many lakhs of rupees. Now, if experience has taught us one lesson since we acquired possession of this country, we should have imagined we had at least learned this, that European supervision is absolutely requisite for maintaining in good working order any department in which natives are largely employed, and that just in proportion as the European element is eliminated does it become inefficient and useless. More especially is this likely to be the case in the police, where the men are scattered in groups all over the district, often miles removed from the head-quarters of any European official, and where the opportunities for oppression and extorting money are great. Instead of being decreased, the number of European assistants should rather have been increased, as it is more, and not less, supervision that is required in order to make the force more efficient than it now is.

THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WASTE.

The Englishman urges that the grievance of the public against the department is not that it has great works to carry out at the behests of the other departments of the State, but that it has no idea of economy. The title—Department of Public Waste—attacks the department on points where even the gallant Colonel throws down his arms and capitulates. The department has resisted hitherto all meddling with its estimates. And the public accuse it, and not without a lengthened sad experience, and an excellent cause, of giving the very worst return for the very largest outlay.

Cold, pausing caution's lesson scorning,—

it has been the ambition of the department to be a world unto itself. It has its own audit department, its own financial machinery, and above all its own peculiar gift of expenditure. On the last point its tyranny has been all pervading. But let us see how Colonel Strachey surrenders the citadel while striving to retire behind the banners of the other departments. He starts by admitting an "irregularity" of £250,000, which is about 4 per cent. on the whole expenditure for the year, which is thus fixed at £6,250,000. This is exactly the same sort of argument as that used by Sir Richard Temple to cover an "irregularity"—the term is catching, of £100,000. Says Sir Richard, "Oh! if both sides of the account are taken it is just a fractional error of one thousandth part." But not so; it is not an error in the whole account, but in the special account, in which the sums which make up the £100,000 ought properly to have appeared. So Colonel Strachey's irregularity of £250,000 of "unauthorised outlay" can only be judged of properly when compared with the total sanctioned outlay under the special heads where excess has occurred. Having disposed of this little matter with considerable skill, the gallant colonel makes the very remarkable statement,—“In truth, the necessity for keeping the expenditure within the grants has not hitherto been seriously felt by the Government itself, nor properly impressed on the officers of the department. The results of the past year have led to the adoption of other and assuredly more correct views, and we may be confident that henceforth additional attention will be given to the more exact management of the disbursements, so as to prevent any excess outlay in the future." But for securing this end the public have no confidence in the controllers of Public Works' Accounts, whose official usefulness the head of the department thus openly impugns. It will require a controlling officer indeed, but he must be independent of the department. Has any one heard any good of the Controller of Military Expenditure since his office was swallowed up in the Military Secretariat? When Colonel Strachey said "the necessity for keeping the expenditure within the grants has not hitherto been seriously felt," he formulated the public grievance against the department, and explained what Sir Richard Temple has described as its "tyranny." We fear, however, in spite of Lord Mayo's undoubted vigour and determination, he will be able to do nothing of importance with a department educated as an accomplished spendthrift, until Colonel Chesney is made responsible only to the Finance Minister.

The Friend of India remarks that Colonel Strachey's defence reaches almost a sublimity of sophistry when he charges every Government and branch of the Government, which orders or uses a public building, with the extravagance of those who erect and repair it. It is true that the Public Works Department does not desire to build palatial barracks, nor splendid hospitals nor vast court-houses. But it is very hard that when the Government, which on public grounds devotes the money of the country to such works, pays so highly and equips so efficiently the body of servants known as Public Works officials, to raise such buildings with a due regard to economy, perpetuity and art, barracks should fall down, hospitals should be of hideous architecture, the underlings of the department should wax fat, and the trained and honourable Engineers should be so oppressed with accounts as to be unable properly to supervise the works and their subordinates on the spot. It would be better for the finances and for his department if Colonel Strachey, instead of spending days in reading official minutes in the Council and attending Select Committees, were to grapple with these two problems—how to secure honest work at the other end of his department: how to perfect his account system and yet prevent his executive and superintending Engineers from being converted into mere clerks.

LAND ASSESSMENT.

The Madras Athenæum maintains that although the English system of land-tenure works well enough in England it is far from being the best. It has not borne transplanting to Ireland, nor will it bear transplanting to India. It is a system tending to repress political liberty and free exercise of opinion, a system which places a large number of industrious men almost at the mercy of an individual who may have no mercy or common sense in him. It is a system wholly illogical as placing it in the power of individuals to depopulate, if they choose, a whole district. But that system, attended though it is with many evils, is incomparably better than the imitations which have been set up here, and which some enthusiasts think are so perfect that they ought to be extended everywhere. But, let us ask, what proposition in England would be analogous to the proposition here of a permanent settlement? There are farms belonging to the Duchy of Lancaster which have for generations been tenanted by the same families, and the analogous proposition would, therefore, be that the Crown should confer the land on those families in perpetuity at the rents at which they are now held. The tenants themselves would laugh at such a proposal, and think the Commissioner of Woods and Forests was going mad if he entertained it. Already they are the happiest tenantry in England. So long as the farms are well attended to and the rent paid there is no fear of being turned out. The tenant can vote for Whig or Tory, according as his political opinions may lean, and no one says a word to him. No notice to quit ensues, and there is no raising of rents immediately after an election. We think that it will be admitted that a permanent settlement of the Crown lands at home would not involve so large a sacrifice of revenue as the permanent settlement of land in a country so backward as this. Yet, suppose that the rental of one of the Crown farms was fixed in perpetuity at £500 a-year, and that in course of time the value of the farm rose to £1,000 a-year, it does not follow that the real tenant would benefit by it. The farm might be sub-let, and the tenant in chief pocket the difference between the land-tax or quit rent, or whatever it might be called, and the rent actually paid by the bona fide occupier. There we have put a hypothetical case. The reality is under our own eyes. If the Government can boast that it has given up grinding the ryots down, it has done so by placing it in the power of others to do so. Men who used to cultivate their own fields find that they can sublet them and live on the difference between the teerwah and the rent they get. Thus are they encouraged in idleness. Again, if the Government has a horror (we say nothing of the justice of it) of anything it is land jobbing; yet money-lenders are gradually getting a deal more power over the land than would be possible if the ryots paid a tax more approaching a sum that might be called rent. By thus keeping the assessment so low as to give a great value to the proprietary right in the soil, the Government is merely transferring to the pockets of individuals the property of the community at large. And we may well ask to what good. The theorists tell us that we shall put the money in the pockets of the people, where it will fructify, and that wealth breeds tastes, to gratify which revenue will be paid in other forms. In the first place we doubt the possibility of the application of the theory to the Madras Presidency, and in the second place we deny the desirability of seeing it carried out to its conclusion. Granted that the native does get a lot of money in his pocket—we mean the ordinary unanglicised and respectable cultivator—he goes in for no great outlay on piece goods, nor does he indulge in any expensive luxuries of the table. He will simply support more idlers, spend more on marriage ceremonies in his family, and buy more jewels. This is really the class of man to benefit whom in particular extraordinary irrigation works are being erected, roads, railroads, and canals are being constructed; to benefit whom alone the Government has sacrificed an immense percentage of its revenue, and to avoid taxing whom a paltry revenue is raised from taxes on articles consumed almost solely by Europeans, and taxing those classes both of Europeans and natives upon the growth and prosperity of which the future energies of the country depend to an immense extent; upon the growth and respectability of which the cultivators may look for ready and fair markets for their produce. But supposing that, if the ryots became wealthy, they would buy large quantities of taxable articles. Is this desirable? We do not propose to discuss this great question, but we can call to mind scenes in the great country of powerful landed proprietors, England, which make us shudder, though we regard them at the distance of many years. Near the heavy consumers of taxable articles, poverty in its cruellest and most heartrending forms is to be met with. The taxable articles of luxury, whether desirable or not, are, however, in nubibus; taxable land is a fact. The very language of the people tells them so. They acknowledge it freely and would not consider an increased assessment or rent a hardship. We would ask if it is marvellous that there should be a deficit when, as in some places, assessment has been reduced, customary labour abolished, tanks improved, and roads made, at the same time that money has decreased in value, labour increased in value, and the demand for produce increased also? Look at the policy of keeping the land tax down too low, as we are doing; in any possible way it is wrong. As a measure of justice no one asks for it except visionary doctrinaires and possible land jobbers. As a measure of expediency, it will raise up a class of middlemen between the Government and the ryots who will use permanent settlement and fixity of tenure to make the tenure of their sub-renters depend upon their own whims. The actual cultivators will be poorer than ever. The experience of England shows that the best way to get the most out of the soil is to let the land to tenants at a moderate rent, with a certainty that so long as that rent is paid, the tenants will not be ejected.

GOVERNMENT ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—The thanks of the Government of India have been conveyed to the medical officers at Morar in acknowledgment of their exemplary conduct and zealous exertions during the late cholera epidemic in that cantonment.

COOLIE LABOUR IN ASSAM.—We have now the authority of a tea planter for stating that labour has become plentiful. We take the following extract from a correspondent's letter. "It will be gratifying to all concerned in the prosperity of tea cultivation to learn that labour is becoming plentiful. Imported and local labourers are so numerous that they cannot find employment. The stoppage of work in the P. W. Department has also increased the number of idle labourers, so that scores of them are travelling about in search of something to do. So recently as last week eighty time-expired Bengalis were dismissed by the Public Works Department at Debroghur. These men went of their own accord and offered to work on several plantations at reduced rates of wages. Is it not amazing? Coolies seeking for work in Assam! The P. W. Department in this station (Sebsaugor) are also dispensing with the services of their imported labourers so soon as their contracts expire. The Executive Department also have made a change favourable to the planter. Formerly labourers employed by them received four annas a-day and now it is reduced one-fourth." Another change very much in favour of the planter is reported by our correspondent. Planters were compelled, under contracts made in Calcutta, and under Acts of the Local Legislature, to supply their labourers with rice at one rupee per maund. But the price of rice, from a variety of causes, rose rapidly, and at one time reached the high figure of seven rupees per maund. The average rate however for a considerable time ranged from five to six rupees a maund. This pressed most heavily upon the already overburdened planters, and assisted in the consummation of the ruin of a great many of them. The survivors, those who were enabled to weather that terrible storm, are now being relieved from the heavy demands that were so ruinous. Rice, our correspondent informs us, is now obtainable in the local market for 1-12 and 2 rupees a maund. Paddy, which was selling at three poorahs (a poorah of paddy is equal to fifteen seers in weight) per rupee, is now procurable at nearly double the quantity for the same sum, and so soon as the present crop is gathered paddy will be much cheaper. The crop promises to be a good one, some 30 per cent. at least over last year's harvest.—Englishman.

Bengal.

A CASE FOR CONSIDERATION.

From 1822 to 1858. Within those not very far divided dates a manly, upward, scientific, and, to the public, most eminently useful life was commenced and ended in our midst, here in Calcutta and the Eastern seas. Henry Piddington, midshipman in the East India Company's service, reached India in 1822, and continued his career as a sailor for some ten years, during which he doubtless acquired the rudiments of a science the subsequent elaboration of which won for him the approbation of the maritime world, of all scientific men, Herschel not excepted. Leaving the sea, yet ever dreaming of it, toiling constantly to give a practical use, a local application, to Sir William Reid's theory of storms, Henry Piddington discharged for the next fourteen years the office of Coroner for the town of Calcutta, upon the munificent monthly salary of £30. True, indeed, his predecessors had drawn well nigh three times £30 for discharging precisely similar work, but the sailor, sailor-like, made no appeal, striving only, true public servant, to do the duty given to his hands. The journals of the Asiatic Society of those days, from 1839 forwards, contain many-sided evidence of the intelligence, the industry, of the man, all pointing seaward, all tending to indicate the progressive steps by which Henry Piddington was permitted, little by little, to unravel the laws by which the most terrible of all atmospheric convulsions are mercifully over-ruled. Those researches, it is needless to remark, were conducted under many difficulties, pecuniary and other. In 1846 the Government of Bengal was further pleased to add the office of President of the Marine Court to that of Coroner, a position of laborious responsibility, demanding considerable knowledge of marine legal procedure, British and foreign, at sea, in river, in harbour; theory and practice of seamanship; perfect familiarity with the Sandheads and dangerous navigation of the river Hooghly. Whereon, in consideration of the multifarious duties of the appointment £15 per mensem was allowed to the said Piddington, above and beyond the £30 already mentioned, raising the salary of the president of the Marine Court, and Coroner for the town of Calcutta, to somewhat less than that of a Captain in a marching regiment.

Nothing daunted by poverty, Henry Piddington continued to distribute gratuitously from his private pocket copies of his nautical books and pamphlets to the Royal and Mercantile navies, seeking thereby to interest his fellow-sailors in those researches, to induce them to contribute materials for their further advancement. Touched at length by the noble unselfishness and self-sacrifice of the man, the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Admiralty in 1847 made a grant—little sack for so much good bread!—of £100 to assist him in the prosecution of his investigations, the importance of which even a British Admiralty could not fail to acknowledge. Not, however, until 1848 did Henry Piddington publish the Sailor's Horn-book, exposition of the law of storms, especially as applicable to our Eastern Seas, so admirable and exhaustive that, whilst it has gone through three editions within the last twenty years, and been translated into almost every European tongue, it continues to be, without qualification, the one standard work upon the subject. By it the cyclone or typhoon-caught mariner is taught to know the precise position occupied by his ship in the circling hurricane; the storm's course, direct as well as rotatory; the shortest and safest route by which to escape from that fatal embrace. To the teaching of its modest pages hundreds owe their lives; millions sterling of floating property have been economised by its wisdom. The Sailor's Horn-book received the highest commendation from Herschel, Sir William Reid, and other eminent men of science. Her Majesty's Admiralty expressed their approbation by assigning to it a place in the chart-chests of their ships; the officers of the Peninsular and Oriental Navigation Company publicly testified their high opinion of its worth; by direction of the Government of Bengal all ships taken up by Government, coolie and other, were required to carry this work. There is not to-day an educated captain of a ship trading to Calcutta, or other Indian ports, who will not endorse the opinions then expressed. Time and experience have only further demonstrated the soundness of the basis upon which the Horn-book was reasoned by its author from alpha to omega. The work, the loving work of a life, accomplished, there remained little to Henry Piddington, writing figuratively, save a hewing of wood and drawing of water. He continued, nevertheless, to find in the pages of the Asiatic Journal scientific relaxation from the heavy duties of a life now gradually drawing to a close.

On the 7th April 1858 the old sailor, of world-wide reputation, self-made, self-educated, a noble instance of self-help, was called away, leaving little to his widow and children except the memory of a good man. Pension there was none whatever. What mattered it? The public, the Government served well for five and twenty years, would make provision for them, so whispered his sailor heart, lying there, slowly sinking to rest. And who dares assert provision had not been made for the widow? But alas, public trouble past—1857, present—1858, future—1859, terrible in poignancy, drove from the public mind all lesser sense of public duty. Men in presence of national calamity take small count of private suffering: in a word, the claims of the widow of Henry Piddington were overlooked. Little world-wise, having few friends, Mrs. Piddington, instead of appealing direct to the quick instincts of Lord Canning, submitted to the Court of Directors a memorial begging for some small pension in recognition of the services of her late husband. The Court replied with fine sense of satire that, "while duly appreciating the scientific attainments of the late Mr. Piddington it could see no sufficient reason for granting a pension to his widow." Of course not. Had the grant solicited been for the use of Jugganath's car, the case would have excited a much larger sympathy in the hearts of those Leadenhall-street Samaritans. Seven years later another memorial, burdened with the same cry for justice, travelled home, this time to the Secretary of State for India. "Mon mari," exclaimed the old lady of French descent, with something of pride, "mon mari n'a jamais manqué à son devoir, et le gouvernement Anglais est trop honorable de manquer au sien." Obviously, this poor French woman had not mastered India House ethics. At length an answer came, the character of which will be inferred from the fact that it was dictated by Sir Charles Wood. The widow begged for such pittance "as will rescue her from her present straitened circumstances and place her beyond the reach of poverty." Sir Charles declared that her prayer could not be acceded to:—absolutely not another word.

And now, in olden phrasology, our story is done, at least, nearly so. It is susceptible, our readers will well observe, of a touching, a most natural, a not impossible termination if, only, we have succeeded in enlisting, on behalf of its aged heroine, the sympathies of Lord and Lady Mayo, and those also of the public of Calcutta.—Friend of India.

STATION TALK.

CENTRAL PROVINCES, Nov. 16.—Whether the followers of Islam really apprehend the progress which Christianity is making by the aid of Missionaries proper and other agencies, or not, there cannot be a doubt that they have here been roused to a sense which prompts them that they also must be zealous in warnings and exhortations to their own, if Islamism is to survive in India under the superincumbent weight of so many other creeds which are daily making its existence more difficult; and, if we may be allowed to construe their preachings freely, it would be easy to prove the seditious spirit which pervades them, for in no other sense would it be possible to view a declaration that "there have been many Kings in India, and we do not know how many more may pass away." But it is better that we should hear these sayings repeated in market-places than that they should be whispered at nocturnal meetings. Bazaar preaching by Mahomedans is, therefore, rather to be encouraged than otherwise. I cannot, however, say that close meetings in our large towns are not held at nights. The forward tendency of the crescent element on the whole is daily becoming more manifest, despite the natural desire of Mahomedans to work in secret. It is a marked characteristic of the people—the Hindus generally, and their distinguishing feature from Mahomedan settlers, that at such a moment it is not the Russ or Cabul politics, or secret meetings which occupy their attention. To them the State deficit is at once the most important topic. It is really with them something more than a nine days' wonder how with our comprehensive and expensive system of administration we go on from indebtedness to insolvency; why we should not have known better what our means would be, and how far they would go to meet the requirements of expenditure. The really business-like men say that the deficit is a discreditable result. If it is only for the satisfaction of getting an opinion on Government out of them that we can welcome such criticism. But they are less communicative when more required to speak. The cutting of mowha trees for railway sleepers has most wisely been drawn attention to by the Chief Commissioner, who has in connection with the subject impressed upon his officer the large extent to which the fruit sustains the agricultural classes when crops of food grains fail, and has asked them to use all their influence to prevent the cutting which has been going on. Only think what would become of the abkaree revenue if the mowha trees in the country were cut down! The new chaplain has arrived at Jubbulpore, so has Brigadier general Sir William Turner, commanding the Saugor district. Sir Richard Temple has passed through in hot haste to Calcutta. It was supposed at first that he was coming by the line of railway from Khundwa to Jubbulpore, in order to be able to judge the progress which has actually been made; but he suddenly turned up at Nagpore, whence he proceeded via Seonie to Jubbulpore. We are not quite so badly off as they are at Jhansie, where fowls are selling at one for the rupee, eggs only eight for the rupee; though there can be no doubt that we are daily drifting into dearer times. Prices of everything are rising steadily, from house-rent to the most insignificant article of domestic consumption. House-rent I fear will as yet reach an alarming figure at Jubbulpore, as the number of residents is increasing fast. No less than three doing-duty Colonels will soon drop in here, Colonels Maitland, Lowther, and Carey. The baboo attached to the Secretary's office of the Jubbulpore Exhibition, who was apprehended a short time back at Umballa, and made to stand his trial at Jubbulpore on a charge of criminal breach of trust, has been convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of five hundred rupees. I think he will be grateful that the result was not worse for him. The weather has not yet become so very cold as we expected it would be. In fact, for the past few days it has warmed up and clouds are keeping overhead.

ALLAHABAD, Nov. 24.—What a thing it is to be a Lieutenant-governor; positively I would give anything to be one. Here is Sir William Muir, he only expresses a desire to see a good College established here, and Mahajuns and Vakeels and Rajahs and Baboos now vie with each other in contributing to the funds. Benares gives Rs. 5,000, Rampore somewhere about the same, Rewah out-steps the whole of them, and offers Rs. 9,600; he, of course, does not know if anybody else has given anything! His Honour may now carry out his wishes in full, and may remove the Agra Medical College to Allahabad, and attach it to the college now being subscribed for. The site selected for the building is pretty central, it will be somewhere between the Kuttra and the city, where in fact the Clydesdale Barracks are, but I thought that plot was intended for a people's park. A kingdom divided against itself is sure to fall. I am afraid the days of the Indian Bar are "limited." The members are divided, and for want of clients have begun to sue each other. Mr. Newton, Barrister-at-law, has brought an action against Mr. Goolall, Barrister-at-law, for something like defamation of character, damages Rs. 1,000. It appears that some anonymous letters were addressed to Mr. Newton in regard to some case he had in hand, and Mr. N. thinks Mr. Goolall is the author. The suit has been thrown out by Mr. Atkinson, in his capacity of Subordinate Judge of a portion of Allahabad, it being under the value of cases he can decide. If Mr. Newton claims Rs. 1,001, Mr. Atkinson will be able to take up the case. A few of our capitalists intend to erect a market-place in Cannington, a building, the want of which is much felt. It is to be a two-storied building, and will accommodate all descriptions of petty tradesmen. I hardly think it will pay the projectors of the scheme; but as it is pro bono publico, the Municipal Commissioners should assist.

MEERUT, Nov. 24.—The weather here is upon the whole delightful, though somewhat changeable. To-day it is quite warm, but yesterday was cold, and we had fires for the first time. A detachment of time-expired men and invalids from Rohilkund marched into the station this morning. The party is commanded by Major Brandt, of the 103rd regiment, and consists of three officers, 162 rank and file, seven women, and nineteen children; they leave for Allahabad on Friday. Captain Sewell and Lieut. Baines, of the 105th regiment, are about to proceed to England in charge of troops. Colonel Angelo, of the artillery, is down in Calcutta just now purchasing horses for remounts. Government reposes great confidence, I believe, in the Colonel's knowledge of horse-flesh and his skill in managing horses. He was, as will be remembered, on the Stud Commission, and was afterwards entrusted with the rearing of several Australian foals belonging to Government. These foals turned out very well, contrary to the expectations of a number of people who supposed they would grow up ill-favoured and weedy under the influence of the Indian sun. Colonels Maitland and Drummond will shortly proceed to their new stations, Jubbalpore and Allahabad. Mr. Williams, our commissioner, is really going to leave us at last, I believe; his time of service being up for the second or third time. I am told that he will probably take up his residence somewhere in the Hills. There is a good deal of speculation as to who will succeed him; some say Mr. Shakespeare, of Benares; and other more unlikely commissioners have been suggested as possible successors. Colonel Cookson, who has for very many years been the cantonment magistrate here, is also about to leave us shortly. The number of changes here lately is something unusual, even for Meerut, and will be felt in the dulness of the coming season.

ALLYGURH, Nov. 25.—It is but seldom that one ever hears any news about this benighted station excepting however the meagre accounts that used to figure sometime back in your paper of diuvian interest and agrarian worth, though now even these, like other things, have passed away. The weather at present is delightful, and notwithstanding the threatening clouds we had the other day no rain has fallen. Morning constitutionals are quite in vogue here; and many are the partially frozen noses one meets, enjoying a winter's walk. The only change of any importance that Allygurh has recently witnessed consists in the withdrawal of the solitary company of the 40th N. I., under command of Captain Simpson, to its Regimental Head Quarters, and the replacing of it by one from the 1st Grenadiers from Agra, under command of Captain Lupton. There is also a rumour current of another change, owing I presume to the stoppage of works and the want of funds, to abolish the post of Municipal Engineer, which if carried out will necessitate the transfer or resignation of the present incumbent, a most efficient although an amateur civil engineer, and one who during his protracted tenure of service in the Allygurh district as an overseer, and subsequently as Municipal Engineer, has rendered himself highly valuable and generally popular. Appropos of the above stagnation of Government works, there is but little to do on the Grand Trunk Road, all that was put in hand being done more with a view to employ the neighbouring famine-stricken population than for the sake of public convenience or utility, and as might have been anticipated for the successful management of this scheme, the thanks of the Lieutenant-governor, and great eulogy fell to the lot of the Executive Engineer, who, it will be remembered, is not unacquainted with the manners, customs, and resources of the district, having in former years zealously served in this very station as a military subordinate of the D.P.W.—A detachment of time-expired men and invalids from the 25th and 37th Regiments, under command of Captain Rosser, left this yesterday en route for England, after a halt of fully a week on the encamping ground; a gorgeously appressed piper, in the Stuart tartan, having added a glow to their marching in and out by sundry solos on his bagpipe. The 14th Bengal Lancers (Murray's J. I. Horse) also passed through on Monday, whilst the 21st Hussars stayed here on Sunday; their splendid band enlivened us on Saturday evening, as we are by this time well-nigh unconscious of any such treat since the departure of the gallant 19th Punjab Infantry.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DR. DOUGALL, medical officer of the Mandalay Agency, is spoken of as the probable successor of Dr. Maingay, as Superintendent of the Rangoon Gaol.—Englishman, Nov. 30.

A NEW PUNKAH.—Mr. Turnbull, of the 9th Foot, inventor and patentee of a self-acting punkah, has proceeded to Roorkee, where his apparatus is to undergo the ordeal of a Scientific Committee.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—ANOTHER INSTANCE OF RETRENCHMENT.—Three executive charges in the Public Works Department of these Provinces—viz., those of the Kunhan-bridge, Nimar, and the Southern-road divisions—are to be at once done away with, thereby effecting a saving of between four and five lakhs of rupees per annum.—Central India Times, Nov. 27.

CHOLERA IN THE BRITISH ARMY.—The latest returns of cholera brought up to the end of last month show that in the British Army stationed in the Bengal Presidency, the number of cases of real cholera were 893, of which 659 were fatal. At Peshawar the Artillery lost 45, the 36th and 104th Foot respectively 74 and 75, the 103rd Foot at Morar lost 51. These figures include women and children.

BUNDELCUND.—By the latest accounts up to date 30th October flour was selling in Bundelcund at six to six and a-half seers for the rupee, and gram at seven seers; maize, bajra, and other small grains are being imported from Malwa, where the harvest has been abundant, and on these the poor classes are mainly living. The poverty of their diet for some months past makes them ill able to resist the attacks of fever, which have been very prevalent. In parts of Holkar's dominions sickness has been so general and so severe that there are no cultivators to till the fields.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The board of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company has offered the Government of India the services of its engineering staff for the survey of a railway from Koochbea to Bugwah, on the Megna. The Duke of Argyll has already expressed his opinion that this line would of itself be of great commercial value, and that its terminus would be a convenient starting point for future extensions to Darjeeling on the one hand and the valley of the Brahmapootra on the other. The arrangements for carrying out the survey will be left to be settled by the Government of India.

THE TORPEDO COMMITTEE.—We hear (says the Indian Daily News) that a Torpedo Committee has been appointed at Calcutta, by the Government of India, of which Colonel Hyde is the President, and Lieutenant Broadbent, Royal Engineers, is the Secretary. The latter officer is to receive a staff allowance of Rs. 200 per mensem for this additional duty, besides his military pay and allowances. We should imagine that this expenditure might well have been spared, under present circumstances. All about torpedos may be learnt from England, if Government would simply ask for the information.

TORTURE IN SINDH.—The police of Upper Sindh have distinguished themselves. An individual accused of murder has been the victim of a description of mild persuasion by them, "of a nature quite equal in atrocity to the torture of the Spanish Inquisition," and that is no small compliment. A confession was obtained when the unfortunate man's "legs were muffled with cloth, and oil having been applied thereto, the police set fire to it." The crime admitted, he was carried to a medical officer, who amputated his limbs; that his life might be saved a sufficient time to be taken away in the orthodox manner.

POLICE.—We are informed that the Government of India has directed his Honour the Lieut.-Governor to dispense with the services of only eight Assistant District Superintendents of Police in the North-West Provinces, and that six will be permitted to retain their appointments. We have not heard which of the assistants will remain, but we trust that Mr. F. O. Mayne, Inspector-general, will, as a simple act of justice, select the seniors. Some of the assistants might be re-transferred to the departments to which they were originally attached, as in the case of two of them who were respectively employed as extra assistant-commissioner and deputy-collector—the latter officer has only been in the police for the last six months.—Delhi Gazette.

LOCUSTS AT DUGSHAIE.—The Mofussilite reports that at about ten o'clock A.M. on Sunday, November 27, a large flight of locusts passed over the hills at Dugshaie. They appeared to come from a south-easterly direction, and, after settling for some time, again took wing towards Kussowlie.

THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH.—We understand that there is some uncertainty about the date of arrival of the Duke of Edinburgh in Calcutta. The dates given leave a wide margin. The latest date assigned is about the 20th December; the earliest about the 8th. Probably the latter will be nearer the mark, though a date between the two is the more likely. We deem it as well to note this as many people are anxious about the forthcoming festivities—notably the fancy dress ball. It requires time to prepare for these absurdities, and as few people know who will be invited, few have made preparations for it.—Indian Daily News, Nov. 26.

MURDER ON SMALL PROVOCATION.—An European named James Allen, employed in the Indo-European Telegraph department, in charge of the Telegraph Station at Sonmeance, has been accused of murder. He shot one Brahoe camel-man dead and wounded another. The only provocation is said to have been impertinence. Several Brahoes, on learning what had happened, rushed, it is said, into the office to inflict summary punishment on the accused, but were prevented by the Khan of Khelat, who undertook to arrest him and make him over to the British authorities for trial. No news of the event reaching Kurrachee a party of police started off to take charge of the offender and bring him in for trial.

PUBLIC HEALTH IN THE PUNJAB.—The official report of mortality in the Punjab for the last week of October confirms the news paragraphs we have of late occasionally given of the prevalence of great sickness in almost every district. While cholera has almost disappeared, only 40 deaths being reported, no less than 1030 are given as owing to the present prevalent form of low fever. The Sanitary Commissioner remarks as follows: "The sickness in the large towns shows no signs of abatement, but rather tends to increase; thus the deaths in Amritsar have increased from 227 to 253, and those of Lahore from 147 to 168, in the weeks ending 23rd and 30th October, respectively. Mortality is declining at Rawul Pindi, though the death rate is still enormous. The death rates of Hoshiarpore and Wazirabad are very excessive. Peshawur was the only large town in which cholera was epidemic, though it was very fatal in the small towns of the Kohat districts."

THE TURKISH AMBASSADOR TO BOKHARA.—The Turkish Ambassador to Bokhara, who has, after a very protracted stay, left Lahore, seems to be a very helpless individual indeed, and we should imagine that if he escapes the dangers of the Khyber he will be very fortunate. We do not understand why, in these days, when the Government is reducing pay and turning its old servants adrift to starve, money should be wasted on persons like this so-called Turkish Ambassador. Was he an ambassador at all, or only an adventurer trading on the credulity of our Government? He is said to have had no credentials whatever nor anything to show that he was accredited or even sent as an unaccredited agent of the Porte. The original Bokhara Ambassador died at Bombay, and his widow, who is travelling homewards with the present man, has had fierce disputes with him about the property left by her husband.—Indian Public Opinion.

FAIR AT LEH.—There was an unusually large gathering in September last at the annual fair established by the Maharaja at Leh, and the value of the merchandise brought into the bazaar was considerable. Liberal rewards were bestowed by desire of his Highness on all those who exhibited their goods in order to encourage the visits of merchants. This conduct is an earnest that the Maharaja wishes to promote commerce in his territories and to act generously towards traders. The strongest argument that can be used in favour of the Chang Chanmo route lies in the dangers which have been experienced this year on the Karakoram-road from the falling of huge avalanches of ice and snow and the bursting of ice-barriers, which formed in many places across the course of the Shyok River. From the latter cause one merchant lost five horses with their entire loads, consisting of silk and other valuable property, and a large number of laden horses had to be turned back. In consequence many of the merchants who are now returning to Yarkund have chosen the easier route, and have intimated their intention of always travelling by it on future occasions. Fuel and forage are less scarce by it, and now that the example has been set, it is probable that it will be much frequented.

THE STATE OF BHAWULPORE.—The question propounded by Sir John Lawrence to so many of his subordinates as to the relative merits of British or native rule has perhaps never received a more satisfactory answer than in the report by Captain Minchen, the political superintendent, on the re-organisation of the State of Bhawalpoor. When Mr. Ford assumed charge of the State in the character of Political Agent and Superintendent in 1866, he found the whole system of native administration a mass of corruption and intrigue. The Queen mother was clamorous for money and for the maintenance of her influence over the young Nawab, the native ministers were found to be intriguing against the Wuzer, and one of them had been proved to have embezzled a nuzzur sent from his own master's court to the Commissioner of Mooltan. The pay of the officials and soldiers, which was chiefly given in grain, was largely in arrear, whilst the supplies were bought back by the commissariat officers at half price, and immediately sold again to the State at full prices. Any one attempting to introduce reforms or improvements was watched, imprisoned, or summarily murdered, and the highest officials said that their dignity suffered if they attended to business. The people, as usual amongst Asiatics, did not grumble, for the ramifications of their superiors web was sure sooner or later to involve them if they did so, and therefore they endured in silence. In two years the whole system was changed. New officers of a trustworthy character were introduced into the principal posts, a regular system of account and audit was inaugurated, debts were discharged, the expenses and demands of the Queen mother reduced and checked, the army reduced, but rendered more efficient, the customs tariff thoroughly revised and remodelled, the credit of the State restored, and every one satisfied, with the exception of the wealthy merchants who had purchased the monopoly of supplies from the corrupt officials. We recommend a perusal of Captain Minchen's report to those philanthropists who are so fond of making use of the cry "India for the Indians."—Englishman.

SALT.—While the Legislative Council at Calcutta is busying itself with a Bill, introduced by Mr. Strachey, to enhance the price of salt in the Presidency of Fort St. George and the duty on salt in the Presidency of Bombay, the fiat is going forth over the length and breadth of the Central Provinces that salt is to be exempted from the payment of octroi in all towns, a measure which we hope will cheapen the article and expand its trade. But the bunneea is, after all, such an incomprehensible creature at times that we should not be surprised to learn that he has actually raised the price of salt because the duty has been removed. The supply to Jubbulpore of salt from the Sambhur Lake has fallen off very much since the opening of the East Indian Railway, and Lahore salt has taken its place. Mr. Strachey has introduced a Bill to provide rules for the manufacture and sale of alimentary salts in the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, Oude, and the Central Provinces. This measure is to be hailed with joy in the Central Provinces, where salt is certainly not consumed to such an extent by the population as may be when the supply becomes greater and the price falls. The wild tribes and the people of outlying villages pay fabulous prices sometimes for salt. Those who trade with them seldom pay the Gond's in money for the forest products which they gather. Bartering for salt is always preferable to the Hill men, and the itinerant trader encourages the practice, as it helps him in abusing the Gond's ignorance. As a preservative of health, also, we hail any measure which is calculated to place salt more within the reach of the village population of India. If they got more salt than liquor they would be, unquestionably, more healthy; and they never could have an excess of salt, whereas of liquor they probably already see too much, particularly on the frontiers marching with native States, where a man can get drunk for an anna, and yet has to consume food without salt for a week, because it is too distant for traders to visit often, and the villager is too poor to buy a large quantity at a time. There are, of course, other questions mixed up with the deficient supply of salt to the outlying rural population, such as bad roads or no roads at all, rendering travelling in the rains impracticable. But we are not disposed to find fault; and welcome every step taken to cheapen salt for the poorer classes in these provinces.—Jubbulpore Chronicle.

MILITARY.—Col. the Hon. F. Thesiger, Adjutant-general of the Army, passed through Umballa on Oct. 25, en route to Lahore, whither he has been summoned to a conference with the Commander-in-Chief.—The Delhi Gazette learns on good authority that the abolition of Kamptee as a large military cantonment, so long talked of, has been finally determined upon, and will be carried out at the end of the current year. A regiment of Native Infantry and a battery of Horse Artillery will be retained there, the remaining troops being transferred to Secunderabad.—Major-general Beatson, commanding the Sirhind division (says the Pioneer of Nov. 26), is a rumoured candidate for the Divisional Command of Rawul Pindie, when vacated by General Haly.—The Mofussilite of Nov. 23 states that the invalids at Kussowlie, and those of the 41st Welsh Fusiliers at Subathoo, and 3rd Buffs at Dugshaie, will leave for Umballa on or about the 23rd inst., en route for England, via Bombay.—The expected reduction of fourteen batteries of Artillery, or eighty-four guns, sounds more formidable than it is. It has long been the opinion of the most competent judges that Sir G. Barker's Meerut Committee reduced the personnel of batteries below the point of efficiency—the number of gunners, and still more of drivers, being far too few for the real work of a campaign. Now the men of the reduced batteries will be distributed throughout the rest; and though the army of India will nominally have eighty-four guns less, it will really boast a more effective artillery than before.—Pioneer.—Major-General A. Hayshe, Inspector of Artillery, Southern Division, is now visiting Allahabad in course of tour. It is rumoured that one of the contemplated military economies is a reduction of the number of Inspectors of Artillery from four to two. One officer will have the supervision of the Artillery throughout the whole Bengal pre-idency, and the other of that of both Bombay and Madras.—Pioneer, Dec. 1.—B. Battery, F. Brigade, R.H.A., en route from Umballa to Morar, will leave Delhi on the 8th December, arrive at Allypore on the 16th, and leave Agra on the 23rd, on which day it will march for its destination, where it is expected to arrive about 1st January, 1870.—Her Majesty's 5th Royal Irish Lancers left Lucknow on Thursday, the 25th, on their way to Campbellpore; they had been there for six years, and from their hospitality had become great favourites. They will be greatly missed, says the local paper.

STATION TALK.

COCHIN, Nov. 8.—Your readers will doubtless be surprised to observe in your columns a news-letter from this part of India. Though the distance be great, still this being a town of no little importance, both judicially and commercially, a small corner in your paper for such matters of importance as transpire here will, I hope, not be out of place. To a much higher level will its importance rise when the proposed extension of the railway to Cochin is completed. This place has been selected owing to its harbour, which affords a safe anchorage for vessels of large dimensions, and as the Government intended having for the railway terminus a town with a fine harbour, and finding no other on this side of the coast better than this, Cochin had the preference. We have both the native states of Travancore and Cochin around us, whose importance has often been ventilated in the Indian journals and do not therefore require a detailed description by me. The extensive backwaters interspersed all along Travancore and Cochin are the main roads that flush the markets with the produce of these States. There is now existing a barrier formed by the Western Ghats, called the Varkala Hills, at the distance of a little more than four miles, cutting off altogether the backwater connection between Cochin and Travancore, which goes a great way as an obstacle in the free intercourse of trade. A tunnel at the cost of three lacs of rupees is about to be constructed, thereby affording an easier and far less expensive mode of conveying articles of produce and travelling; bullock carts and coaches have hitherto been used, to the great disadvantage of merchants and travellers. The Rajah of Cochin was some time ago attacked with paralysis, and the state of his Highness's health is still unsatisfactory. He is under native treatment, and totally declines to avail himself of European medical aid. The native antipathy to European doctors is very great, and it is no wonder that his Highness has his prejudices too. The death at Trevandrum, the capital of the Travancore State, of the young Princess at the age of three months, has caused much mourning and woe throughout the Royal family, more so, as the line of descent is through the female members of the Royal family. The Cochin Sirkar contemplated the formation of all the existing circular orders, regulations, &c., into one code, and having received the sanction of the British resident, Mr. Bullard, to this effect, the work of compilation was entrusted to the second judge of the Zillah Court some weeks ago. When this compilation is completed it will no doubt be one of interest and worth. A great building at Trevandrum for a college is now under construction, the ceremony of laying the first stone of which was attended with great pomp. The Cochin Sirkar has also begun one, and before long it will be completed. The weather here is during the day excessively warm, but at nights when the land breeze sets in, pretty cool and pleasant. There appear symptoms of the coming N. E. monsoons, when the last rains of the year visit us accompanied with thunder and lightning. Some years ago we experienced a very strong gale; a vessel or two riding at anchor on the outer roads were wrecked and other damage to life and property took place.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

PALAMCOTTAH, Nov. 20.—No very heavy rain fell till midnight on Monday, the 15th, and from that time till late on Tuesday night it never ceased to come down in torrents. On Tuesday night the wind blew in sudden squalls, and many large trees were blown down in a few hours, shutting off all communication, except for foot passengers, between Palamcottah and Tinnevely. Notwithstanding the heavy rain up to eleven p.m. on Tuesday the river had not risen, and people retired to rest little expecting the scene of desolation that daylight would disclose. At midnight the river rose, suddenly, quietly, and so rapidly that at daybreak the water reached the crown of the arch of the Sooloochenum bridge, having risen about twenty-five feet. The Superintendent of Police, Captain Trotman, was the first to discover the danger. He was awakened to a sense of his position by his cows taking refuge in the verandah, and found that a few inches rise would place his drawing room floor under water. It was with difficulty that Mrs. Trotman and her children could be carried through the water to a place of safety, and then Captain Trotman and Major Payne, who was likewise roused from sleep, waded through the water above their middles to the Judge's house, which stands on the Palamcottah bank of the river. So noiseless was the rise of the water that though so close to the river no one in the house was aware of the destruction which was to all appearance awaiting it. Hastily lashing chairs upon bamboos, just as the day broke the party left the house. Mrs. Webster and her children on chairs, and Mr. Webster, Major Payne, and Captain Trotman wading through the water, which had, by that time, reached to within half a yard of the lower story, and still seemed to be rising rapidly. The nearness of the house to the edge of the bank of the river caused every one to fear that should the bank be injured by the rush of the water the whole building would subside into the torrent. The Rev. Mr. Sargent's house became a haven of refuge, and glad enough the ladies must have been to get under shelter, for the rain came down in torrents and it was bitterly cold. The splendid bridge across the river was the next to suffer. A crack was reported very early on Wednesday, but great hopes were entertained that the damage was not so serious as it has since proved to be. Day by day the crack has continued to increase, and this morning part of the centre arch has fallen in, and it is said the three middle arches must go, and it is now merely a question of time. The calamity shuts off all communication between Tinnevely and this side of the river, and the distress is great amongst those who have brought their goods for sale into Palamcottah either in country carts or on bullocks, and who now find all return to their homes cut off. The whole town of Tinnevely was three feet under water, and about two hundred houses were either blown down or washed away. Mr. Pennington, the sub-collector, who has just returned from England, was out all day doing all he could for the people, and Dr. Thomson and Captain Trotman must have spent hours in the water. All communication was, and still is, shut off between this and Madras. The Tuticorin road is open again, but the telegraph wires are injured and cannot be used between this and Cochin, as well as between us and Tuticorin and Madras. At the Military lines many fine trees were blown down; all gardens ruined and laid waste—many houses injured in divers ways. Scarcely any boundary walls remain standing. The band-stand is a thing of the past, and many of the Sepoy lines have been destroyed. At one time it was feared that the new buildings at the jail were going, but thanks to the timely exertions of Dr. Thompson and Captain Trotman nothing happened there. The flood subsided as rapidly as it had risen, and by the afternoon every one thought all danger was over. However just as night fell the river rose again as rapidly as before, owing to the bursting of a large tank, and a few more hours of deluge and apprehension succeeded. By daybreak on Thursday the waters had again gone down, and all was sunshine, but uprooted trees, ruined houses, gardens without a vestige of cultivation remaining. Deep cracks on the roads and fences broken down bore witness to the fearful rush of the water and the force of the wind. It is a singular fact that no deaths have been reported as yet, though it is scarcely credible that none have occurred. All public work is stopped. The Court has been closed for days, as no one will attend it. The cutcherries are also deserted from the same cause. It will take years to repair the damage done in a few hours, but the greatest misfortune will be the loss of the splendid bridge which for twenty-five years has been the boast of the district.—Madras Times Correspondent, Nov. 26.

Miscellaneous.

THE GOVERNOR.—His Excellency the Governor and Lady Napier intend leaving Madras for Calcutta on the 4th Dec., and not on the 18th, as previously intimated.

MILITARY.—The British India Steam Navigation Company's steamer Isis has been taken up by the Government of India to convey the 1st Battalion 19th Foot from Madras to Calcutta in time to take part in the reception of his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh.—The Port St. George Gazette contains the appointment of Lieut.-Col. P. B. Roe, H.M.'s 60th Rifles, as adjutant-general, vice Colonel Robertson deceased.—We (Bangalore Spectator) hear that Brigadier-General W. Fenwick, C.B., will succeed to the command of the Mysore Division in room of General F. P. Haines, whose period of command will expire in January, 1870. If this appointment is effected, we do not know a more efficient officer who could be selected as a worthy successor.

LORD NAPIER'S LECTURE.—Lord Napier delivered a lecture on Thursday evening in the Evangelistic-hall on "the Fine Arts in India." There was a very crowded attendance of ladies and gentlemen, and of the native audience their name was "legion." Many persons were obliged to go away, owing to want of room. His Lordship opened by saying that he would treat of the four Arts, Architecture, Painting, Sculpture, and Music. He confined his lecture for the evening to Architecture, upon which he dwelt at considerable length, reserving the consideration of the sister arts for future occasions. In his Lordship's opinion Madras offered a complete epitome of everything that was bad in Architecture. The lecture was an able and exhaustive one, and the audience must have endorsed the opinion of the chairman, Sir Colley Scotland, on it; he felt certain that all present would join him in expressing their grateful acknowledgments to Lord Napier for the able, interesting, instructive, and eloquent discourse which had been delivered. Lord Napier, by lecturing in the hall, had conferred a favour and an honour on the Christian Literary Society, and all present must have deemed it a privilege to have heard the lecture. There were many, no doubt, who, from want of room in the hall, had been deprived of this privilege; but the lecture would doubtless be printed, and they would then have an opportunity of reading it. There was a great deal in the lecture from which the natives could derive much information. The thought Lord Napier had given to the subject, and the clear and forcible manner of which he had dealt with it, gave to the discourse all the qualities in a learned and able essay, a lecture such as would seldom be heard in that hall.—Madras Times, Nov. 29.

FATAL EXPLOSION IN THE FORT.—On Monday morning (22nd November), while the men of the 2-5 Brigade Royal Artillery were practising with the guns on the ramparts of the fort, a serious accident occurred, resulting in the instant death of a gunner—who had only come out of hospital the previous evening. One of the three guns in use burst on the seventh round. Number two and seven of the men on duty with the gun were close by when the explosion occurred. Number seven fired, and as number two, who was on the right side of the cannon, was advancing to prime he was knocked down by a portion of the gun and never rose again, for after a few groans he expired. The gun burst between the first and second reinforcements, and went into two pieces, the split extending to about six feet. The chase, with one of the trunnions, fell upon the gunner, smashing the portions of the body about the pelvis. The larger portion of the cannon, including the breech and a trunnion, was carried up high into the air, almost as high as the steeple of Saint Mary's Church, and, falling about forty paces from the ramparts, sank almost wholly into the ground. People were standing not far away from where the heavy piece of metal fell. The gun which burst was used on Saturday last, nine rounds being fired out of it, and it had been rebushed only a month ago. The body of the deceased gunner was removed by Mr. Titness, an inspector of police, to the dead house of the General Hospital, where an inquest was held the same evening. The remains of the unfortunate gunner, who was only twenty-six years old, were afterwards interred in St. Patrick's Cemetery. The inquiry touching the death of Gunner George Chapman, of the Royal Artillery, was resumed on the evening of Tuesday last by the Coroner. Lieut.-Colonel Irvine was re-examined. He had examined the gun minutely and had found no appearance of a crack. The jury returned the verdict "accidental death caused by the explosion of a sixty-eight pounder gun."—Madras Times.

SEASON REPORT IN COORG.—On the 15th October the Rev. G. Richter, of Mercara, addressed the following report of the season for the third quarter of 1869 to the Secretary to the Madras Agricultural Society:—We have come to the close of as favourable a monsoon as we have enjoyed for many a long year, not, though, on account of the quantity of rain, for the total rainfall since January amounts up to date only to 104 inches 68 cents. in Mercara, but for the absence of those incessant heavy downpours and long continued high winds, so frequent in former years. The monsoon of 1869 was gentle, ample, and continuous, with but occasional sunshine, favouring every kind of cultivation and rendering monsoon life more healthy and enjoyable. *Our coffee prospects are on the whole reassuring, though we have not yet got over the ravages of the borer, which is now again on the wing and demands the utmost attention the superintendents of estates. On the subject of the borer a friend has communicated to me an interesting little fact. In the selections from the records of Mysore he noticed in a report on the "Munzerabad Coffee Estates," written by Mr. H. Stokes some thirty years ago, the following passage:—"In a very dry season many of the coffee trees die and snap off suddenly close to the ground." Who does not recognise in this short statement the ravages of the borer even then, though perhaps not understood or further investigated at the time? The coffee is now ripening fast, but too late for the Ootacamund Exhibition; however, the planters have the satisfaction to know from the valuations of last year's crops that Coorg coffee has a fair reputation in the home market, and fetches a very good price, ranging from seventy to eighty-two shillings per cwt. for A, B, and P, the three favourite letters of the planter's alphabet. The expected crop will however only be partially a good one; those estates which were not benefited by the early showers at the blossoming season suffered a great loss, to be compensated, let us hope, after this fruitless siesta by a double out-turn next year! Some of the estates in the bamboo-district look splendid, and the estates I lately saw down the Sampaji ghat are as good as the most fastidious planter could wish. Such an evident success goes far to dispel the depression which the published affairs of the Carnatic Coffee Company have occasioned, and even that Company need not despair with a reduced field of cultivation! Greater attention being now paid to the cultivation of Cardamoms also by European planters, the information that the Coorg spice is highly valued, and that the last crop sold in the Home market at from 7s. to 8s. per pound may prove interesting. This year's crop, which will be gathered this month, is again very promising. The rich fields throughout Coorg are in a most luxuriant condition, and the Coorgs rejoice at the prospect of an unusually rich harvest.

STATION TALK.

BARODA, Nov. 28.—I perceive my letter of 25th has miscarried, in which I had informed you of the dismissal from office of, the late Prime Minister, Bhoo Sahib. The late statement relative to the dis-bandment of the 26th Regiment now here has caused considerable excitement among the sepoys; but they console themselves with the idea that, as the Madras Commander-in-Chief has succeeded in saving three out of the ten regiments intended to be disbanded in Madras, two consequently may escape in our presidency, viz., Jacob's Rifles and the 25th Regiment. I travelled by train a few days ago, and noticed that little or no damage was done by the late advent of the locusts to the crops between Ahmedabad and Broach; every description of crop looked very flourishing.

BROACH, Nov. 30.—Captain Murray, of the P. and O. service, with Mr. Sowerby, C.E., having successfully completed the buoying of the river, all now anxiously look forward to the reopening of the ferry. In addition to the buoys, which I understand have been so well laid as to be distinguishable at a great distance, a black beacon some thirty feet in height has been erected on the bank of the river, near the village of Umbeta, and is so conspicuous as to be easily seen at a distance of eight or ten miles. I believe it is in contemplation to erect two or more beacons shortly. Now that the channel has been so clearly defined, and the noble old Nerbudda made almost as easily navigable as Bombay Harbour, there is some chance of the ferry becoming more than a mere unremunerative public convenience.

SOUTHERN MAHRATTA COUNTRY, Nov. 27.—At a time when there is news of distress from several parts of India, it is gratifying to be able to tell you that the crops in the Southern Mahratta Country have suffered neither from the scarcity of rain nor the ravages of locusts; but that, on the contrary, a better season has seldom been known. Nevertheless, prices have not fallen as might be expected, being kept up, no doubt, by the exportation of grain to less favoured provinces. Since the departure of General Domville, Colonel Brown, R.A., has been in command of the Belgaum district, but will probably shortly be relieved by General Addison from Poona. General Adams, who has just been brought on the Brigade Staff, being posted to the Poona Brigade. Owing to the number of chaplains absent on furlough and sick leave, it seems likely that one of the chaplains will be withdrawn from Belgaum. In these days of retrenchment any increase to the Ecclesiastical Establishment can hardly be hoped for, but it must have occurred to many how insufficient it is to properly supply the wants of the Presidency. At present Dharwar, Kulladghee, and Kolapore are all visited by the Belgaum chaplain, but it is hoped that a resident missionary of the Church of England may shortly be located at the latter station. It is also in contemplation to build a church at Kolapore. The services being at present held in an unconsecrated building fitted up for the purpose. The Roman Catholic community have at Kolapore, as at many other places, set us an example, and built themselves a small but neat chapel. The proposed site for the church is out of camp limits, and almost beyond a walking distance for ladies from the camp-houses, which is a pity, as the convenience of camp residents, who are considerably in the majority, should be consulted; besides there are equally good sites in camp, and it is a question whether the better plan would not be to build on the foundations of the present buildings; indeed much more than the foundations might be used; for the size and shape it is suitable enough, and funds will scarcely admit of much architectural beauty of design. You have already heard of the projected visit of H. H. the Rajah of Kolapore to England. Should it receive the sanction of Government, as there seems every reason to suppose it will, H.H. will start in March or April next, returning about October. He will be accompanied by Captain West, Assistant Political Agent.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

KHANGAUM RAILWAY.—One of our correspondents from Berar was the other day lamenting that the Khangaum branch railway had not been made over to a contractor, a course which he thought would have produced better progress than now appears. This is an opinion which is in a way to be tested by what we shall hear of as being done departmentally under Major Mead, of the Hyderabad P.W.D. There have been drawbacks met with even in this little line, as there always are; but we think there is good ground for believing that the line will be opened in February instead of by the New Year, as at first was hoped.—Times of India.

DEPARTURES FOR CALCUTTA.—H.E. the Governor left Poonah by a special train at six o'clock on Wednesday morning, the 1st of December, for Bombay, where he embarked on board the Bombay marine steamer Lord Elphinstone for Beypore, en route to Calcutta, to meet his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, on his arrival there on or about the 20th instant. His Excellency takes with him Captain Filgate, military secretary, and Gerald Fitzgerald, Esq., private secretary.—Captains Graham and Straubenzie, aides-de-camp, and Dr. Lowry, Colonel Marriott, and Mr. Gomme, Secretaries to Government, we understand, proceed to Calcutta by rail, via Nagpoor, and will time their departure from Poonah so as to be at Calcutta in time to receive his Excellency the Governor.—Times of India.

THE PERSIAN GULF.—H.M.S. Daphne, Captain Douglas, had, on November 12, been lying at Henjan, in the Persian Gulf, since November 5th, awaiting the arrival of the Nymph and the Hugh Rose, gun-boats; the Daphne took the Clyde up with her. The Nymph, with the Hugh Rose, arrived on November 13th. Colonel Pelly is on board the Daphne, and is very anxious to attack a pirate fort called Deman, near Katiff, on the Arabian side of the Persian Gulf, which is a nest of sea robbers. The place is a most difficult one to approach, as it is built upon a mud flat only just covered at high water, and the smallest of the ships of war could not get nearer than three miles, too great a range to do much harm to a fort. The ships are still awaiting instructions, but it is expected Deman will be destroyed, and that the force will also land and take possession of the town of Manemah, on Bahrein Island. The Dalhousie remains at Muscat to preserve order there.

MILITARY.—We hear from Khundwa, under date 29th November, that the detachments of R.A., consisting of 18 officers, 213 rank and file of 6th and 9th Brigade R.A., and 3 officers 123 men of the 95th Regiment, marched from Mhow on the morning of the 27th November under the command of Colonel Franklin, R.A.; and that her Majesty's 1st Battalion 8th King's Regiment, under the command of Colonel H. C. Woods, and accompanied by Lieut.-Colonel Hobson, Assistant Quartermaster-General Mhow Division, were to march also from Mhow en route to Neemuch on Tuesday, the 30th. The detachment 1st Royals would leave Khundwa by rail for Nagpoor on the 1st December en route for Jhansi, there to join the Headquarters of the regiment on being relieved by the 8th King's at Nusseerabad.—The Scindian has now the pleasure to intimate, upon the authority of a private letter from Poona, that it is not likely any of the Divisional Commands of this Presidency will be abolished, and that the recent report about the Sind Command is simply a canard.—It is rumoured that Quartermaster Elson, 109th Regiment, who recently passed through the station en route for England, is not expected to rejoin his corps; a Paymastership in another regiment being, it is said, awaiting his acceptance.—Sind News.

RAILWAY FROM HOORLEE TO CARWAR.—The Government of India is in communication with the Secretary of State as to the agency by which the survey for the railway from Hoorlee to Carwar is to be carried on. Last spring a staff of engineers, under the superintendence of Mr. Buchanan, was sent out from England with orders to complete the survey in six months, but they arrived too late in the season to effect much in so wild a country. A detailed survey has yet to be made. Whether this is done by the gentlemen who began the work or by others now in the country, is of little consequence, provided that no needless delay is allowed to retard the preparation of complete designs for the line, which will be of the greatest benefit to the trade of the South-west, and will make Carwar in fact a port of considerable importance. At present its value is almost wholly potential. The railway will traverse a difficult country, and, except under conditions of the strictest economy, must be very expensive. To make it a financial success its first cost must be kept as low as possible, and the experience of other countries during the last few years indicates the propriety of making the line on a narrow gauge, and crossing the ghauts by the Fell system, which is used on the Mont Cenis summit railway. It would be an unjustifiable waste of money to make another first-class line over the ghauts on the broad Indian gauge when a cheaper one would carry the traffic just as well.

STATE EXPENDITURE.

Fort William, Nov. 18.—No. 2,479.—From R. H. Hollingbery, Esq., assistant secretary to the Government of India, financial department, to the Officiating Accountant-general, British Burmah.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 3,840, of the 6th ult., and in reply to state that the resolution of this department, No. 3,442, of Sept. 17, 1869, refers to new expenditure sanctioned after the completion of the Budget for a year, and not to expenditure for pay or allowances due under standing rules, which must be passed as a matter of course, and charged to the grant for the department to which the pay or allowance is chargeable.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

Nov. 16.—No. 2,315.—From R. B. Chapman, Esq., Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department, to the Officiating Accountant-general, Madras.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 1,161 of the 7th ult., and, in reply, to state that section XXX. of the rules of June 16, 1868, for the grant of leave of absence to covenanted civil servants, must be held to have been cancelled under the notification of the Government of India No. 2,527, dated Aug. 7 last.

2. Rule XXX. was intended to give such officers as should voluntarily elect the lower minimum of £300 furlough allowance the advantage of the higher maximum of £1,200 in future furlough. This option as to the minimum must be held to have been withdrawn when the maximum was reduced in all cases to £1,000.

Ordered.—That the foregoing letter be published in the Gazette of India, and that copies thereof be forwarded to the other departments of the Government of India, the controller general of accounts, the director general of the Post-office of India, the other accountants general, and the deputy accountants general in independent charge.

Nov. 17.—No. 2,468.—A case having been recently reported to this department in which a public officer in British Burmah, before applying for leave on medical certificate, proceeded to Madras to have the certificate countersigned by a medical board, the Governor general in Council is pleased to notify for general information that when a public officer in any department in British Burmah applies for leave on medical certificate, the certificate countersigned by a medical board, of which the members will be the deputy inspector general of hospitals in that province and the two next senior medical officers at Rangoon, will be sufficient authority for granting the leave permissible under the leave rules, and need not be countersigned by any higher medical authority.

2. The leave may be granted by the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, and reported for confirmation to the Government of India.

GOOD SERVICE PENSIONS.

No. 1,141.—It is hereby announced that, on the recommendation of the Government of India, H.M.'s Government has been pleased to confer good service pensions on the undermentioned officers, with effect from the dates specified:—

Colonel Henry James Stannus, c.b., 20th hussars. Served throughout the campaign in Afghanistan in 1812; present at the forcing of the Kyber Pass, relief of Jellalabad, and action of Mamoo Khail (medal); commanded Sir Hugh Gough's personal escort at the battle of Maharajpore, mentioned in despatch (bronze star); present with the Governor-general's body guard at the battles of Moodkee and Ferozeshuhur, also at Aliwal and Sohraon (medal and three clasps); present at the action of Rannugur, and again commanded Lord Gough's cavalry escort at the battles of Chillianwallah and Guzerat, severely wounded, received wound pension for life (medal and two clasps); services in Guzerat referred to in Lord Gough's despatch; has commanded the Agra brigade since March, 1867. #### TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES TO CHAPLAINS.

Financial Notification, No. 1,653, dated Aug. 7, 1868.—The Governor general in Council is pleased to promulgate the following rules regarding travelling allowances to chaplains:—

The rules will take effect from the 1st day of August, 1869.

I. Travelling allowances at the rate of 8 annas a mile per road, and 3 annas a mile per rail, will be allowed to a chaplain who has already no charge for his joining a station to which he may be appointed, either substantively or officiating, also to a chaplain on his permanent transfer from one appointment to another under the orders of Government, not at his own request. Provided that on return from furlough or any other leave, a chaplain will join his station at his own expense. If his appointment has been changed during his absence, he will draw travelling allowance for the excess distance, if any, between his old and new stations, from the Presidency, at the rates above mentioned.

II. If, while absent on privilege leave, a chaplain is required to perform duty for an absentee at a station other than his own, he will draw travelling allowance at the rate in Rule I. from his own station to that at which he is required to do duty.

III. Travelling allowance at 12 annas a mile by road and 3 annas a mile by rail will be given to a chaplain sent to officiate at other stations, or visiting out-stations, provided he proceeds further than five miles, if in receipt, at his own station, of conveyance allowance, or further than three miles, if not in receipt of that allowance. This rule is applicable to chaplains of the Church of Scotland, clergymen of the Additional Clergy Society, missionaries of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, and the Church Missionary Society and Roman Catholic priests when visiting out-stations.

IV. If any chaplain or other person to whom Rule III. applies obtains a free passage on any railway for visiting railway stations on the line, his travelling allowance by rail will be limited to 1½ anna per mile.

V. A chaplain officiating at a station to which a conveyance allowance is attached, will draw that allowance during his stay at the station.

VI. A chaplain may exchange the mileage admissible under Rule III. for an allowance of Rs. 6 a-day for the period of absence from his principal station; but, should he do so, he will not be entitled to any conveyance allowance under Rule V.

VII. A chaplain in receipt of conveyance allowance for a station will forfeit it when absent from his station on gazetted leave, but not when visiting another station and retaining substantive charge of his own.

Copy of Letter from the Military Department, India, to the Military Department, Bombay, No. 1,401, dated Jan. 29, 1869.

"In reply to your letter, No. 5,923, dated Nov. 27 last, I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of the Right Hon. the Governor in Council, that, in the Presidency, when any necessity arises at an out-station for a Roman Catholic priest to visit the latter, to minister to the British soldier or his family in sickness, the officer commanding the station must address the officer commanding the division or station at which the priest resides, stating clearly the circumstances; when, if the latter officer considers this necessity made out, he authorises the priest's proceeding by the requisition, at the Government expense, by the issue of a division or station order to that effect.

"2. If the journey (or any portion of it) can be performed by rail, a free pass must be given the priest there and back; and, for such portion as must be travelled by dak, &c., the priest has to submit a contingent bill for the sum actually expended, vouched by a certified copy of the division or station order, and the receipt of the Dak Company or person supplying the conveyance.

"3. As in some cases the requisition may be sent by the persons requiring his services direct to the priest, the latter, if he considers it an occasion requiring his attendance, should, on receiving it, at once apply for the order to the officer commanding the station (or division, if he is on the spot,) who must use his own discretion in complying with the application or not.

"4. The dignitaries of the Roman Catholic Church in this Presidency have recently been called on to impress on the priests within their respective jurisdictions the necessity of strictly observing the course above laid down."

Copy of Letter from the Military Department to the Quartermaster-general, No. 942, dated July 28, 1869.

"With reference to your letter, No. 1,163c, dated March 11, 1869, I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., that the provisions of Military Department Letter, No. 1,401, dated Jan. 29, 1869, apply to cases where the presence of a priest is required at an out-station for administering to a single soldier or his family, or other Government servant, in exceptional cases of sickness; whilst the provisions of the Financial Resolution of 1868, No. 1,653, dated Aug. 7, are applicable in all ordinary tours of duty; that is, when the Roman Catholic servants of Government at an out-station are of such a number as to entitle them to the ministrations of a priest, and who not being available on the spot, one is deputed from a neighbouring station under the orders of his ecclesiastical superiors, drawing the mileage rate of a travelling allowance."

SIND RAILWAY.

The twenty-seventh half-yearly general meeting was held on Dec. 22, at the London Tavern. Mr. W. P. Andrew, who was in the chair, referred to the change of policy on the part of the Indian Government in regard to the Indian railways, and contended that the company had a moral claim to the concession for the Indus Valley line from Mooltan to Kotjee, which they had surveyed, and which they could construct cheaper, or certainly as cheap, as the Government or any other agency. He cared not whether it was carried on the one side of the river or the other, but they ought to be allowed to make that necessary link, which was absolutely essential to their prosperity. The rapid and satisfactory manner in which they had constructed the 300 miles of the Delhi Railway, which, with the exception of part of the bridge over the Sutlej, would be open for traffic in March next, proved that if the work was entrusted to their hands it would be done cheaply, quickly, and efficiently. They would be called together in January or February to hear the contract for amalgamating the several undertakings of the company together, when they would see that all their rights and privileges had been preserved. The working expenses of the Sind and Punjab lines had been reduced, and he had no doubt that in the course of a few months the traffic both on the Punjab and Delhi lines would be satisfactory. He concluded by moving the adoption of the report, which has been published. Mr. Williams seconded the motion, and some discussion followed, the principal points dwelt upon being the proposal of the Government to carry out the deficient link in the railway themselves; against which Mr. King urged the directors to use every effort; while Serjeant Tozer held that the Government were right in getting the work done as cheaply as they could, looking at the existing state of Indian finances, and especially in regard to a political line like the Indus Valley, which no one imagined would pay commercially. Other shareholders complained of the high rate of the working and managerial expenses. The chairman briefly replied, explaining some exceptional charges by which the working expenses were swollen, and that the directors' fees remained the same as they were previous to the extension of capital for constructing the Delhi Railway. The report was adopted unanimously. A resolution approving of the steps taken by the directors in endeavouring to obtain the concession for the wanting link was moved by Mr. McDonald, and also carried unanimously.

A MEDAL FOR THE SUTLEJ AND KHOTE KHANGRA CAMPAIGNS.

The following letter has been addressed to a contemporary:—

"SIR,—All officers who served on the Punjab frontier from 1849 to 1863, including those employed in the reduction of certain recusant villages, &c.; also all officers who even landed in Abyssinia, the Crimea, China, and (we presume) New Zealand, are, whether they were actually under fire or not, now rewarded with medals and clasps. On behalf of those who served under fire both in the Sutlej war, and also in the subsequent Hill Campaign of 1846, ending with the reduction of the Punjab, and of the fortress of Khote Khangra, after a two months' siege or blockade, and who, owing to the rigid restrictions then in force, are still undecorated, we venture to submit the following claims for comparison:—

"MEDALS AND CLASPS (FROM 1849).—1. Reduction to obedience of recusant villages in Eusofzye in 1848 (Official Gazette). 2. Destruction of groups of villages at Nova Dund in 1850. 3. Divers other services against recusant villages from 1849 to 1863, under command of divers colonels of regiments. 4. Landing in Abyssinia, China, the Crimea, and (we presume) New Zealand. Many of the above medals are now being prepared for issue, and we claim participation.

"NO MEDALS OR CLASPS (FROM 1846).—1. Service in the Sutlej war under Lord Gough, viz., during the operations subsequent to the battle of Ferozshair, and up to the termination of the campaign, including the defence, under fire, of the fords of the Sutlej, and the passage there in presence of the enemy drawn up to oppose us at daylight (many of us had also witnessed Subraon from our posts). March on Lahore and capture thereof. 2. Subsequent hot weather campaign against the Punjab frontier fortress of Khote Khangra, and capture thereof, with guns, garrison, and stores, under fire, and after a two months' siege or blockade. The above finally resulted in the annexation of the Jullundu and of the Punjab, and may be fairly contrasted with the results of the campaigns for which medals are now granted.

"We, who were thus engaged in the annexation of a great kingdom and the reduction of a strong fortress, submit that we also have claims to a decoration as a memorial to our families that we have served our country during a memorable period of its history. We write on behalf of about a hundred old officers of artillery and infantry (there being no rank and file to reward), and we are perhaps the only members of her Majesty's service who are still unde-corated after service, often under fire, in no less than two important campaigns in a tropical climate.—We are, &c.,

SERVED IN THE ABOVE WARS."

Miscellaneous.

DR. JOHN MUIR, the founder of the Sanscrit Chair in the University of Edinburgh, has increased his original endowment of the chair by an addition of £1,000.

THE JERUSALEM COFFEE-HOUSE.—The friends of Mr. Alexander Miller, who has been connected with the Jerusalem Coffee-house for the last forty-eight years, have presented him with a cheque for over 1,000 guineas, in recognition of the uniformly courteous and obliging disposition he has manifested towards themselves and the subscribers to that institution connected with Eastern shipping.

BOXER CARTRIDGES.—Four complete machines for the manufacture of Boxer's cartridges for breech-loading rifles have been prepared and packed in the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, for the use of the Ordnance Departments at Bombay, Madras, and Calcutta. The packages are being shipped at the Arsenal as fast as facilities will allow, for conveyance to their destination, and on their arrival the machinery will be put together and cartridges made in India in sufficient quantities to meet the regular demand, thus saving the expense of the cost of their carriage from England.

LORD NAPIER AT BIRMINGHAM.—On Wednesday, Dec. 22, Lord Napier of Magdala visited Birmingham and received a flattering reception. He was met at the Great Western Railway Station by the mayor, members of the corporation, and volunteer officers. He was the guest of Lieutenant-Colonel Ratcliff, at Widmington, Edgbaston. In the evening Lord Napier was entertained at dinner at the Great Western Hotel, and at eight o'clock the distribution of prizes to the prize marksmen in the Birmingham Battalion of Rifle Volunteers took place in the Town-hall, Lord Napier handing the prizes to the successful candidates.

GENERAL SIR DAVID CAPON, K.C.B., Colonel of the 106th Regiment (Bombay Light Infantry), whose death has been announced, was born in Bombay, and educated in England, after which he entered the military service of the East India Company in 1809. He served in the expedition against Palampore in 1813, in the Konkan in 1817. He commanded the troops at Aden in 1839, when the place was on two occasions attacked by large bodies of Arabs, and commanded the 1st brigade of the Bombay column army of the Punjab at the siege of Mooltan, in 1848-9, and in the attack on the town; also at the battle of Goojerat, and pursuit of the Sikh army.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The half yearly meeting of this company was held on Dec. 22, at the City Terminus Hotel; Mr. W. Dent in the chair. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, referred to the difficulties with which the company had to contend, owing to the lines as originally laid out having been changed to suit public requirements. The line now open from Lucknow to Cawnpore would not be very remunerative until their whole system was developed, and to attain this object the works of the lines were being vigorously proceeded with. Mr. Reid scolded the resolution, which, after some discussion, was agreed to.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The report of the directors of this company states that steady progress was being made in completing the light unfinished works on the main line. The representations made by the board to the contractors in respect to the chord line had led to their taking energetic measures in view to the early completion of the works. The only incomplete works of any importance on the Jubbulpore line were those at the Jubbulpore Station. The board, acting in complete harmony with the directors of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company, were determined to limit the expenditure on the arrangements at this station to the smallest amount possible consistent with a due regard to the convenience of the public, and the interchange of traffic between the two systems.

NEW STEAMERS FOR THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company have concluded a contract with Messrs. Caird and Co., of Greenock, for the construction of two screw steamers of 3,400 tons and 600-horse power nominal, the engines to be upon what is known as the compound or high and low pressure principle. Messrs. Caird and Co. have already nearly completed one steamer of the same tonnage and character for the service of this company, while similar vessels, the Deccan and Hindustan, built by Messrs. Denny and Co., of Dumbarton, and Messrs. Day, of Southampton, have recently been despatched to India. These additions to the company's fleet represent 17,000 tons and 3,000 nominal horse power.

THE EUROPEAN ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—We are informed by circular that the board of this company have passed a resolution in accordance with the opinion expressed at the general meeting of the shareholders, held on the 18th November, to the effect that the sum of £10,000 shall be forthwith set apart as a special fund to meet guarantee claims as they may arise, and that this sum shall be annually increased till it reaches the amount of £50,000. This resolution, when carried out, will, it is added, place the holders of the General Guarantee Policies of the society in the same position of security as that now occupied by the several departments of the Government, in whose favour a special fund amounting to £32,000 already exists, and to which fund the holders of the General Guaranteed Policies have also a reversionary claim.

MILITARY—The reductions of the British Army in India will probably consist of one regiment of cavalry to be disbanded, one troop to be reduced in each of the remaining ten cavalry regiments; two battalions of infantry to be reduced and sent home without reliefs; two companies in each of the remaining fifty battalions to be reduced. No change is contemplated with regard to the Artillery. —Broad Arrow—In consequence of the reduction of the Imperial forces in India, no cavalry regiment will be sent to that portion of the British Empire in 1870. The 7th Hussars will be brought home, but will not be replaced, the 10th Hussars possibly going out in 1871-72.—Nothing is yet settled with regard to the colonelcy of the 106th Foot, vacant by the death of General Sir David Capon, K.C.C., but it will most probably be filled by the transfer of Lieutenant-General Barlow from the 3rd West India Regiment, which corps, as we stated a few weeks since, will disappear from the Army List in April, 1870.

BRITISH INDIAN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The chairman of the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company has transmitted for publication the annexed letter from the company's engineers, announcing the completion of their cable, to be laid from Suez to Bombay:—"7, Pope's Head-alley, Dec. 13.—Sir,—We beg to report that the manufacture of your cable, 3,600 nautical miles in length, was completed at Greenwich on Saturday last, Dec. 11, and we herewith forward you our final daily return of cable manufactured. The manufacture of the outer covering of this cable was commenced at Greenwich on the 23rd of June last; it has, therefore, been exactly five months and eighteen days in course of manufacture, equal to 147 working days, which gives an average speed of manufacture of 24½ nautical miles per diem. This is probably the greatest average speed of manufacture ever before obtained for such a long and important cable, and it is gratifying to us to be able to state that its electrical condition throughout the entire manufacture has been practically perfect, and we feel that, so far as its mechanical condition is concerned, the cable is well suited for the depth of water and position it is intended for.—Yours faithfully, CLARK and FORDE.—Mr. John Pender, Chairman British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company, 80, Palmerston-buildings."

THE SUPERSESSION OF COLONELS.—The report of the Committee on the Supersession of Colonels question is at length in type. We believe it recommends that the following course should be adopted with reference to future promotions:—"That each colonel on the British Establishment, when promoted to the rank of major-general, should be restored to his relative place, and take his position on the generals' list of the two armies, according to his seniority as colonel; and that the same course should be adopted by means of antedates in the case of the present general officers, whose commissions as colonels bear date on and after the 28th November, 1854; the antedates in no case to carry back pay, or to give a claim to any brevet promotion in the lower ranks. On the question of antedating the commissions, so as to affect the relative position of the present major-generals, we hear that the committee were divided in opinion. The majority contended that no sufficient case of injustice or hardship had been made out to warrant the adoption of any retrospective measure. As regards the service in India, it is said that the committee recommend that the system of the local or so-called "Fane" brevets should be again introduced and made applicable prospectively to both armies in that country; so that whenever any colonel of either army shall become a major-general—except for distinguished service—all colonels in India senior to him would be promoted to the local rank of major-general, so as to preserve their previous seniority. With regard to the main and very difficult question of remedying the case of the great mass of colonels of the British Army, who have been passed over by their juniors in that rank in the Indian Service, the committee are, we believe, opposed to the proposition that all these officers should be at once promoted to be major-generals, without receiving the unattached pay, and be allowed to hold appointments open to them now as colonels. Two of the committee, we believe, dissent from the voice of the majority, that all remedies should be only of a prospective character, and have recommended that such remedies should be applied retrospectively. We understand these dissentients consider that the measures proposed to be carried out will, after all, prove a very inadequate remedy for the injury of which the British colonels have such good cause to complain.—Broad Arrow."

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory. Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, and twelve inches in width or depth.

A French line of Mail Packets leaves Marseilles every fourth Saturday. Postage for Letters and Papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English Mail, via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these Packets must be specially addressed—"By French Mail Packet from Marseilles."

Up to the end of December the dates of despatch from London will be the Thursday evenings, September 30th, October 2nd, November 25th, and December 23rd, and by Supplementary Mails on the morning following.

Supplementary Mails will also be made up at the General Post Office, London, every Saturday morning, via France and Italy to Brindisi, and thence by Italian packet to Alexandria, but should they not reach the latter place in time, the departure of the regular Mails for Suez will not be delayed. The postage of letters will be at the rate of 1s. 4d. for each half-ounce, and of newspapers 4d. for each four ounces.

ALOE FIBRE.—In recent communications to Government on Aloe Fibre, Dr. Mackenzie, Superintendent of the Dharwar Jail, gives the following information on its capabilities and the probability of its remunerative cultivation:—"Major Walker, in his report on aloe fibre, states 'that Dr. Mackenzie has only as yet made mats for verandahs from the fibre;' it is but just to myself to state, that in 1866, as shown by the jail accounts, 50 rupees worth of ropes was made for the use of the iron wells, but that as the demand for matting was far more constant, we adhered to that form of manufacture. As the ropes could not well be calculated as to amount of square feet if made in matting, nor the length or thickness of each set entered in the books, I excluded them in my previous calculations. Matting was made and sold not only for verandahs, but for dining-rooms, bed-rooms, offices, &c., for various houses here, as well as Belgaum, Carwar, &c. Amongst the specimens I had the honour of forwarding to you on the 23rd was one piece thinner and finer than sail cloth, and doubtless by using younger leaves finer still could be made. I know from evidence all round Dharwar, and from the reports of those who know the districts well, that aloe thrives as readily in rocky, dry, poor soil as in one damper and richer; and I fancy that a greater quantity of fibre and of a tougher sort can be extracted from those grown in the former to that in the latter. Although, as shown by Dr. Gray, the aloe is tougher than either jute, hemp, or coir, it will yet be a question of time to determine whether it will not decay sooner than those, if constantly kept damp, and whether after drying it will be again as fit for immersion in water as the others: much will, I should say, depend on the thorough extraction of its juices by fitting machinery. If, as a mercantile speculation, ground has to be bought up, wells sunk, systematic irrigation maintained, and a staff of servants entertained, I would have grave doubts of its success; not but that large quantities of good fibre could be turned out, but as the leaves take some time in coming to maturity, and all on each plant cannot be cut every year, and the plantation would without the aid of machinery very soon be bare, would necessitate constant removals to a distance, or the carriage of the plant, which would be as expensive; but if boundaries, hedges, roadsides, railway embankments, &c., are utilised, no purchase is made of ground or tax paid, while it would be materially to the interests of individuals, railway companies, &c., to keep up a hedge both efficient as such, and remunerative by selling the spare leaves to a company started for the purpose of aloe manufacture. As to the wearing power of the matting, I may add that the mats in daily use by the prisoners since 1866, and the matting covering my verandahs and rooms, laid down in the same year, is still as good apparently as ever, shows no signs of decay or wearing out, and bears to be frequently taken up for the purposes of dusting and shaking." Resolution—"The thanks of Government should be communicated to Dr. Mackenzie for his very interesting communications. The Secretary to the Agri-Horticultural Society has recently been requested to prepare five cwt. of the aloe fibre, and the cost of its production can be compared with the figures given by Dr. Mackenzie, which are based upon the results of convict labour. On the receipt of the fibre from Dr. Gray, these papers, with the accompanying specimens and the previous correspondence on the subject, should be forwarded to the Secretary of State."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL and ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne: I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "109 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

YOUR FRIEND.—This excellent Ointment is so innocent in its nature, so cooling in its properties, and so healing in its action, that it is invaluable in skin diseases, scald head, tetter, tooth-rash, chafings, and the many varieties of rashes and eruptions well known and deeply dreaded in the nursery. Trivial maladies may, by it, be met and conquered at their outset, and all future mischief averted before it has gained hold upon the constitution, and endangered future health. Full directions are wrapped round each pot of Ointment. Holloway's unguent may be applied with the best results in many diseases to which the sufferer silently submits, because the task of investigating them would be both difficult and delicate.

To ensure thorough wholesomeness, their Pickles are all prepared in Pure Malt Vinegar, boiled in Oak Vats, by means of Platinum Steam Coils; and are precisely similar in quality to those supplied by them for use at HER MAJESTY'S TABLE.

C. and B. are Agents for Lea and Perrin's Celebrated Worcestershire Sauce, and are Manufacturers of every description of Oilmen's Stores of the highest quality.

WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINIMENT OF ARNICA.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CONTUSIONS, WEAKNESS of the JOINTS, CHILBLAINS, &c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and coalminers they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC AND LIVER PILLS.

Composed of the Extracts of DANDELION, TURKEY RHUBARB, and JAMAICA GINGER.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPARILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

CURE of COUGH, CHEST, and BRONCHIAL DISORDER, by

DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS,

From Mr. Mallett, Angel Inn, Acle, near Yarmouth:—"For upwards of four years I suffered from a very bad cough and soreness of the chest. I was frequently unable to turn myself in bed, but the Wafers never failed in affording me almost instant relief."

DR. LOCOCK'S WAFERS give immediate relief to ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, and all DISORDERS of the BREATH, THROAT, and LUNGS, and have a pleasant taste.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—

JUDGED BY THE IMMENSE DEMAND, this UNIVERSAL REMEDY now stands the first in public favour and confidence; this result has been acquired by the test of fifty years' experience. These Lozenges may be found on sale in every British colony. For coughs, asthma, and all affections of the throat and chest, they are the most agreeable and efficacious remedy.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1869.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.
W. H. G.,
Apothecary H.M. Indian Medical Service.

To Mr. Thomas Keating.
Prepared and sold in bottles of various sizes.

KEATING'S CHILDREN'S WORM TABLET.—A PURELY VEGETABLE SWEETMEAT, both in appearance and taste, furnishing a most agreeable method of administering a well-known remedy for INTESTINAL or THREAD WORMS.
